

This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Usage guidelines

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize public domain materials and make them widely accessible. Public domain books belong to the public and we are merely their custodians. Nevertheless, this work is expensive, so in order to keep providing this resource, we have taken steps to prevent abuse by commercial parties, including placing technical restrictions on automated querying.

We also ask that you:

- + Make non-commercial use of the files We designed Google Book Search for use by individuals, and we request that you use these files for personal, non-commercial purposes.
- + Refrain from automated querying Do not send automated queries of any sort to Google's system: If you are conducting research on machine translation, optical character recognition or other areas where access to a large amount of text is helpful, please contact us. We encourage the use of public domain materials for these purposes and may be able to help.
- + Maintain attribution The Google "watermark" you see on each file is essential for informing people about this project and helping them find additional materials through Google Book Search. Please do not remove it.
- + Keep it legal Whatever your use, remember that you are responsible for ensuring that what you are doing is legal. Do not assume that just because we believe a book is in the public domain for users in the United States, that the work is also in the public domain for users in other countries. Whether a book is still in copyright varies from country to country, and we can't offer guidance on whether any specific use of any specific book is allowed. Please do not assume that a book's appearance in Google Book Search means it can be used in any manner anywhere in the world. Copyright infringement liability can be quite severe.

About Google Book Search

Google's mission is to organize the world's information and to make it universally accessible and useful. Google Book Search helps readers discover the world's books while helping authors and publishers reach new audiences. You can search through the full text of this book on the web at <http://books.google.com/>

12426.13.3

A

HARVARD COLLEGE LIBRARY

BOUGHT WITH MONEY RECEIVED FROM LIBRARY FINES

CHAUCER FOR SCHOOLS

OPINIONS OF THE PRESS ON CHAUCER FOR SCHOOLS.

'We hail with pleasure the appearance of Mrs. Haweis's "Chaucer for Schools." Her account of "Chaucer the Tale-teller" is certainly the pleasantest, chattiest, and at the same time one of the soundest descriptions of the old master, his life and works and general surroundings, that have ever been written. The chapter cannot be too highly praised.'—ACADEMY.

'For those who have yet to make the acquaintance of the sweet and quaint singer, there could not well be a better book than this. Mrs. Haweis is, of course, an enthusiast, and her enthusiasm is contagious. Her volume ought to be included in all lists of school books—at least, in schools where boys and girls are supposed to be laying the foundations of a liberal education.'

LITERARY WORLD.

'The authoress is in such felicitous harmony with her task, that the young student, who in this way first makes acquaintance with Chaucer, may well through life ever after associate Mrs. Haweis with the rare productions of the father of English poetry.'—SCHOOL BOARD CHRONICLE.

'Unmistakably presents the best means yet provided of introducing young pupils to the study of our first great poet.'—SCOTSMAN.

'In her "Chaucer for Schools" Mrs. Haweis has prepared a great assistance for boys and girls who have to make the acquaintance of the poet. Even grown people, who like their reading made easy for them, will find the book a pleasant companion.'—GUARDIAN.

'The subject has been dealt with in such a full and comprehensive way, that the book must be commended to everyone whose study of early English poetry has been neglected.'—DAILY CHRONICLE.

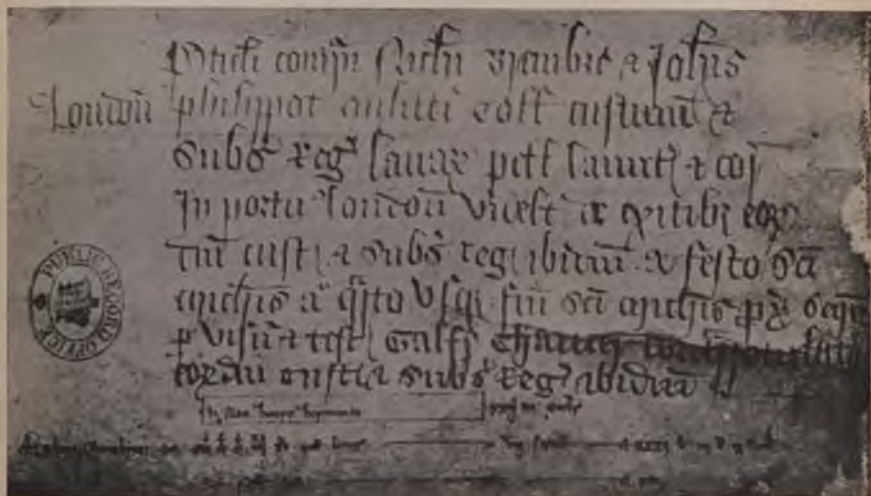

'We venture to think that this happy idea will attract to the study of Chaucer not a few children of a larger growth, who have found Chaucer to be very hard reading, even with the help of a glossary and copious notes. Mrs. Haweis's book displays throughout most excellent and patient workmanship, and it cannot fail to induce many to make themselves more fully acquainted with the writings of the father of English literature.'—E HO,

'The book is a mine of poetic beauty and most scholarly explanation, which deserves a place on the shelves of every school library.'—SCHOOL NEWSPAPER.

'Mrs. Haweis has, by her "Chaucer for Schools," rendered invaluable assistance to those who are anxious to promote the study of English literature in our higher and middle-grade schools. . . . Although this edition of Chaucer has been expressly prepared for school use, it will be of great service to many adult readers.'—SCHOOL GUARDIAN.

GEOFFREY CHAUCER
(From the Drawing by Occleve)

CHAUCER'S AUTOGRAPH

For the first time identified, and reproduced expressly for this Work (Entries of the Customs, bound to be in Chaucer's own hand)

Geoffrey Chaucer's Arms seem to have surmised that the Chau

re of De Waldegrave, differenced. Mr. Walter Rye the banner of this family into Aquitaine.

CHAUCER FOR SCHOOLS

EDITED BY

THE EDITORIAL BOARD OF

THE CHAUCER SOCIETY

OF THE UNIVERSITY OF CHICAGO

CHICAGO

THE UNIVERSITY OF CHICAGO PRESS

1904

THOMAS J. BROWN

CHICAGO

In the name of the Father, the Son, and the Holy Spirit, Amen.
 I, the undersigned, do hereby certify that the within-titled work, entitled "The History of the Christian Church," by the Rev. John H. Stoughton, D.D., is a work of great value and interest, and is well adapted for the use of students of divinity and of the general reader.
 I have examined the manuscript and find it to be a work of great value and interest, and is well adapted for the use of students of divinity and of the general reader.

The undersigned do hereby certify that the within-titled work, entitled "The History of the Christian Church,"

by the Rev. John H. Stoughton, D.D., is a work of great value and interest, and is well adapted for the use of

CHAUCER FOR SCHOOLS

WITH THE STORY OF HIS TIMES AND HIS WORK

BY

MRS H. R. HAWEIS

AUTHOR OF 'CHAUCER FOR CHILDREN' ETC.

A NEW EDITION WITH CORRECTIONS AND ADDITIONS, AND A FRONTISPIECE

LONDON
CHATTO & WINDUS
1899

124 ~~1~~ 6.13.3
2 A

Fine Money

PRINTED BY SPOTTISWOODE AND CO., NEW-STREET SQUARE
LONDON

NOTE BY THE REV. H. R. HAWEIS.

IN MEMORIAM NOVEMBER 24, 1898.

A MELANCHOLY interest must always be associated with this last perfected edition of Chaucer for Schools.

The corrected proofs were brought to my beloved wife on her death-bed. Knowing how near and dear this valuable part of her life-work was to her heart, I held up the proof-sheets before her, and she tried to look at them, but soon said, 'I am too ill to attend to it.'

A few days previously she had turned over the leaves of her illustrated Chaucer for Children, and said, 'It is a great comfort to me that I find nothing here, after thirty years, that I desire to alter—the pictures are all accurate to the minutest detail of furniture and costume—quite correct.'

She never lived to see the publication of this last complete edition of Chaucer for Schools, which she had been preparing and looking forward to for years. I have registered all her notes and additions, to the best of my power—it has been a task of painful and absorbing interest to me—but she could not rest until she knew that it was done.

VIRO SUO

HUGONI REGINALDO HAWEIS

CUI, QUAE ET QUALIS SIT IPSA, ID OMNE DEBET

HUNC LIBRUM

D. D. D.

UXOR GRATA

CONTENTS.

	PAGE
FOREWORDS	xi
GLIMPSSES IN CHAUCER	xv
ACCENT OF CHAUCER	xvi
TABLE OF HISTORICAL EVENTS	xix
PRINCIPAL AUTHORITIES CONSULTED	xxviii
 CHAUCER THE TALE-TELLER:—
CHAUCER'S TIME	1
CHAUCER'S WORK	2
CHAUCER'S HOME	4
CHAUCER'S LONDON	6
CHAUCER'S APPEARANCE	9
CHAUCER'S COURT LIFE	11
CHAUCER'S POSITION	15
CHAUCER'S PROSPERITY	18
CHAUCER'S ADVERSITY	21
CHAUCER'S LIFE-WORK	23
CHAUCER'S POEMS	27
CHAUCER'S SPEECH	30
 CANTERBURY TALES:—
CHAUCER'S PILGRIMS	35
CHAUCER'S PROLOGUE	36
THE KNIGHT'S TALE	50
THE CLERK'S TALE	91
THE MONK'S TALE	116
THE NUN'S PRIEST'S TALE	126
THE MAN OF LAW'S TALE	144
THE PARDONER'S TALE	166
 MINOR POEMS:—
GOOD COUNSEL OF CHAUCER	177
A BALADE OF GENTILNESSE	179
TWO RONDEAUX	180
PROVERBS OF CHAUCER	181
VIRELAI	182
COMPLAINT OF CHAUCER TO HIS PURSE	183
 FRAGMENTS:—
THE DAISY	185
A VISION OF A GARDEN	185
THE SEA-FIGHT.—ANTONY AND CLEOPATRA	187

CHAUCER FOR SCHOOLS

story-telling. The emphasis which the final e gives to many words seems to help to impress the sentences on the memory, the sense being often shorter than the sound. I use the word 'emphasis' in the same sense as one might speak of a crotchet in music, to which you count two, being more emphatic than a quaver, to which you count one.

The difficulties arising from the orthography I have hoped to correct by placing a modernised version side by side with Chaucer's text, which can be learnt by heart, or, better, used for reference only, at choice. When it is once understood that spelling in Chaucer's day was chiefly phonetic, readers will no longer be surprised at finding the same word variously spelt: and confusion of eye or brain is remedied by the familiar spelling close at hand.

I believe that some knowledge of, or at least interest in, the domestic life and manners of the thirteenth and fourteenth centuries would materially help young people in their reading of English history. The political life would often be interpreted by the domestic life, and much of that time which to a young mind forms the dryest portion of history because so unknown, and a mere list of dates and crimes, would then stand out as it really was, glorious and fascinating in its vigour and vivacity, its eager search after knowledge, its enthusiasm for beauty, bravery, and culture.

There is no clearer or safer exponent of the life of the fourteenth century, as far as he describes it, than Geoffrey Chaucer, from whom, I believe, it would be possible to ascertain the state of science in many branches, language, the Church, art, politics, society, and morals to a far fuller extent than has ever been suggested. His mine is but just opened as yet.

Chaucer is, moreover, a thoroughly religious poet, all his merriest stories having a fair moral; even those which are too coarse for modern taste are rather naïve than injurious, and his pages breathe a genuine faith in God, and a passionate sense of the beauty and harmony of the divine work. His Parson's Tale, tampered with and interpolated as it has doubtless been by some orthodox Catholic scribe, is as full of Wicliffism and true Protestant feeling as many other portions of the Canterbury Tales are full of satire against the corruption of the Church: and Chaucer may be said to have striven as hard to propagate with his pen the pith of the new religious views as Albert Dürer strove with his pious pencil, long before Luther sounded the note of victory.

As to the difficulties of understanding Chaucer, they have been greatly overstated. For advanced scholars, and for the mental athletics of the public schools, the editions by Morris, Skeat, and others are recommended, and subscription to the excellent Chaucer Society, published by Trübner & Co., Ludgate Hill, under the direction of Dr. F. J. Furnivall, is more than desirable; but, with a little attention to a very simple general rule, anybody with moderate intelligence and an ear for musical rhythm can enjoy the lines.

In the first place, it must be borne in mind that the e at the end of the old English words was usually a syllable, and must be sounded, as Aprillē, swootē, &c.

In the second, Chaucer, unlike his predecessors and contemporaries, appears to have been particular about his metre. It will be found that, if the final e's are sounded or dropped so as to keep the metre even, and the stress on syllables regulated by the necessities of the rhythm, the lines will be enjoyable and intelligible: though of course this must be regarded as a mere rule of thumb, to be taken with its own risks. Thus:—in the opening lines—

GLOSSARY.

when, showers, sweet	Whan that April le with his schour es swoote
pierced, root	The drought of Marche hath per cēd to the roote bathed, such, liquor	And bath ud eve ry veyne in swich licour flower	Of whiche vertue engen dred is the flour.—(Prologue.)

You see that in those words which I have put in italics the final E must be sounded slightly, for the rhythm's sake.

small birds make	And sma le fow les ma ken me lodie sleep, all	That sle pen al the night with o pen yhe.—(Prologue.)

Again, to quote at random—

lark, messenger	The bu sy lark e mess ager of day, saluteth, her, morning	Salu eth in hire song the mor we gray.—(Knight's Tale.) legs, lean	Ful long e wern his leg gus, and ful lene;
	Al like a staff ther was no calf y-sene.—(Prologue —'Reve.') or in Chaucer's exquisite greeting of the daisy—always	Knelyng alwey til it unclo sēd was small, soft, sweet	Upon the sma le , sof te , swo te gras.—(Legend of Good Women.)

How much of the beauty and natural swing of Chaucer's poetry is lost by translation into modern English, is but too clear when that beauty is once perceived; but I thought some modernisation of the old lines would help the child to catch the sense of the original more readily:

for my own rendering, I can only make the apology that when I commenced my work I did not know it would be impossible to procure suitable modernised versions by eminent poets. Finding that unattainable, I merely endeavoured to render the old version in modern English as closely as was compatible with sense and extreme simplicity; and I do not in any degree pretend to have rendered it in poetry. I have, indeed, invariably rejected a graceful version in favour of closeness to the original whenever one had to be sacrificed.

The beauty of such passages as the death of Arcite is too delicate and evanescent to bear rough handling. But I may here quote some of the lines as an example of the importance of the final e in emphasising certain words with an almost solemn music.

GLOSSARY.

speech, fail	And with that word his speech e fail e gan ; For fro his feete up to his brest was come overtaken	The cold of deth that hadde him o ver nome ;
now, arms	And yet moreo ver in his ar mes twoo gone	The vi tal strength is lost, and al agoo.
without	Only the in tellect, withou ten more,
heart, sick	That dwel led in his her te sik and sore, began to fail, felt death	Gan fayl e when the her te felt e deth .—(Knight's Tale .)

There is hardly anything finer than Chaucer's version of the story of these passionate young men, up to the touching close of Arcite's accident and the beautiful patience of death. In life nothing would have reconciled the almost animal fury of the rivals, but at the last such a resignation comes to Arcite that he gives up Emelye to Palamon with a sublime effort of self-sacrifice. Throughout the whole of the Knight's Tale sounds as of rich organ music seem to peal from the page; throughout the Clerk's Tale one seems to hear strains of infinite sadness echoing the strange outrages imposed on patient Grizel. But without attention to the rhythm half the grace and music is lost, and therefore it is all-important that the scholar be properly taught to preserve it.

I have adhered generally to Morris's text (1866), being both good and popular,¹ only checking it by his Clarendon Press edition, and by notwithstanding its provincial peculiarities, contains many excellent readings, some of which have been adopted in preference to the Harleian MS.' (Preface to Morris's Revised Ed. 1866.) This method I have followed when I have ventured to change a word or sentence, in which case I have, I believe, invariably given my authority.

¹ 'No better MS. of the Canterbury Tales could be found than the Harleian MS. 7334, which is far more uniform and accurate than any other I have examined; it has therefore been selected, and faithfully adhered to throughout, as the text of the present edition. Many clerical errors and corrupt readings have been corrected by collating it, line for line, with the Lansdowne MS. 851, which,

Tyrwhitt, Skeat, Bell, &c., when I conceive force is gained, and I have added a running glossary of such words as are not immediately clear on a level with the line, to disperse any lingering difficulty.

In the pictures for my previous book, Chaucer for Children, I have been careful to preserve the right costumes, colours, and surroundings, for which I have resorted to the MSS. of the time, knowing that a child's mind, unaided by the eye, fails to realise half of what comes through the ear. Children may be encouraged to verify these costumes in the figures upon many tombs and stalls, &c., in old churches, and in old pictures.

In conclusion I must offer my sincere and hearty thanks to many friends for their advice, assistance, and encouragement during my work; amongst them, Mr. Walter Rye and Dr. F. J. Furnivall, to whose kindness, as well as to whose writings for the Chaucer Society, I am enormously indebted.

Whatever may be the shortcomings of the book, and they are doubtless many, I cannot but hope that many young readers of Chaucer's Tales will soon begin to be interested in the picturesque life of the middle ages, and may thus be led to study and appreciate 'The English Homer'¹ by the pages I originally wrote for my own little boy.

GLIMPSES IN CHAUCER.

The reader of so personal and pointed a writer as Chaucer may be sure that in his rhymes there is more than meets the eye: and much that at this distance of time we may fail to see between the lines, but which may nevertheless be there.

Every student has a right to light up the poet's canvas as best he can; and until convincing evidence to the contrary is forthcoming, I shall take the liberty to point out a few things which I believe may have hitherto escaped notice, but which tend greatly to link Chaucer to his time, whilst stimulating our interest in his writings.

If these following suggestions explain and account for several peculiarities unnoticed hitherto, or unexplained, they must be accepted like every other working hypothesis as true until proved untrue, or until a better explanation be found.

I. The well thought out individuality of Chaucer's characters, shewing a knowledge of human nature, Shaksperian as far as it goes, such as Palamon, Arcite, Walter, and many more. (Pp. 90, 114.)

¹ Roger Ascham.

II. Chaucer's practice, in harmony with the mediæval fashion, of introducing portraits, e.g., the probability that the two clearly differentiated characters in the Knight's Tale are not only physically represented by two dummy 'kings,' crowned for flattery's sake or some subtler policy; but that two living men are indicated, whose prominence at the period of the Tale's production rendered it advisable so to portray them. (P. 86.)

III. The high respectability of Chaucer's social position, and the possible influence of Philippa his wife with the powerful Duke of Lancaster, whilst serving his Duchess. (Pp. 14, 17.)

IV. Chaucer was probably shortsighted. (P. 9.)

V. The probably constant connection between Chaucer's works and contemporary events, by which I have dated, of course with a query, several of the as yet undated Canterbury Tales, as the Pardoner's, Clerk's, Parson's, Nun's Priest's, Monk's, Knight's, Man of Law's, and Miller's Tales (see Table of Events, pp. xvii.-xxiii.), and even the origin of his great work in a pilgrimage of his own, when 'Harry Bailey,' mine host, may actually have accompanied the party and suggested tale-telling. All the characters in the Prologue look like photographs: and, as the pictures by Van Eyck, Chaucer's contemporary, are crowded with portraits, Chaucer's works were probably popular through their endless little pointed allusions, personal and political, with double meanings and hints which we cannot now decipher, as much as through their novel form, force and ability. It is impossible while reading any poem by Chaucer with care and vigilance, to doubt that this was so.

ACCENT OF CHAUCER.

The scholar should hear a fragment of Chaucer with the correct pronunciation of his day, of which we give an example below, inadequate, of course, but sufficient for the present purpose. The whole subject is fully investigated in the three first parts of the treatise on Early English Pronunciation, with special reference to Shakspere and Chaucer, by Alexander J. Ellis, F.R.S.

The a is, as in the above languages, pronounced as in âne, appeler, &c. E commonly as in écarté, &c. The final e was probably indistinct, as in German now, habe, werde, &c.—not unlike the a in China: it was lost before a vowel. The final e is still sounded by the French in singing. In old French verse, one finds it as indispensable to the rhythm as in Chaucer,—and as graceful,—hence probably the modern retention of the letter as a syllable in vocal music.

Ou is sounded as the French ou.

I generally as on the Continent, ee: never as we sound it at present.

Ch as in Scotch and German.

I quote the opening lines of the Prologue as the nearest to hand.

Whan that Aprille, with his schowres swoote
The drought of March hath perced to the roote,

And bathud every veyne in swich licour,
Of which vertue engendred is the flour;
Whan Zephirus eek with his swete breethe
Enspirud hath in every holte and heethe
The tendre croppes, and the yonge sonne Hath in the Ram his halfe cours i-ronne,
And smale fowles maken melodie,
That slepen al the night with open yhe,
So priketh hem nature in here corages—&c.

Whan that Aprilla with his shōōrēs sohta
The drōōkht of March hath pairsed to the rohta,

And bahthed ev'ry vīn in sweech licōōr,
Of which vairtū enjendrēd is the flōōr;
Whan Zephirōōs aik with his swaita braitha
Enspeered hath in ev'ry holt and haitha
The tendra croppes, and the yōōnga sōōnna Hath in the Ram his halfa cōōrs i-rōōnna,
And smahla fōōles mahken melodee-a,
That slaipen al the nikht with ohpen ee-a,
So pricketh hem nahtūr in heer corāhges, &c.

It will thus be seen that many of Chaucer's lines end with a dissyllable, instead of a single syllable. Sote, rote, brethe, hethe, &c. (having the final e), are words of two syllables; corages is a word of three, ages rhyming with pilgrimages in the next line. It will also be apparent that some lines are lengthened with a syllable too much for strict metre—a license allowed by the best poets,—which, avoiding as it does any possible approach to a doggerel sound, has a lifting billowy rhythm, and, in fact, takes the place of a 'turn' in music. A few instances will suffice:—

'And though that I no wepne have in this place,'

'Have here my troth, tomorwe I nyl not fayle, Withouten wityng of eny other wight.'

'As any raven fether it schon for blak.'

'A man mot ben a fool other yong or olde.

I think that any one reading these lines twice over as I have roughly indicated will find the accent one not difficult to practise; and the perfect rhythm and ring of the line facilitates matters, as the ear can frequently guide the pronunciation. The lines can scarcely be read too slowly or majestically.

I must not here be understood to imply that difficulties in reading and accentuating Chaucer are chimerical, but only that it is possible to understand and enjoy him without as much difficulty as is commonly supposed. In perusing the whole of Chaucer, there must needs be exceptional readings and accentuation, which in detail only a student of the subject would comprehend or care for.

The rough rule suggested in the preface is a good one, as far as the rhythm goes: as regards the sound, I have given a rough example.

I will quote a fragment again from the Prologue as a second instance:—

Ther was also a nonne, a prioresse, That of hire smylyng was ful symple and coy;

Hire gretteste ooth nas but by Seynte Loy;
And sche was cleped Madame Eglentyne.
Ful wel sche sang the servise devyne,

Ther was ahlsoa a nōōn, a preeoressa,
That of her smeeling was fōōl sin-pland cooy;

Heer graitest ooth nas bōōt bee Si-ent Looy,
And shay was cleppēd Mādam Eglanteena.
Fōōl well shay sang the servicē divinā,

Entuned in hire nose ful semyly ;	Entuned in heer nohsa f88l saimaly ;
And Frensch sche spak ful faire and fetysly,	And French shai spahk f88l f8r and faitisly,
Aftur the scole of Stratford atte Bowe,	Abfter the scohl of Strahtford ahtta Bow-a,
For Frensch of Parys was to hir unknowe.	For French of Pahrees was toh her 88n-know-a.

Observe simpland for simple and: simple being pronounced like a word of one syllable. With the common English pronunciation the lines would not scan. 'Vernicle,' 'Christofre,' 'wimple,' 'chilindre,' 'companionable,' &c., are further instances of this mute e, and may be read as French words,

TABLE OF HISTORICAL EVENTS.

AT HOME.	A.D.	ABROAD.	A.D.
John Chaucer born (father of Poet), his father, Robert le Chaucer, being then one of the collectors in the Port of London of the new customs upon wines granted by the merchants of Aquitaine .	1810	Palestine conquered	1800
Scotch War of Independence: Ban- nockburn	1814	Death of Pope Boniface VIII. Bene- dict XI. succeeds	1808
Robert le Chaucer died (grandfather of Poet)	1824	Robert I. (Bruce) King of Scotland. Wm. Tell's revolt	1806
John Chaucer abducted and forcibly married, aged 14	"	Duns Scotus died	1808
William of Wykeham born	"	Gunpowder adapted to use by Schwarz	1820
Birth of the poet called by Chaucer 'the Moral' Gower, perhaps his tutor. Wycliffe born	1825	Death of Dante	1821
Edward III. crowned	1827	Birth of Agnolo Gaddi the painter .	1824
Birth of the Black Prince	1830	Philip VI., Valois, of France began to reign	1828
House of Commons first began to sit	"	Order of Teutonic knights settled in Prussia	1831
Exports of wool prohibited: foreign clothmakers allowed to settle in England	1836	Death of Giotto, the Florentine painter	1836
John Chaucer (Geoffrey's father) at- tends Edward III. to Flanders .	1838	Sir John Froissart born	1837
Richard Chaucer (Geoffrey's grand- uncle ?) assessed to lend 10 l. (= 100 l.) towards the French war. He married Mary, widow of one Heroun, also relict of Robert, the Poet's grandfather	1840	Simon Boccanegra (first doge of Genoa)	1839
(?) Birth of Geoffrey Chaucer , accord- ing to Dr. F. J. Furnivall's calculation	"	Moors defeated by Alfonso XI. of Castile	1840
Birth of John of Gaunt (Ghent, where he was born)	"	Petrarch crowned at Rome on Easter Day	1841
Marriage between Lionel (Edward III.'s third son), aged 4, and Elizabeth, aged 10	1842	Clement VI. Pope. Boccaccio crowned at the Capitol by Peter the Good	1842
John Chaucer now a vintner in London	"	David II. King of Scotland—11 years a prisoner	"
Birth of Geoffrey Chaucer , accord- ing to his own calculation, vide 1886	1844

TABLE OF HISTORICAL EVENTS.

AT HOME.		ABROAD.
	A.D.		A.D.
Battles of Nevill's Cross and Crécy (former battle celebrated in verse by L. Minot)	1346	Battle of Crécy	1346
Richard Chaucer assessed at 6 l. 13 s. 4 d. towards 8,000 l. given to King (= 65 l. and 30,000 l.)	"	The 'Black Death' began in the kingdom of Cathay (China)	"
Edward III. takes Calais	1347	Rising in Rome. Rienzi 'the patriot'	1347
Richard Chaucer occupies his newly built house in Kerion (Crown) Lane	1348	Civil war in Holland	"
		The Plague of Florence	1348
		1,500,000 Jews massacred in Europe, on suspicion of having poisoned the springs	"
The first great pestilence	1349	Dauphiny annexed to France	1349
John Chaucer is appointed Deputy King's Butler	"	The 'Black Death' in Europe	"
Will of Richard Chaucer; also of his stepson, Thomas Heroun, John's brother. John Chaucer (Heroun's executor) disposes of some of his lands	"	Rienzi's fall and retreat	"
John Chaucer receives (July) a gratuity for bringing Queen Philippa a black palfrey from the Bishop of Salisbury	"
Order of the Garter instituted, 'honi soit qui mal y pense'	"
Poems written on the wars of Edward III. by Lawrence Minot	1352	John II. 'the Good,' King of France	1350
		Peter the Cruel, King of Castile	1352
		Innocent VI. Pope	"
		Public funds (monte) instituted in Italy to relieve the poverty caused by the plague	1353
Sir John Mandeville wrote his Travels in English	1354	Death of Rienzi, 'the traitor'	1354
Poictiers	1356	Battle of Poictiers. King John brought prisoner to London	1356
Wm. of Wykeham clerk of the King's Works in the manors of Henle and Yethampsted	"
Last Age of the Church , by Wiclif.	"
Geoffrey Chaucer a page to Elizabeth, Countess of Ulster (wife of Lionel, Edward III.'s third son)	1357-59
Queen Isabella makes a pilgrimage to Canterbury in June	1358	La Jacquerie in France	1358
Edward III. invades France; Chaucer, aged about 16, 'bears arms,' and, in the retinue of Edward or Lionel, is taken prisoner; ransomed for 16 l. (= 160 l.) after Treaty of Bretigny	1359
John of Gaunt, aged 19, marries Blanche of Lancaster	"
The Duke of Lancaster (Blanche's father) dies. Title granted to John of Gaunt	"	Peace between the English and French at Bretigny	1360
		King John visits shrine at Canterbury on his way to France, July	"
Chaucer probably in Edward III.'s service	1361
Second great pestilence	"
Law pleading for the first time in English	1362	War between Florence and Pisa	1362
Special tournaments lasting 5 days in London: foreign monarchs present (Stow)	"	Urban IV. Pope	"

TABLE OF HISTORICAL EVENTS.

xxi

AT HOME.	A.D.	ABROAD.	A.D.
First publication of Vision of Piers Plowman by Langley . . .	1362
Diet and apparel of each class of the community regulated by statute . . .	1363	Alliance of Peter the Cruel with the Black Prince	1363
Death of Elizabeth of Clarence and Ulster	"
Parliament opened with a speech in English for the first time . . .	"
(?) Chaucer's Complaint to Pity written (his love having rejected him)	"	January. King John returns to England, where he dies suddenly . .	1364
		Charles V. succeeds	"
(?) Chaucer marries about this time . . .	1364-5	Oct. War with France. Du Guesclin taken prisoner by the English, at Auray	"
Philippa Chaucer, damoiselle of the Queen's Chamber, receives pension of 10 marks. Royal gifts at Christmas to Geoffrey Chaucer, the King's squire, and Philippa Chaucer	1366	The King of Cyprus captured Alexandria, noted in The Monk's Tale . . .	1365
Robes ordered to be given to Philippa Chaucer and twelve other ladies of the Queen's Chamber . . .	1367	Hubert van Eyck born, at Maaseyk (founder of the Flemish school of painting)	1366
Thomas Chaucer born (?)	"	The Pope returns to Rome, for the first time since Boniface VIII. . .	1367
Froissart leaves the English Court . .	"
A striking clock set up in Westminster	1368
May 25. Chaucer is Valettus Camere Regis (Yeoman of the King's Chamber); receives 20 marks as life pension for good services to the King	"
Lionel Duke of Clarence and earl of Ulster marries Ioland, daughter of Duke of Milan	"	Flanders passes from French to Burgundian rule	1369
Third great pestilence	1369	Peter de Lusignan, King of Cyprus, assassinated	"
Lionel Duke of Clarence dies	"	Death of Peter the Cruel, King of Castile. Praised by Chaucer in the Monk's Tale	"
Queen Philippa dies	"
Blanche of Lancaster dies	"
Chaucer writes his Book of the Duchess	"
(?) Chaucer writes the Pardoner's Tale (alluding to the pestilence) . .	"
Chaucer attends the King on a second invasion of France, receiving on account of wages and expenses 10 l. from Henry de Wakefield, keeper of the King's Wardrobe, whilst 'equitante de guerre in partibus Francie' in fact, of the Bodyguard	"
Chaucer sent on a royal mission to France	1370	War between England and France . .	1370
Edward III. grants pensions to his late Queen's damoiselles: among them to Philippa Pycard, 100 s. . .	"	Limoges massacre by the Black Prince	"
(?) Birth of Occleve	"	Peace between England and Flemings	"
		Gregory XI. Pope (Urban IV. dies at Avignon)	"
		John van Eyck born at Maaseyk (discoverer of oil-painting, brother of Hubert)	"
John of Gaunt, Duke of Lancaster, marries Constance, elder daughter, and heiress to the Crown, of Peter the Cruel	1371	Battle of Montiel	"

AT HOME.	A.D.	ABROAD.	A.D.
(?) About this time Parliament of Fowls written	1871
Duke of Lancaster grants pension of 10 l. to Philippa Chaucer	1872
Dec. Chaucer employed on a royal and commercial mission to Florence, Pisa, and Genoa: perhaps met Petrarch at Padua	"
Duke of Lancaster invades France	"
(?) Philippa Chaucer resides at the Savoy in attendance on Constance, 'la Reine de Castile' ¹	"
(?) Troilus and Cressida begun (or in 1875, says Dr. Furnivall)	1878	Death of David of Scotland	1878
Nov. Chaucer returns to England	"	Bertrand du Guesclin defeats the English at Civray	"
Death of Sir John Mandeville	"
(?) Birth of Iydgate	"
Chaucer's Life of St. Cecile , afterwards made The Second Nun's Tale	"
William of Wykeham opens Winchester School	"
The Corporation of London granted Chaucer a repairing lease for life of the dwelling house above the gate of Aldgate	1874	Truce between England and France	1874
A pension of a pitcher of wine daily granted to Chaucer	"	Death of Petrarch	"
Chaucer appointed Comptroller of the Customs and subsidies of wools, &c.	"
Lives in Thames Street (quits Duke of Lancaster)	"
(?) Chaucer's Boethius	"
(?) Chaucer's Clerk's Tale ; Prologue alludes to Petrarch's death	1875	Death of Boccaccio	1875
(?) Annelida and Arcite written	"
Nov. Chaucer is appointed the custody of Edmond Staplegate. He receives 104 l. (=1,040 l.) on his marriage	"
Dec. And of William de Solys, an infant, of Solys in Kent	"
(?) Complaint of Mars	"
The Good Parliament	1876	St. Catherine of Siena	1876
Death of Edward the Black Prince	"
Chaucer employed on secret service by the King, with Sir John Burley. He is paid 6 l. 13 s. 4 d. (=66 l.) and Sir John Burley double that sum	"
Chaucer gets a second grant of wine and the fine at the Customs, 71 l. 4 s. 6 d. (?=712 l.)	"
Chaucer sent on missions to Flanders and France	1876-7	The French land in Isle of Wight, and burn several English towns	1877
Grand Shows in London, about Feb. 2	1877
Feb. 12. Chaucer goes on a mission to Flanders with Sir Thomas Percy. Chaucer paid 80 l. (=800 l.)	"

¹ The Duke of Lancaster so describes her in document of June 13, 1374, quoted in Mr. Furnivall's Fore-words.

TABLE OF HISTORICAL EVENTS.

xxiii

AT HOME.	A.D.	ABROAD.	A.D.
Death of Edward III. (June 21).	1377
Richard II. succeeds, aged 11, and nominates Elizabeth Chaucer nun in St. Helen's, London .	"
William of Wykeham, who had been banished 20 miles from Court, restored, July 31	"
Langley, living in London, publishes his second version of his Vision of Piers Plowman	"
Jan. 16. Chaucer goes on a mission to France to negotiate for the King's marriage with Mary of France. He is Richard II.'s esquire	1378	Urban VI. Pope Clement VII. Antipope	1378
April. Chaucer's grant of wine commuted to annuity of 20 marks (13 l. 4 s.) = 135 l. ?	"
May. Chaucer sent to Lombardy with Sir Edward Berkeley to treat with Bernardo Visconti, Lord of Milan, &c. Chaucer paid 66 l. 13 s. 4 d. (670 l.), and Berkeley double, for this service	"
Wiclif condemned by Papal Bull	"
Wiclif issues his translation of the Bible into English	"
(?) Parson's Tale , full of Wicliffism, begun about this time	"
Missions to France and Lombardy C. received 56 l. 13 s. 4 d. (= 560 l.)	1379	John I. King of Castile	1379
William of Wykeham begins to build St. Mary's College, Oxford	"
June 1379 to June 1380: Chaucer's suit against Cecilia Chaucunpaign	1380	Charles VI. of France. Afterwards defeated at Agincourt. Cards invented to amuse him	1380
Jan. 1. Philippa Chaucer receives a silver-gilt cup and cover from Duke of Lancaster	"	Persia invaded by Timour	"
Poll-tax of 12 d. levied upon all persons above fifteen years of age	"	Death of Bertrand du Guesclin, buried in St. Denys	"
Jan. 1. Philippa Chaucer receives a silver-gilt cup and cover from Duke of Lancaster	"	Thomas à Kempis born at Kemp, near Cologne	"
Chaucer receives his wife's pension of 10 marks	1381	Lorenzo Ghiberti, the Florentine sculptor, born	1381
March 12. Chaucer's son Lewis born Duke of Lancaster pays for Elizabeth Chaucer's noviciate in Abbey of Barking, 51 l. 8 s. 2 d. = 520 l.	"
Wat Tyler's Rebellion	"
Savoy Palace destroyed	"
(?) Nun's Priest's Tale written, with an allusion to 'Jack Straw'	"
Jan. 1. Philippa gets a silver-gilt cup and cover from Duke of Lancaster	1382
Chaucer Comptroller of Petty Customs	"
Archbishop Courtenay tries to pass the Bill against heretics (Wiclif master of Ball. Coll., Oxford)	"
Richard II. marries Anne of Bohemia	"
(?) Troilus and Cressida finished, and sent to Gower and Strode	"

TABLE OF HISTORICAL EVENTS.

AT HOME.	A.D.	ABROAD.	A.D.
Lines to Adam Scrivener alluding to Troilus	1383	John I. (the Bastard, and the Good), King of Portugal	1383
Chaucer, jointly with two others, receives for special assiduity at the Customs 4 l. 13 s. 4 d. = 470 l.	"
Death of Wiclif, the Reformer	1384
Nov. Chaucer allowed to be absent for one month on his own affairs	"
(?) Chaucer's House of Fame written	"	Bernabo Visconti, Duke of Milan, and 'scourge of Lombardy,' deposed by his nephew, died in prison	1385
Feb. 17 Chaucer is allowed to have a deputy at the Customs	1385
Ghent lost	"
(?) Legend of Good Women written and sent by Chaucer to Queen Anne at Shene	1386	Spain invaded by us	1386
(?) Monk's Tale written, with an allusion to Bernabo Visconti, Duke of Milan	"	Donatello, the Florentine sculptor, born	"
Duke of Lancaster invades Spain	"
Tournament in Smithfield (vide Stow)	"
Chaucer sits in Parliament (1 month) as Knight of the Shire for Kent. Votes for the Duke of Lancaster	"
He and his colleagues are allowed 24 l. 9 s. (= 245 l.), or 8 s. a day for 61 days, for their expenses to and fro	"
The Duke of Gloucester and his council prevail	"
Chaucer is entered as 'age de xl. annees et plus, armez de xxvii. ans,' as witness for Richard Lord Scrope	"
Commission of Enquiry instituted to examine the state of subsidies and customs	"
Chaucer dismissed from his two offices	"
Chaucer's Balade of Truth , or 'Good Counsel'	"
Chaucer writes some of his Canterbury Tales — ? The Knight's Tale	1387	Birth of Fra Angelico da Fiesole, monk and painter, who refused the Archbishopric of Florence	1387
[Did Chaucer make a pilgrimage to Canterbury this year, which suggested his great work ?]		Conversion of the Lithuanians	"
Chaucer receives his own and wife's pensions	"
(?) Chaucer's wife dies this summer	"
Chaucer is appointed Clerk of the King's Works at Windsor	"
And at Westminster, &c., at 2 s. a day (with perquisites, no doubt), and with a deputy (= 400 l. a year ?)	1388	Battle of Otterburn (Chevy Chase)	1388
(?) Prologue to Canterbury Tales and Reeve's Tale . (?) Moder of God	"
May 1. The grants of his two pensions of 20 marks each are cancelled by Chaucer's own request, and assigned to John Scalby	"
Richard II. insists on governing his own realm	1389	Boniface IX. Pope	1389

TABLE OF HISTORICAL EVENTS.

xxv

AT HOME.	A.D.	ABROAD.	A.D.
March. Chaucer is deputed to repair Thames banks by Greenwich . . .	1890	Victory of the Swiss over Austrians at Nâfels . . .	1889
Erects scaffolding for the King and Queen to see the jousts in Smithfield in May . . .	"	Restoration of the Greek language in Italy by Manuel Chrysolaras . .	1890
July. Chaucer is ordered to repair St. George's Chapel, Windsor, which is falling . . .	"	The Black Douglas murdered . .	"
(?) Man of Law's Tale (much reviling Saracens) . . .	"	The French besiege 'the town of Africa,' July 22, and the Saracens on demanding Why? are told, 'because they slew Jesus Christ.' They laugh heartily, pointing out that was done by the Jews. Siege progresses . .	"
September. Chaucer is robbed of 20 l. 'near the foule Oak.' The King releases him of the sum . .	"
January. Is allowed to appoint a deputy for his work at Westminster and Tower of London .	1891	Robert, son of King David, ascends throne of Scotland . . .	1891
Stage-plays by the parish clerks of London in Smithfield . . .	"
(?) Miller's Tale written . . .	"
June. The King's writ informs Chaucer that a successor is appointed as Clerk of Works, named John Gedney . . .	"
July. The King's writ forbids Chaucer to interfere with Gedney. Chaucer hands over dead stock and tools to him . . .	"
Chaucer bankrupt, sued by Isabella Bukholt for 14 l. (=140 l.); the sheriff's return is nichil habet .	"
Chaucer is appointed Joint Substitutionary Forester of North Petherton, Somersetshire, by the Earl of March . . .	"
Chaucer writes a Treatise on the Astrolabe for little Lewis Chaucer . . .	"
(?) Chaucer's Complaint of Venus .	1892-8
Chaucer receives his pension as 'late Clerk of the Works' in 1892 and Gower's Confessio Amantis written .	1898
Chaucer (living at Greenwich) writes Envoy to Scogan , asking him to intercede for him 'where it may fructify:' they are both 'hoar and round of shape' . . .	"
Duke of Lancaster (aged 54) marries Lady Swynford, sister of Chaucer's supposed wife . . .	1894	Benedict, called XIII., Antipope at Avignon . . .	1894
A new pension of 20 l. granted to Chaucer (=200 l.) . . .	"	Discord in Genoa: many doges appointed . . .	"
Queen Anne dies at Shene, Surrey. Richard curses the place, and demolishes the palace . . .	"	Henry 'the Navigator,' fourth son of John I., born at Oporto—fore-runner of Columbus . . .	"
(?) Chaucer writes Prologue to Man of Law's Tale , containing a 'hit' at Gower and enumerating some of his own works . . .	"
Richard II. makes a pilgrimage to Canterbury, where Sir J. Froissart meets him, and presents him with a splendid copy of his own poems . . .	1895
Chaucer writes Envoy to Bukton . .	"

AT HOME.	A.D.	ABROAD.	A.D.
Persecution of Lollards (Wiclif's followers)	1895
Chaucer is attorney of Gregory Ballard, to receive seisin of certain lands in Kent	"
Richard II. marries Isabella of France, aged 7	1896	Battle of Nicopolis	1896
Plays at Clerkenwell by parish clerks	1897	Denmark, Norway, and Sweden united into one kingdom	1397
Richard II. banishes Henry of Derby, John of Gaunt's son, who is too popular: seizes his inheritance	"	Union of Calmar	"
Some of Chaucer's minor poems written. He obtains numerous loans on his pensions at this time	"
Chaucer sends his Balade to King Richard	"	The Mogul Tartars under Timour (or Tamerlane) conquer Hindustan	1398
Chaucer receives grant of a tun of wine a year	1898
Chaucer gets letters of protection against enemies suing him, from Richard II. He is still described formally as 'our beloved Esquire.' About this time Thomas Chaucer is appointed Chief Butler to Richard II. (Rot. Pat. 12, Henry IV.)	"
Chaucer is appointed by the Countess of March 'sole substitutionary Forester' of North Petherton	"
Chaucer gets continual small loans on his pensions during these two years	"
Death of the Duke of Lancaster, Feb. 23	1399	Persia ravaged by Timour	1399
Thomas Chaucer receives pension, 20 marks, in lieu of offices granted him by Duke of Lancaster	"
Richard II. lands in Ireland. Henry of Derby returns	"
Henry of Derby forces Richard to abdicate, and is crowned as Henry IV.	"
Agnes Chaucer one of the domiciles at Henry's coronation: with a certain Joan Swynford, ? her cousin	"
Chaucer sends Henry IV. his poem, To my Empty Purse	"
Chaucer's pension doubled and more, 26 l. 18 s. 4 d. (about 260 l.)	"
Chaucer takes a house in Westminster on a lease of 53 years. Rent 2 l. 18 s. 4 d. (about 20 l.)	"
Thomas Chaucer made Constable of Wallingford Castle, &c. = 40 l. a year (= 400 l. now)	"
Richard II. dies, probably murdered. (?) Parson's Tale finished	1400	Death of Froissart about this time ?	1400
June. Thomas Chaucer styled the King's Squire, with annuities	"	Birth of Luca della Robbia, the Florentine sculptor	"
Oct. 25. Chaucer dies (according to tombstone), and is buried in Westminster Abbey	"

TABLE OF HISTORICAL EVENTS.

xxvii

AT HOME.	A.D.	ABROAD.	A.D.
(Frequent subsequent notices of Thomas Chaucer. Fairfax MS. 16 Bod. Lib. contains poems by him. In 1402 Henry, Prince of Wales, wrote to his father, Hen. IV., concerning 'your humble liegeman my cousin Chaucer,' Facsimiles of National MSS. , Longmans.)

The dates of the three great plagues are given in the Lansdowne MSS., No. 863, fo. 147 b.

PRINCIPAL AUTHORITIES CONSULTED IN THIS BOOK.

- Sir S. Meyrick, 'Antient Armour.'
Lacroix, 'Manners, Customs, and Dress during the Middle Ages,' &c., &c.
Skeat, 'Chaucer,' &c.
Skeat, 'The Vision of Piers the Plowman.'
Morris, 'Chaucer' (Aldine edition), 1866, and 'Chaucer' (Clarendon Press), 1874.
Tyrwhitt's 'Chaucer.'
Bell's edition of 'Chaucer's Poetical Works.'
Wright, 'Domestic Manners during the Middle Ages,' and 'Womankind in Western Europe.'
Froissart's 'Chronicles.'
Furnivall, 'Babes's Book,' and 'Trial Forewords' (Chaucer Society), &c.
'Arthur of Britayn.' Six-Text Edition of Chaucer's 'Canterbury Tales.'
A. Ward, 'Chaucer.'
Le Grand, 'Fabliaux et Contes du XII^e et du XIII^e Siècle,' 1781.
Barbazan, 'Fabliaux et Contes,' 1808.

CHAUCER

THE TALE-TELLER.

CHAUCER'S TIME.

IF we wish to enjoy the celebrated Tales of Geoffrey Chaucer we must first know something about the man who made them, the time at which

ERRATA

Page 52, note,	p. 33, should be	p. 37
" 57, note 1, p. 66,	"	p. 70
" 63, note 1, p. 33,	"	p. 37
" 64, note 2, p. 177,	"	p. 180
" 73, note, p. 53,	"	p. 57
" 76, note 3, p. 66,	"	p. 70
" 78, note 1, p. 70,	"	p. 74

and lived through a very eventful Continental history. Consider what was going on in Chaucer's day. Edward III. was on the throne, defying the Pope and holding vast possessions in France. Chivalry, or the science of knighthood, was at its culminating point; the position of women for the first time regarded as important. Gothic art, notably architecture, had reached its full beauty. The culture and refinements of Italy (then in her zenith of learning and power, ahead of all the rest of Europe, and commencing the Renaissance movement) were flowing into England through many channels, as history shows, such as the Church, an extensive commerce, and the rising independence of thought.

Great names were flourishing in all countries. Petrarch, Boccaccio, and Rienzi were living in Italy. Bertrand Du Guesclin, the mightiest of French warriors, was Constable of France. Froissart was writing his 'Chronicles.' Switzerland had just won independence under William

PRINCIPAL AUTHORITIES CONSULTED IN THIS BOOK

Barbazan, 'Fabliaux et Contes,' 1898.

CHAUCER

THE TALE-TELLER.

CHAUCER'S TIME.

IF we wish to enjoy the celebrated Tales of Geoffrey Chaucer we must first know something about the man who made them, the time at which he lived, and the language which he spoke.

As it is largely owing to Chaucer that we speak English instead of French, or Latin, or a jargon, we really ought to read some of his writings, which are certainly amusing enough to repay the little trouble of mastering the quaint old English spelling, together with certain words which have passed out of use.

Besides, Chaucer in his Tales gives us, perhaps, a better idea of old English manners and customs than any half-dozen other early chroniclers put together. An acquaintance with them will throw light on both the cause and the course of divers historical events, and show us, like so many distant landmarks along a road we have traversed, how far five succeeding centuries have brought us on our way.

↓ Chaucer dwelt in England 500 years ago: he was born about 1340, and lived through a very remarkable period in English as well as Continental history. Consider what was going on in Chaucer's day. Edward III. was on the throne, defying the Pope and holding vast possessions in France. Chivalry, or the science of knighthood, was at its culminating point; the position of women for the first time regarded as important. Gothic art, notably architecture, had reached its full beauty. The culture and refinements of Italy (then in her zenith of learning and power, ahead of all the rest of Europe, and commencing the Renaissance movement) were flowing into England through many channels, as history shows, such as the Church, an extensive commerce, and the rising independence of thought.

Great names were flourishing in all countries. Petrarch, Boccaccio, and Rienzi were living in Italy. Bertrand Du Guesclin, the mightiest of French warriors, was Constable of France. Froissart was writing his 'Chronicles.' Switzerland had just won independence under William Tell. Dante and Giotto were but just dead, and the Gaddis were carrying on Giotto's work on the superb façade of Florence Cathedral. The Van Eycks were discovering oil-painting in their Maaseyk garden. Fra Angelico was a babe. Cannons and clocks were just coming into use, and the first notes of Protestantism were being sounded by the 'Lollards,' Wyclif and John Ball, the 'mad priest of Kent.' What a glorious time rises up as we review these and many more illustrious names of the fourteenth century, among which Chaucer's name is one of the greatest!

The reign of Edward III. was marked by the great progress made in law, and the institution of trial by jury. Many of the new laws showed the increasing dislike of Englishmen to being domineered over by the Pope, though of course England was then a Roman Catholic country; and an edict, ordaining that legal proceedings should be carried on in the native tongue, instead of French and Latin, proves how an Englishman always likes to know what he is about, instead of being led along in the dark!

CHAUCER'S WORK.

At that time there were of course no printed books, no newspapers, and no 'reading public.' A few people could read, and their books were all written by hand, chiefly in the monasteries, where the monks daintily illuminated the vellum pages with gold and gay pictures. This made books very costly luxuries; so that only the best part, the 'cream' of religious, romantic, and scientific lore, was put into books, and such books were largely read aloud by those who could read to those who could not. Telling stories was naturally a common pastime, and a thoroughly good story-teller was as popular as is a good singer or musician now.

Chaucer put many of the current legends and romances into verse so graceful and subtle that the common versions of the stories were easily driven out of the field. Though, like Shakspeare, he did not invent most of the stories he wrote, he paid (as Coleridge says) 'that usurious interest which genius always pays for borrowing.'

His own wise and witty thoughts and tender touches which he mingled with his story are the original part, the points which make his value: and just as the artists of the old painted windows depicted their saints in the ordinary costume of the day, so Chaucer dressed up the characters of old myths and legends in the habits of his own time. Many personal allusions which we can hardly trace now, and allusions to public events and well-known places and habits, helped to make his poems peculiarly amusing and suggestive, at the time, both to Court-folk and the common people, so that countless copies of his writings were made during his life as well as after. This localising habit of his adds of course to the historical interest of his works.

So strongly did his poems influence the language spoken in England, and indeed the whole structure of English literature, that he was called by Occleve (his contemporary) 'the finder of our fair language,' by Roger Ascham 'the English Homer,' by Spenser 'the pure wellhead of poetry,' and 'the well of English undefiled.'

And that is what I meant by saying that we are greatly indebted to Chaucer for our English language; because, had he chosen to write in a more fashionable tongue, his works were remarkable enough to make it popular, whatever it was, and at that transition time, any writer or speaker of genius might have tilted the balance.

For in Chaucer's day there was actually no national language, no national literature: English consisting of so many dialects, each having its own songs and stories intelligible to comparatively few; and the Court and educated classes still chiefly adhering to Norman-French for both speaking and writing, and to Latin for formal use.

Chaucer, who wrote for the whole people, chose the richest of the English dialects, which was that spoken by London people, at a time when English was just regaining supremacy over French, and the conquerors and conquered were settling down into one nation. He polished this dialect by his knowledge of the classic and other languages, and made it for the first time ductile and musical, and the form of English adopted by Chaucer laid the foundation of our present National Tongue.

In this new and purified dialect he not only contrived to express the complex and seething thoughts of all classes, and describe their habits, with a skill and smoothness unprecedented except in the classics until then; he introduced metre, hitherto almost unknown in English, in a number of graceful changes: and whilst thus reclothing old stories and bringing them within reach of all readers, he dealt hard hits at the corruptions of society and the Church, and veiled many a much-needed warning under the cloak of jest.

It is difficult to realise the importance of Chaucer's work till we understand that no country then possessed any literature worthy of the name, save in the dead languages. Italy herself had none till Dante wrote, and he, like Petrarch and Boccaccio, was quite a recent arrival: and the same age which developed in Italy those three towering figures developed in England the equally grand figure of Geoffrey Chaucer, whilst the fuller expansion of influences then in the germ favoured the rise of that other giant of whom he was the forerunner by 200 years, William Shakspeare.

Chaucer is, in fact, the first, and in one sense the greatest, of English poets. His knowledge of life, his breadth of sympathy with all classes of people and all modes of thought, his inexhaustible fancy, and his consummate art place him intellectually on a level with Shakspeare; and we must remember that without the first great man the second might have never existed. Moreover, though Shakspeare claims to have founded our modern drama, Chaucer founded the whole fabric of English poetic literature, and there is no doubt, so dramatic are many of his poems, that had a secular drama¹ been called for in his day, Chaucer would have been a dramatist.

CHAUCER'S HOME.

If we could suddenly spring back into Chaucer's England, we should find a very different world from ours. Very different was the dress, and the language too: far less luxurious the mode of life, even among rich and noble persons: one might fancy they were much less comfortable, but they were satisfied, as they did not miss refinements which they had never dreamed of. The poor were infinitely worse off than our poor, worse fed, and ill protected by the laws. The middle class was just coming into existence.

Improving as their condition was, people had no carpets in their rooms—nay even in the King's palace. Very few were rich enough to have glass windows. A bed (much less a bed-room) all to one's self—or a dinner-plate, tankard, or even chair, for one's own sole use, was quite unheard of. There was no paper on the walls, for paper was not invented; no pictures, as we understand them; as for sofas and spring-seats, gas, duplex lamps, fire-stoves and properly constructed chimneys, and a hundred other luxuries which we regard as necessaries—they were unknown.

The seats were chiefly benches ranged against the wall. Sometimes a chair, like a pew, made to hold several persons, was brought to do honour to a visitor, but it was a rare luxury. Every big room had its daïs, like the great halls in the Universities, and its Chair for the Master, or the teacher (the technical term remains); and the fire was usually in the middle of the floor.

The houses in towns were chiefly of timber. Most rooms had blank walls of stone, wood, or plaster and brick; in rich houses they were wainscotted, or coloured to imitate a curtain, and here or there, behind the place of honour, a curtain itself furnished the wall, or tapestry, pictures made in needlework such as we see in museums. This was put up on special occasions and taken down at will. Such hangings, or fresco paintings, either mere stripes of colour, or careful pictures from historical events, were the only coverings for walls in Chaucer's time, in lieu of the many ornaments, such as mirrors, pictures, brackets, which cover ours.

¹ Plays were then entirely in the hands of the Church, as they are now entirely outside it: they were religious exercises, all drawn from Bible subjects, and played by ecclesiastical officials.

The rooms which Chaucer lived in were probably like those of every-one else. They had bare walls, stencilled or painted, or hung with tapestries, here and there, a bare floor, strewn with rushes, which must have looked more like a stable than a sitting-room. But the rushes were better than nothing; they kept the feet warm as our carpets do, though they were very untidy and by no means always very clean.

Chaucer's dinner or breakfast may also be imagined. At meals, he did not go to a big table as we do, the table came to him. A couple of trestles or stands were brought, and a board laid across them (we still occasionally speak of 'the festive board'), and over the board a cloth creased in ornamental folds, as waiters sometimes still crease cloths in patterns in country inns. On the cloth the salt-cellar was placed, to divide the upper from the lower or inferior end of the table. The servants who dined with the 'quality,' sat 'below the salt,' their superiors 'above the salt.' All the guests sat on one side of the table, the waiters stood at the other and served across the board. There was no such thing as coffee or tea. People had meat, and beer, and wine, for breakfast, dinner, and supper all alike. They helped themselves from the common dish, and ate with their fingers and pocket knives, as dinner knives and forks were not invented; and it was thought a sign of good breeding to have clean hands and nails, to wipe the mouth on the sleeve before drinking when the cup was passed down, and not to spit on the table!¹ Observe what Chaucer says of the finikin Prioress!

Plates there were none. But large flat cakes of bread called trenchers (hence our word for a large plate) were used instead, and when the meat was eaten off them, they were given to the poor, for being full of the gravy which had soaked into them, they were too valuable to throw away. When all had finished eating, the biggest bones were thrown on the floor for the dogs, the small ones left on the cloth, and the servants lifted off the board, then removed the trestles, and carried everything away.

At great dinners, such as Chaucer was present at often enough in the King's palace, the courses were numerous, and the joints large. Small animals, and birds even as big as swans and peacocks, were cooked whole, and plumed as in life. Between each course an ornamental dish called a 'subtlety,' was placed on the table to amuse the guests, made like a castle, ship, or animal—probably it often suggested the events of the day and bore a double meaning. After dinner fragrant water and a towel were brought to cleanse the hands of those 'that sat at meat'—and very necessary too. The favourite dishes were odd spiced conglomerations, artificially coloured and scented with saffron, cochineal, &c. Our mince pies, marvellous compound of meat, plums, and spice. — last relic of mediæval 'made dishes.' The common dinner hour was eleven or twelve o'clock in the day. People rose and retired with the birds then, for candles were too smoky and ill-smelling, as well as too costly, to make it worth while to use them very much. Chaucer often speaks of rising as soon as day broke.

¹ The Boke of Curtasye, Sloane MS.⁴ 1986 Brit. Mus., about 1.

CHAUCER'S LONDON.

Chaucer lived in London. Whether he was born there or at Lynn in Norfolk, with which city and county his family were connected, is not known; but as his father, John Chaucer, was a vintner in Thames Street, London, in 1342, it is probable that he was.¹ The traditional date of his birth is 1328—and I respect tradition: but as in 1386 he described himself as 'over forty, having borne arms for 27 years,' he was probably born in 1343, or early in 1344. All that is truly known of his family and belongings is indicated in the Table of Events, under the respective dates. Whether he was educated at Oxford or Cambridge, there is no record to show; but there is in his poems 'local colour' which points to a residence at both Universities, and men went up then at the age of thirteen. A year at each would have left him free at fifteen to enter on the training for squire. We may imagine his schooldays, perhaps at the old St. Paul's Cathedral School, and nearest Thames Street of the good London schools; Westminster School being afar out across the fields, beyond the airy suburb called the Strand, and beyond the rural village of Charing Cross. The only other important school was in Bermondsey, Southwark, attached to the monastery of St. Saviour. We may suppose he joined in all the riots between the scholars of Paul's and Anthony's (another big school), wherein the two factions called each other severally Anthony pigs and Paul's pigeons,² and troubled the streets and passengers by their blows with satchels full of books—unmannerly little rascals. Schoolboys were encouraged to provide birds for annual cock-fights, a practice, by the bye, not extinct in Westminster School in the last century. There was a cockpit, among others, in Chaucer's day, 'at Whitehall—a sort of fourteenth century 'Lord's' or Hurlingham—and such sports took the place afterwards occupied by cricket and football. On holidays he may have fished for eels in the Thames, which he speaks

¹ 'In the reign of Henry IV. the young Prince Henry, Thomas, Duke of Clarence, John, Duke of Bedford, and Humfrey, Duke of Gloucester, being at supper among the merchants of London in the Vintry, Henry Scogan sent to them a ballad.' 'The successors of those vintners and winedrawers that retailed by the gallons, pottle, quart, and pint, were all incorporated by the name of winetunners in the reign of Edward III.' [Stowe, Vintry Ward.] The Chaucers are never mentioned as winetunners.

² Because St. Anthony was figured with a pig, and pigeons were bred in Paul's Church.

of 'stamping for' (House of Fame), or tended bees, whose habits he well knows, in some garden behind the house, or gone bird's-nesting outside the city where 'roke's nests' were so many on the trees, or watched the grand shows in Smithfield and London streets, which formed the only popular amusement before theatres, museums, and galleries existed. He may have seen, if not joined in, the rough water games and wrestlings which took place on holidays on the 'great water' at Smithfield, or on the Old Bourne (Holborn) or Bourne of Mary (Marylebone), rushing down from the huge oak forests of Hampstead and Highgate when wild boar and wild bulls roamed free: to say nothing of executions, for those were days when people were not fastidious, and any street space might be utilised for such a scene—Chaucer himself later sketched in the Man of Law's Tale the well-known look of a prisoner being led to death. We know that he possessed considerable knowledge of the classics, divinity, philosophy, astronomy, as much as was then known of chemistry, and, indeed, most of the sciences. French and Latin he knew as a matter of course, for the better classes used these tongues more than English—Latin for writing, and French for writing and speaking; for, by his translations from the French, he earned, early in life, a 'balade' of compliment from Eustache Deschamps, with the refrain, 'Grant translateur, noble Geoffroi Chaucier.' It is probable, too, that he knew Italian, for, in his later life, we can see how he has been inspired by the great Italian writers, Dante, Petrarch, and Boccaccio.

Most gentlemen's sons were educated or 'finished' by becoming pages. They entered the service of noble ladies, who paid them, or sometimes were even paid for receiving them. Thus young men learned courtesy of manners, and all the accomplishments of indoor and outdoor life—riding, the use of arms, &c.—and were very much what an aide-de-camp in the army now is. Chaucer held such a post, in 1357, in the Household of Elizabeth, Countess of Ulster, wife of Lionel, third son of King Edward III. This determines his state as a gentleman's son, and would have kept him a good deal in London. His livery as page was a short cloak, a pair of red and black hose (one leg red, the other black) and shoes, with 3s. 6d. for necessaries¹ (equal to about 36s. of our money).

There is a doubtful tradition that Chaucer was intended for a lawyer, and was a member of the Middle Temple, and here, as they say, he was once fined two shillings for beating a Franciscan friar in Fleet Street.

If this be true, it must have been rather a severe beating; for two shillings was a far larger sum than it is now—equal to at least twenty shillings of our money.¹ Chaucer was angry with the friars at later

¹ Authorities are divided as to the means of ascertaining the value of money in the 14th century. Some multiply the sum by six, some by twelve and even eighteen. If times in life, and deals them some hard hits in his writings with a relish possibly founded on personal experience of some disagreeable friar, but more probably because he and his family were democrats at heart, and detested the ecclesiastical corruption which made the friars, especially, at that time a hypocritical and mischievous body. Friars were a familiar sight in the streets, begging and 'glosing' for their sufficiently rich convents.

All the streets known to Chaucer still exist, though they were much less crowded with people in Chaucer's day than now. Fleet Street was outside the city walls, and probably, as in the streets of St. John's Wood, or rather some foreign towns, the houses were irregular, here and there divided by little gardens, and even by green fields. When Chaucer walked in those streets, the birds sang over his head, and the hawthorn and primrose bloomed where now the black smoke and dust would soon kill most green things. Thames Street was where Chaucer long lived in London, both in boyhood and in middle life, and no doubt that street, like the river, was less dirty than it is now; at any rate it was newer; but, at one time in his life at least, it is certain that he occupied a tenement at Aldgate, granted him for life, which formed part of an old prison; the lease, dated 1374, is still extant. It is probable that at another he lived in the beautiful Savoy Palace, with John of Gaunt; in 1393 he was living at Greenwich, then quite country, and at the end of his life he had a suburban house in Westminster—green, monastic Westminster, with its Mill and its Mill-bank—said to be nearly on the same spot on which Henry VII.'s chapel now stands, and close to the Abbey, where he is buried.

In those days it was the fashion, when the month of May¹ arrived, for everybody, rich and poor, to get up very early in the morning, to gather boughs of hawthorn and laurel, to deck all the doorways in the street, as a joyful welcoming of the sweet spring-time. Chaucer alludes more than once to this beautiful custom, of which the old-fashioned 'Jack in the green' was the last rather 'rowdy' relic: and even that has ceased to be in London. The city streets must have been full of fragrance then. May was the usual season for the annual holidays, any outing or pilgrimage, or pleasant undertaking. He also tells us how he loved to rise up at dawn in the morning, and go into the fresh green fields, to see the daisies open. You may guess from this how much nearer the country was to the town 500 years ago, when within a short walk you could get right into the meadows from Thames Street.

London was also much quieter. There were no railways—such things we multiply by ten we shall not be very far from the mark, but rather under than over it.

¹ It must not be forgotten, in reading praises of warm and sunny May, often now a bleak and chilly month, that the seasons were a fortnight later at that time, May-day coming therefore in the middle of the month, and May ending in the middle of June.

had never been heard of. There were not even any cabs or carriages. Sometimes a market cart might roll by, but not very often, and then everybody would run out to see what the unaccustomed clatter was all about. People had to walk everywhere, unless they were rich enough to ride on horseback, or lived near the river, as most people tried to do. In that case, they used to go in barges or boats on the Thames, as far as they could; for, strange as it may seem, even the King had no coach then.

I am afraid Geoffrey Chaucer would not recognise that 'dere and swete cyte of London' in the great, smoky, noisy, bustling metropolis we are accustomed to, and I am quite sure he would not recognise the language; and presently I will explain why, though Chaucer wrote and spoke English, it was very different from what we speak now. You will see, as you go on, that the spelling and the construction of the sentences are both obsolete, so much so that I have had to put a second version side by side with Chaucer's lines, which you will understand more readily; and when properly read to you, you will hear how different is the sound. These words were all pronounced slowly, almost with a drawl, while we nowadays have got to talk so fast, that no one who lived then would have been able to follow what we say without great difficulty.

CHAUCER'S APPEARANCE.

Chaucer's aspect can only be traced from his allusions to himself, and from the sole authentic portraits of him done from memory by his young friend and pupil Occleve, while that memory was still strong upon him. They can be seen in the British Museum, two small miniatures painted in the margins of Harl. MS. 4866 and another.

On these two poor little paintings are founded the many portraits scattered over the country. The same features recur in all; the peculiar aquiline nose, mouth a little drooping, eyes downcast, forked beard and fair complexion are the same in all. The face seems shrewd and benevolent, wise, thoughtful, almost pathetic, in which we may trace the humorous satire beneath the calmness. Words of his own, late in life, show that he was rather fat, his face small and fair (Prologue to Melibeus). In manner he seemed 'elvish,' or shy, 'doing to no wight dalliaunce' (chaffing no one), with a habit of staring on the ground, 'as if he would find a hair,' a habit common with short-sighted and saturnine people; and that Chaucer was short-sighted these hints, his studious ways, and the absence of description of distant scenery in his poems, seem to indicate.

There are repeated hints of his retiring habits. All day he worked hard (at the Customs books), and then, instead of recreation, he came home and applied himself to another book, 'dumb as a stone,' 'studying and reading alway' till his 'head aked' and his look became dazed; so that his neighbours, living at his very door, looked on him as 'an hermit,' although (he adds) he was no ascetic, 'his abstinence was little' (House of Fame). He often speaks of his 'unlikeliness,' as if in excuse to be quiet and avoid the expense and bondage of fashionable life. It also suggests that he was stout and inactive.

His dress was that of the ordinary clerk. He wore a hood of dark colour, with a long tail to it, which indoors hung down his back, and out of doors was twisted round his head to keep his hood firm. This tail was called a liripipe or tippet.

He did not wear a modern coat and trousers, but a sort of gown or tunic, which in one picture is grey and loose, with large sleeves, bright red stockings, and black boots. In the other the gown is black. But on great occasions, and in his official attendance at Court, he probably wore a close-fitting tunic, with a rich belt and buckle about his hips, a dagger, and perhaps a wreath of flowers around his hair. Bright colours in dress were the fashion then, as dark ones are now, for men as well as women alike, and Chaucer's costume as a youth has already been described as red and black.

As we have said, Chaucer the King's Esquire was probably no ascetic, and many as are his hints that he would prefer a fuller purse, we may fairly take him as a combination of courtier and scholar. Like the poor clerk in the Prologue, 'he would sooner have at his bed's head twenty books clothed in black and red than robes rich, fiddle, or psaltery,' and we suspect that his manner was the same. 'Not a word spake he more than was needful: all that he spake was of high prudence, and short, and quick, and full of sentence' (weight). This is like a courtier as much as a clerk.

Useful dress, that is, dress wearable during business occupations, is always plain, commonly dark, and Chaucer, the Custom-house master, like all the middle classes, wore as useful and quiet a garb as a tunic and hood can be: the hood was so continually worn, and of course so much missed when removed, that to go 'hoodless' into wind or rain was held the acme of self-abnegation:¹ and meant practically bare: hence, no doubt, the courtesy of taking off the hood to a superior originated, the last phase of which is still raising the hat. Elderly people wore the hood, or, in the case of women, some wimple or coif, indoors as well as out.

But as regards young people, or officials attached to Court, on festive occasions, especially at tournaments, nothing can exceed the fantastic brilliancy of costume in the fourteenth century, which, though moderate and very picturesque in Edward III.'s reign, rose into the utmost extravagance in that of Richard II. The long-toed boots were fastened to the knee or waist with chains occasionally, and the tippets, or tails, hanging from the sleeves had to be knotted up to avoid trailing on the ground, and coats of arms and mottoes were embroidered all over coats and gowns.

¹ 'Death of Blanche the Duchess,' l. 1270.

Probably Chaucer all his life adhered to the less grotesque fashions of Edward: but it is likely that as a page and squire he wore parti-coloured clothes, one side one colour, and the other side different; a coat of cloth 'embroidered all full of fresh flowers:' and 'strutted out his hair like a fan' like any other youthful dandy; though the sumptuary laws (for regulating the dress, and even diet, of each class) forbade, or strove to forbid, people in his rank from wearing silk and many jewels.

CHAUCER'S COURT LIFE.

Chaucer's connection with the Court makes it natural for him to have lived within reach of it during the greater part of his life; and it is satisfactory to think that this great poet was a valued member of Domus Regis Edwardi Tercii, afterwards cited as 'the house of very pollicie and flower of England, the first setter of Certaineties amongst his domesticall meynie, upon a groundid rule' (Harl. MS. 642, leaf 6, back). He held, at various times, as did other members of his family, posts in the King's household, which brought him more or less money, such as Valet of the King's Chamber, the King's Esquire, &c.; and he found a fast friend in John of Gaunt, one of the sons of King Edward III. What these offices were, and what were Chaucer's duties and salary, we may be curious to know. Edward III. had thirty-seven squires of the household, and Geoffrey Chaucer's name occurs as seventeenth on the list in 1368. The salary, like that of many a post in our Queen's household, was merely nominal, not much more than pays for the uniform. But Chaucer may have had private property. His duties may be guessed from those of Edward IV.'s similar squires, forty in number, 'to be chosen men of their possession, worship, and wisdom:' attending the King's person, 'assaying' his meals as a safeguard against poison, which every king dreaded, carrying the torches before him, &c. These privileged gentlemen slept two in a bed, 'as they be coupled bed-fellows by the Gentlemen Ushers,' and were allowed daily rations of meat and ale, and a uniform, or 'liverie,' with salary of $7\frac{1}{2}d.$ a day, equal to about 100*l.* a year our money. And we are told 'these Esquires of Household be accustomed winter and summer, in afternoons and in evenings, to draw to Lordes Chambers within Court, there to keep honest company after their cunning in talking of Cronicles of Kings, and of other Pollicies, or in piping or harping, singing, or other acts martial, to help to occupy the Court, and accompany estrangers, till the time require of departing.' Chaucer's Court-life must have moulded his views and polished his manners, and brought him considerable influence. There he fell in love with a fair lady whom he wooed for eight years, and to whom he wrote a beautiful poem called the 'Complaint of Pity, how Pity is dead and buried in a gentle heart.' For she would have nothing to say to Geoffrey Chaucer and his love: and he got over it in time.

In the year 1357, and again in 1362, special and royal jousts were held in Smithfield in May, lasting five days. The King and Queen were present, and most of the chivalry of England and France and other nations, Spaniards, Cyprians, and Armenians. These latter jousts are supposed to have inspired the splendid Knight's Tale at a later time, with its allusions to the 'King of India' and the 'King of Thrace.'

In 1359, Chaucer, being one of the King's young henchmen, followed in Edward's retinue in an attack upon France, and was taken prisoner. Probably Chaucer was quite a boy, fifteen or sixteen years old. We see the youths serving in the rich tents in tapestries and other pictures of sieges: they were not warriors. It is supposed he was detained there about a year; and, being ransomed by Edward, for the sum of 16*l.* (=160?), a few years after he came back to England he married one of the Queen's maids of honour, whose name was Philippa. Who she was is not certainly known. Possibly she was Philippa, the younger daughter of Sir Payne de Roet, of Hainault,¹ who came over to England

¹ Dr. Morris writes: 'The old supposition that the Philippa whom Chaucer married was the daughter of Sir Paon de Roet (a native of Hainault and King of Arms of Guienne), and sister to Katherine, widow of Sir Hugh Swynford, successively governess, mistress, and wife of John of Gaunt, Duke of Lancaster, was founded on heraldic grounds. The Roet arms were adopted by Thomas Chaucer. Then Thomas Chaucer was made (without the slightest evidence) Geoffrey's son, and Philippa Roet was then made Geoffrey's wife.' And again, 'It is possible that Philippa Chaucer was a relative or namesake of Geoffrey, and that he married her in the spring or early summer of 1374.' It is, however, much less likely that there were so many Chaucers about the Court, unconnected with each other, than that the common supposition is correct. At any rate, until there is any evidence to the contrary, this tradition may be fairly accepted. The recent discovery by Mr. Hunter in the Record Office, of Thomas Chaucer's deed, sealed with a seal bearing the legend 'S Ghofrai Chaucer,' seems to support the tradition. There are entries mentioning

Philippa Chaucer in 1366, 1372, and 1374. The former names her as one of the ladies of the bedchamber to Queen Philippa, who conferred the annuity of ten marks in September 1366. In 1372 John of Gaunt conferred on Philippa Chaucer an annuity of 10*l.* (equal to 100*l.*). Her name is mentioned when the grant to Chaucer of a pitcher of wine daily is commuted into money payment, June 13, 1374, by John of Gaunt (again a pension of 10*l.*), for good services rendered by the Chaucers to the said Duke, his consort, and his mother the Queen. I may add that a Philippa Picard (possibly daughter of Henry Picard, vintner and mayor of London in the reign of Edward III., who feasted the Kings of England, France, Scotland, and Cyprus at one banquet) received (Jan. 20, 1370) 100*s.* pension as veillesse to the late queen. Mr. Furnivall doubts that Geoffrey Chaucer was married before 1372; in which case his marrying the daughter of a brother vintner is not unnatural, and the Philippa Chaucer named as in the Queen's service in 1366 might have been Geoffrey's sister. Still the pension of 100*s.* does not tally with the pension of Chaucer's wife.

in the retinue of Queen Philippa, also of Hainault. After Philippa Chaucer's marriage, the Queen gave her an annual pension of ten marks¹ (=50*l.*), which was continued to her by the King after Queen Philippa died. Sir Payne Roet's other daughter, Katherine, married Sir Hugh Swynford, and was afterwards successively mistress and third wife of the Duke of Lancaster. She was also for years governess to his children.

What Chaucer's wife looked like, we may imagine. No portrait of her is known, but we can ascertain the fashion of the garb she wore. I like to believe she had long yellow hair, and the courtly, 'assured manner' which Chaucer describes so often and so prettily. Chaucer's wife wore one of those curious head-dresses like crowns, or rather like boxes, over a gold net, with her hair braided in a tress, hanging down her back, such as we may see in ancient missals, windows, or effigies on tombs of the fourteenth century. She had a close green² dress, with tight sleeves, reaching right down over the hand, to protect it from the sun and wind; and a very long skirt, falling in folds about her feet, sometimes edged with beautiful white fur, ermine, or a rich grey fur, called vair. The colour of this grey fur was much liked, and when people had light grey eyes, of somewhat the same colour, it was thought very beautiful. Many ancient songs describe pretty ladies with 'eyes of vair' (Fr. verre, glass). Chaucer describes the pretty Prioress with eyes grey as glass. White glass then had a decidedly grey-green shade.

On festive occasions Chaucer's wife, as a Court lady, wore dresses far more intricate than any to be seen now—dresses of all colours, worked in with flowers and branches of gold, sometimes with heraldic devices and strange figures, and as many jewels as were allowed her by the sumptuary laws which regulated the costume. People wore long close sleeves, made sometimes very curiously with streamers hanging from the elbow; a long thin gauze veil, shining with silver and gold; and narrow pointed shoes, much longer than their feet, which, they thought, made the foot look slender. These were often cut into open patterns (as now), likened by Chaucer to 'Paul's windows,' meaning the rich Gothic windows of the old St. Paul's Cathedral. If ladies had not had such long shoes, they would never have showed beneath their long embroidered skirts, and they would always have been stumbling when they walked. It was a very graceful and elegant costume that Chaucer's wife wore. When she walked out of doors, she had tall clogs to save her dainty shoes from the mud of the rough cobbled streets; and when she rode on horseback with the Queen, or her husband Chaucer, she either rode astride, or sat on a pillion, and placed her feet on a narrow board, called a planchette.

¹ A mark was 13*s.* 4*d.* of our money, but the buying power of money was ten or twelve times greater than at present. So that, although ten marks was only 6*l.* 12*s.* of our currency, it was fully equal to 60*l.*

² Green was a favourite colour of the time.

We do not know much about Chaucer's children. We know he had a little son called Lewis, because Chaucer wrote a treatise for him when he was ten years old, 1391, and motherless, to instruct him, himself, in astronomy and astrology, which abstruse studies were then the necessary vestibule to philosophy and the sciences, to teach him how to use an instrument he had given him, called an astrolabe.¹ Several of his poems hint at his love of children, such as in the tender description of Ugolino's death, and Constance's and Griselda's trouble.

If Chaucer was married before 1366, it is likely that he had other children; and there is strong reason to suppose he had an elder son, named Thomas, and a daughter Elizabeth,² who were provided for by John of Gaunt.

Chaucer served in a second invasion of France 1369-70 as 'equitante de guerre in partibus Francie,' as royal Equerry, or one of the Body-guard, and received towards his wages and expenses 10*l.* (equalling 100*l.* in modern coinage), from Henry de Wakefield, Keeper of the King's Wardrobe.

John of Gaunt, who was Chaucer's patron as I told you, was also liberal to Thomas Chaucer, and gave him several posts in the King's household, as he grew up to be a man. And John of Gaunt, in 1381, paid a large sum of money, 51*l.* 8*s.* 2*d.*, fully equal to 500*l.* of our money, for Elizabeth Chaucer to become a noviciate (that is, for her to learn to be a nun) in the Abbey of Barking. This was usual for young girls of good family.

Another Elizabeth Chaucer was nominated nun in St. Helen's, London, by Edward III., in 1377, probably through John of Gaunt's influence: but whether this is so, or who this Elizabeth was, we do not know; possibly she was a sister or niece or another daughter of the poet. It was not unusual for several sons and daughters in a family to bear the same name.

Now I must quit the subject of Chaucer's wife and children, and go on to Chaucer himself.

¹ Astrolabe: a machine used at sea to measure the distances of stars. The quadrant now in use has superseded the astrolabe.

² Thomas Chaucer died in 1434, when his only child was thirty. Elizabeth Chaucer's novitiate was paid for by John of Gaunt in 1381. If Elizabeth Chaucer was about fourteen in 1381, she would have been born about 1367; and, therefore, as far as dates are concerned, either Thomas or Elizabeth may well have been elder children of the poet; supposing he married in 1361-65. Moreover, John of Gaunt's interest in both of these persons, Thomas Chaucer and Elizabeth Chaucer, gives this a colour of probability. On the other hand, supposing Geoffrey Chaucer married about 1373, according to Mr. Furnivall's opinion, or after 1368, when his name appears in the list of royal squires lodging in the palace, Thomas may still have been his son: receiving offices at Court from the Duke of Lancaster, and being (as was his grandfather, John Chaucer, to Edward III.) chief butler to Richard II. late in the reign; then to his successor; marrying Matilda Burghersh in 1403, and dying like his father at about sixty years of age. Should this be so, the younger Elizabeth Chaucer, nun, may have been some near relation. See Aldine ed. Chaucer, vol. i. p. 86.

Chaucer was, as I told you, the especial friend of one of the sons of the King, Edward III. Not the eldest son, Edward the Black Prince, the great warrior, nor Lionel, the third son, whom he had served when a boy, but the fourth son, John of Gaunt, the ablest of the brothers, who had considerable power with the King, and whose ambitious nature knew how to make use of Chaucer's knowledge of men of all classes.

In 1359, when John of Gaunt was only nineteen (the year in which Chaucer accompanied the army to France), he married Blanche, daughter of the Duke of Lancaster (which title was afterwards granted to himself), and there were famous joustings and great festivities of every kind. In this year, it has been supposed, Chaucer wrote his poem, The Parliament of Birds, to celebrate the wedding, in which Edward III., the Black Prince, John of Gaunt, and his two rivals figure as birds. But the best authorities date this poem fifteen years later. I should myself be inclined to connect it, from its name and satirical tone, with some parliamentary epoch, such as the first use of 'the vulgar tongue' in the debates, between 1359 and 1362, when Parliament first opened with an English speech, in harmony with the popular views of John of Gaunt.

When Chaucer came back to England, and got married himself, there are many indications of John's attachment to both Chaucer and Philippa all his life. Among others we may notice his gifts to Philippa of certain 'silver-gilt cups with covers,' on January 1, 1380, 1381, and 1382, probably bearing the new three marks of the organised guilds.

When John of Gaunt was in power he never forgot Chaucer. When he became unpopular it was Chaucer's turn to be faithful to him; and faithful he was, whatever he suffered, and he did suffer for it severely, and became quite poor at times, as you will see. Directly John came into power again up went Chaucer too, and his circumstances improved. There are few friendships so long and so faithful.

Many poems by Chaucer were written at the instigation of John of Gaunt, or at least flavoured with delicate and affectionate flattery; some of them all but name him.

CHAUCER'S POSITION.

Chaucer's position in life was undoubtedly that of a gentleman.¹ His parentage was respectable, if not influential, as the vintners held much the same social status as our great brewers or wine merchants,

¹ The doubt on this subject, to which Mr. Furnivall inclines, is based on the difficulty of estimating the position of the superior vintners, and royal 'valets' and 'squires.' I enumerate the facts which seem to denote his social status, because it has been so often asserted that Chaucer was of low origin and held no position. I can only say I am open to conviction on this point, and on every other; but the facts hitherto adduced appear to me to point all the other way.

and the Vintry was repeatedly visited by royalty. There is no record of a Chaucer being Mayor of London, but contemporary vintners held that position. John, Chaucer's father, who was apparently well off, had interest at Court, and attended Edward III. and Queen Philippa on their memorable journey to Flanders, when Edward was proclaimed Vicar of the Holy Roman Empire on the left bank of the Rhine, though in what capacity is not clear. He was also Deputy King's Butler in 1349. As a boy of thirteen he had been stolen away and nearly 'married' by force to a certain Joan de Westhale. A raptus of this kind always meant a money-object. His mother had an uncle who was 'a moneyer,' Hamo de Copton, who owned one of the small mints, and whose heiress she was. His grandfather, Robert le Chaucer, had property in Ipswich and was collector of the wine duties in London. His grand-uncle, Richard le Chaucer, also a vintner, lived in a house at the corner of Kerion (afterwards Crown) Lane, which he built himself, and had a monument in the church of St. Thomas's Hospital as only a well-to-do man would have had. He died, with a stepson, in the first pestilence of this reign (see Table of Events). It is known that for a time (certainly in 1357) Geoffrey Chaucer, being then about twelve,¹ perhaps less, was a Page in the household of Elizabeth, Countess of Ulster, daughter-in-law of Edward III., a position only possible to a well-born lad, for a page in those days was a person of good position, who carried messages, arranged royal interviews, and eventually developed into squire and envoy, as Chaucer actually did develop. He became successively squire, valettus, and Equerry to the King, probably by young acting as envoy or ambassador on foreign missions. He is later described as Scutifer Regis (the King's shield-bearer), a certainly influential position. His wife was Queen Philippa's maid of honour, and subsequently shared a similar position in the household of Constance, second wife of the Duke of Lancaster, with Lady Sanche Blount and Lady Blanche de Trumpington—no mean position. It is not proven that the Duke's third wife, Lady Swynford, Sir Payne Roet's daughter, was sister to Chaucer's wife: but it is still less proven that such relationship did not exist, and Mr. Walter Rye has pointed out that the arms on John Chaucer's seal are almost identical with those of Swynford, indica-

¹ It was mediæval etiquette to send children 'out to service' in great houses 'to learn manners,' and to further their social interests. The Italian Relation of the Island of England, temp. Hen. VII., says this was 'at the age of 7 or 9 years at the utmost.' 'Everyone, however rich, sends away his children into the houses of others, whilst he in return receives those of strangers into his own.' Chaucer thus entered the service of the Countess of Ulster before he was 'grown up,' i.e. twelve years of age (v.

Statute Book 12 Rich. II. cap. v. on the age for a permanent trade, husbandry, &c.). That he also learned 'letters' (writing) and science (music and astrology) is certain, at school or the universities, afterwards returning, for military work, at 15 or 16. I conceive that for young pages and maidens 'in service' the quaint 'Babees Book' (Harl. MS.), beginning 'Ah! belle babes, hearken to my lore!' was written, and on such a treatise how to behave, Geoffrey Chaucer may have been trained!

ting an earlier family alliance. In either case the Chaucers were well regarded and supported by royalty all their lives.

Thomas Chaucer, who died in 1434, was very probably Chaucer's son.¹ He held posts at Court through the bounty of the Duke of Lancaster, Henry IV. and Henry V., and rose to a position of considerable distinction.² He married Matilda, daughter and co-heiress of Sir John Burghersh, and on his tomb, among numerous shields indicating the various noble alliances of the house of Burghersh, quartered the arms of Roet with those of Chaucer—a very odd proceeding if he had no right. It is therefore supposed that he was connected with the Roet family. Thomas Chaucer's daughter was married three times: to Sir John Phelip, to the Earl of Salisbury, and last to William de la Pole, Duke of Suffolk, whom Richard III. declared heir to the throne. She inherited a great property from her father, Thomas Chaucer, who himself inherited (or bought) the reversion of estates from Isabella, wife of Stephen Haytfield.

George Chaucer is not mentioned in the Duke of Lancaster's will; but there is no doubt that they were allies, mutually supporting each other, and as near intimacy as can be attained between a royal person and a subject. Whether Geoffrey Chaucer was so recognised or not, Thomas Chaucer was two years after his death called by the Prince of Wales 'my cousin Chaucer.'

It does not seem likely that the tavern, known to be owned (not necessarily served) by Richard le Chaucer, was the early home of Geoffrey, who could not have derived from rough sailors and riotous drinkers the finished manners which fitted him for royal embassies, and made him the lover of high-born ladies, as the gay young soldier-courtier and troubadour certainly was. Whoever the lady to whom he addressed his Compleynt of Pité might have been, she was above him in position; and he speaks of himself as unhappy for her sake in that poem and in the Dethe of Blanche. He also, I imagine, means himself by the 'jealous swan,' singing himself to death (Parliament of Birds), as though he had raised his eyes to royalty itself.³

In his civil suit with Cecilia Champaign,⁴ three of the witnesses are men of rank: and in the same month that Chaucer sat as M.P. for ¹ As Dr. Furnivall points out, this has not been proved. Mr. Walter Rye agrees with me.

² See Aldine Edition of Chaucer, vol. i. p. 86.

³ Why not? in the curious half-Platonic way in which the well-born troubadours were expected to serenade and worship great ladies. Froissart, who was also a Court poet, says his beloved mistress, Queen Philippa, often occupied him to write love-songs, &c., to her, though he was, like Chaucer, only a squire or clerk in her household. Otherwise, why does Chaucer use the word 'jealous,' as he witnesses the royal marriage which he envies (Parliament of Birds)?

⁴ A suit in which Cecilia Champaign releases Geoffrey Chaucer de raptu m'o, possibly the abduction of an heiress to marry to a friend—no uncommon occurrence, and sometimes planned by the heiresses!—at least, heiresses were very forgiving.

Kent in the disastrous Parliament which ruined him, he was witness in the curious case between Richard, Lord Scrope, and another noble.

Froissart alludes to him : 'The King of England sent to Calais Sir Guiscard d'Angle, Sir Richard Sturey, and Sir Geoffrey Chaucer,' on an embassy in 1378 ; but titles then had a less precise significance than such a title now.

CHAUCER'S PROSPERITY.

Chaucer was employed by Edward III. for many years as envoy, an office only given to men of shrewdness and political experience, and this proves the great ability of Chaucer in other things besides making songs and telling stories. Apart from his military posts, in 1359 and 1369, he went as early as 1370 to France on a 'secret mission' for the King ; these journeyings were no doubt as lucrative as they were honourable, and very enjoyable to one who like Chaucer took a joyous interest in all varieties of scene, character, and thought. He would have travelled by sailing-boat and on horseback. Much of his literary work must have been done on the sea.

On one occasion (1372) when he was sent on a commission to Genoa and Florence, to treat with the doge and merchants of Genoa for the choice of an English port for their merchandise, he is supposed to have seen Petrarch, the great Italian poet and patriot. Petrarch was then living at Arquà, two miles from Padua, a beautiful town in Italy, and though Petrarch was an older man than Chaucer—being sixty-eight, and in the last year of his life, while Chaucer was a young envoy of thirty-two or thirty-three—it seems only natural that these two great men should have tried to see each other, for they had much in common. Both were far-famed poets, and both, in a measure, representatives of the politics, poetry, and culture of their respective countries. Chaucer speaks almost affectionately of Petrarch in his Prologue to The Clerk's Tale, as one might speak of a man one had met, and puts words into his clerk's mouth which might be true of himself, a clerk¹—'a tale, which that I learned at Padua of a worthy clerk, Fraunces Petrarch, laureate poet.'

It has been objected that they could never have met, because the journey from Florence to Padua was a most difficult one. Travelling was hard work, and sometimes dangerous, guides being always necessary : you could not get a carriage at any price, for carriages were not invented. In some places there was no means of going direct from city to city at all—not even on horseback—there being actually no roads, and wars constantly threatening : so that people had to go on foot or not at all. If they went, there were rocks and rivers to cross, which often delayed travellers a long time.

¹ Clerk meant a scholar, a man of letters.

All the same, Chaucer, as the King's envoy, must have had attendants, even for safety's sake, with him, and much luggage; and whilst that would of course make travelling more difficult and expensive, it would also enable him perhaps to take a journey on his own account with no danger to the goods. He most likely went a great part of the way by sea, in a sailing vessel coasting along the Mediterranean to Genoa and Leghorn, and so by Pisa to Florence; you may trace his route on a map. No one therefore can be quite sure whether Chaucer did see Petrarch or not. Whether or no, a wondrous delight it must have been to visit Florence then, when Italy was at her zenith of power, wealth and culture—far ahead of England and even France. Such privileges were reserved for kings' envoys and wealthy pilgrims, and such scenes and new experiences must have shaped Chaucer's whole character and tastes and expanded his views of life and his powers of describing it. To his journeys, unusual in the fourteenth century, we owe his pictures of splendid architecture and decoration and costume, and the 'beating of the sea against the rocks hollow.'

He visited the brilliant Court of the Visconti at Milan: he must have seen the wondrous frescoes and mosaics by Giotto, then but lately dead; the ancient bronze doors of the Cathedral at Pisa, where he may have learnt the story of Ugolino (Monk's Tale); and admired the works (among them sculptures on the façade of Florence Cathedral) of such modern artists as Taddeo and Agnolo Gaddi.

During this Italian journey, which kept him eleven months out of England, Philippa Chaucer probably resided in the Savoy Palace, being in the service of Constance, Queen of Castile and Duchess of Lancaster, John of Gaunt's second wife. Were speculation permissible, we might surmise that when Chaucer returned he brought with him not only a fair record of services performed for the King, but a great literary work that convinced him of his claims to a good civil post, not unlike a sinecure, such as his grandfather Robert once held, and which he was thoroughly fitted for by his recent work at Genoa.

It is unnecessary to enumerate here all the little entries in the records relating to Chaucer. I will only say that Chaucer was 'holden in greate credyt,' and probably had a wide-reaching influence in England; for, connected as he was with John of Gaunt, he must have given him advice and counsel. A man of his ability, observation and eloquence was naturally a valuable ally, and chiefly through John he obtained the lucrative and pleasant errands abroad, and sinecure offices at home.

John's wife, Blanche of Lancaster, died in 1369, and so did his mother, Queen Philippa, possibly in the great 'third pestilence' of Edward III.'s reign then raging. Chaucer wrote a poem called The Death of Blanche the Duchess, in honour of this dead Blanche. John married another wife in the next year, Constance, daughter of Pedro the Cruel, and through her claimed later to be King of Castile, a title he actually assumed when he gave up the hope of ruling his own country. It was during the second Duchess's lifetime that he did so much for Chaucer, who himself implies that he was a 'climbing' man in these days of John's prosperity (Good Counsel).

I will give you further instances of this.

Soon after Chaucer's return from his journey to Florence, he received a grant of 'a pitcher of wine' every day 'from the hands of the King's butler.' This seems like a mark of personal friendship more than formal royal bounty; but it was worth a good deal of money a year. Less than two months afterwards he received, through John of Gaunt's goodwill, a place under Government called 'Comptrollership of the Customs' of the Port of London (June, 1374). This was a very important post, and required much tact, shrewdness, and vigilance; and a condition was attached, that all the accounts of his office were to be entered in Chaucer's own handwriting—which means, of course, that Chaucer was to be always present, seeing everything done himself, and never leaving the work to be done by anybody else, except when sent abroad by the King's own royal command. Only three days after this, John of Gaunt himself made Chaucer a grant of 10*l.* a year for life, in reward for all the good service rendered by 'nostre bien ame (aimé) Geffray Chaucer,' and 'nostre bien ame Philippa sa femme,' to himself, his duchess, and to his mother, Queen Philippa, who was dead. This sum of money does not sound much; but it was a great deal in those days, and was fully equal to 100*l.* now. Chaucer probably quitted the Savoy for Thames Street, where he had lived as a boy.

In the following year, 1375, the King gave Chaucer the 'custody' of a rich ward (a ward is a person protected or maintained by another while under age), named Edmond Staplegate, of Kent; and when this ward married Chaucer received a large sum as fine or equivalent for loss (104*l.* = 1,040*l.* ?).¹ He was also assigned the wardship of William de Solys, of Solys in Kent.²

In 1376 Chaucer's assiduity in the Customs' office detected an attempt to ship wool abroad without paying the lawful duty; the guilty man was fined for his dishonesty, and the money, 71*l.* 4*s.* 6*d.*, was made

¹ In these cases, the sum received on the marriage of the ward was legally a fine on the marriage.

² Chaucer clearly had influence in Kent, which he afterwards represented in Parliament. He frequently shows familiarity with Kentish scenes: e.g., he twice alludes in the Prologue to the Kentish furnaces, the Weald of Kent being then like our Black Country, a great smelting district, its wood answering to our coal.

over to Chaucer—a sum equal to 700*l*. In 1383 another large bonus became his.

In 1377, at Candlemas, in February, a great show was made by the citizens for the disport of the young Prince Richard, son of the Black Prince, recently dead. A mummary by torchlight, with music and maskers, rode 'from Newgate through Chepe, over the bridge, through Southwarke, and so to Kennington beside Lambhith' (Lambeth), where the young prince was staying with his mother and John of Gaunt, Duke of Lancaster, and other great lords. They made little Richard offerings of jewels by throwing the dice with him, taking care that he won: and there was a great feast afterwards. Probably Chaucer was present: he was then living in Thames Street as Comptroller of the Customs: and would naturally have gone thence to Lambeth by boat to see the fun, as he was still described as the King's esquire, and his wife was in Constance of Lancaster's train.

In the same month of February Chaucer was dispatched with Sir Thomas Percy on a secret mission to Flanders, returning in April, and from then to 1379 he was constantly employed on embassies abroad, which speak for his tact, acumen, polished bearing and address, and for his linguistic acquirements.

CHAUCER'S ADVERSITY.

The Black Prince died in 1377, and Edward III. did not long survive him. The Black Prince's little son, Richard, who was only eleven years old, became King of England; but as he was too young to reign, his three uncles became regents. These three uncles were John of Gaunt, Duke of Lancaster; the Duke of York; and the Duke of Gloucester.

By the Duke of Lancaster, then more powerful than the King, Chaucer was repeatedly employed in Flanders and France on missions: he was still Comptroller of the Customs; and, before long, he accepted a second post of a similar kind, called 'Comptroller of the Petty Customs.' The Customs brought a large revenue to the Government. 'Chaucer's sum total of receipts as Comptroller for the year Mich. 8 to Mich. 9, Richard II. (1384-5) amounted to 15,312*l*. 14*s*. 11½*d*., the previous year having shown a total of 14,346*l*. 14*s*.', says Mr. Selby. About this time Chaucer sent to Queen Anne, whom the boy King had just married (1382), his Legends of Good Women, written, says Lydgate, at her request.

But all this good luck was not to go on for ever. The people were by no means attached to the Duke of Lancaster, who as regent proved a time-server, self-seeking and severe.

It is quite possible for a while his private character may be courteous and attractive : and the Duke of Lancaster's unpopularity was soon visited on his supporters, and among them Chaucer.

This was a very troublous time. The Crown, represented by the King's uncles ; the great barons ; and the commons, or lower classes, formed three great opposing parties, each claiming all the power. At last some of the barons sided with the King's party, and others sided with the people, so that there were then two parties quarrelling and circumventing each other. The Duke of Lancaster laboured indefatigably to obtain the crown, but the people were unhappy, discontented with his action as Regent, and he began to lose power in the kingdom.

The indignation against the Duke of Lancaster, ' whose doings were ever contrary,' and the people's suspicion that his ambition might lead to violent designs upon the boy Richard, whom they loved for his father's sake, is shown in the curious resolution of the insurgents under Wat Tyler, who ' swore to admit of no king of the name of John'—a broad hint to the unpopular Duke that he would gain nothing by Richard's removal. How dangerous John felt the people's anger is shown by his speech in October 1377, warmly denying such accusations : and his flight in 1381, when the enraged peasantry destroyed his Savoy Palace.

During John of Gaunt's absence in Portugal, in pursuit of a visionary crown in that kingdom also, the people plotted yet more busily against him. They complained that he had given government posts to men who did not do their duty, and neglected their work, and Chaucer was one of them.

Then there was what was called a ' Commission of Inquiry ' appointed, which means a body of men who were free to examine and reform everything they chose in the country. Their power was to continue during a year ; and these men looked into all that Chaucer had done in the ' Customs ' offices. They did not find anything wrong, as far as we know, but still they removed Chaucer in disgrace, just as if they had. And this deprived him of his chief means of subsistence. This was in the year 1386.

A great deal has been said and written about this matter. The records of Chaucer's work at the Customs, ' written with his own hand,' are not to be found : indeed no scrap of his writing seems to exist, though close search has been made, otherwise it would prove how his Customs work was done. It seems as though the records had been collected, either by enemies to destroy, or by antiquaries to preserve and cherish ; and until these records turn up we cannot prove his innocence nor enjoy the interest of seeing his handwriting. Some critics have alleged that Chaucer really did neglect his duties, though the conditions that he should attend to everything himself had been so very strict ;¹ that he had probably absented himself, and let things go wrong. But such people forget that these conditions were formally done away with in 1385, when Chaucer was finally released from personal drudgery at the Customs, and allowed to have a deputy, under him, to do his work.

They forget, too, how Chaucer had plunged into political matters immediately, at a time when party feeling was intensely strong, the people and John of Gaunt being violently opposed to each other ; and how Chaucer naturally espoused the part of his absent friend, and sat in the House of Commons as representative of Kent, one of the most important counties of England, on purpose to support the ministers who were on John of Gaunt's side. This alone would be enough to make the opposition party hate Chaucer, and some unpopular vote of his in Parliament was doubtless the real reason of their dismissing him from office.

But Chaucer never wavered in his opinions or in his work. We date now several of his greatest poems and satires, the Canterbury Tales. He submitted to his disgrace and his poverty unmoved ; and after the death of his wife Philippa, which happened in the following summer, nothing is known of him for several years, except that he was in such distress that he was actually obliged to part with his two pensions for a sum of money in order to pay his debts. Chaucer's pathetic Good Counsel was probably written about the time of his loss. It is full of confidence that 'truth will deliver him' in the long run : and one line, 'Pain thee not all the crooked to redress,' looks as though he regretted having meddled in political misdoings, though with the best intentions. This poem reflects the disappointment and sadness at his changed lot which he must have felt.

CHAUCER'S LIFE-WORK.

During all the eventful years that followed Edward III.'s death, up to this time, Chaucer had been writing busily, in the midst of his weightier affairs. The Complaint of Mars, Boece, Troilus and Cressida, the House of Fame, and the Legend of Good Women, all of which I hope you will read some day, were written in this period ;² also some reproachful words to his scrivener, who seems to have written out his poems for him very carelessly. If Chaucer's downcast eyes mean short sight or any weakness, it may well be that he employed a scrivener constantly to write from dictation, and this may account for the absence

¹ See Chambers's Encyclopædia, 'Chaucer.'

² At this time Chaucer was over forty years old as the clerk entered him, 'xl and upwards, having borne arms for twenty-seven years,' when witness for Sir Richard Scrope in 1386.

of poems or other documents outside his Customs books in his own handwriting.

From 1370 to 1387 was the brightest part of Chaucer's life; when most gifts came to him and his from the royal bounty, as is clear from my Table of Historical Events: and when he was mostly absent from England on royal commissions. This fair time seems to have closed with his wife's death: at least, after 1387 there was a notable diminution of personal gifts. It is possible that Chaucer may have owed something to his wife's influence, for during his absences abroad Philippa seems to have enjoyed the friendship of the Duke and Duchess of Lancaster. But Chaucer's finest literary work was chiefly done after this prosperous period was over, and John of Gaunt had lost his influence. There were then no more silver-gilt cups for New Year's gifts: no more royal missions: but then he built himself golden monuments of immortal beauty.

In 1389 there was another great change in the government. The King, being of age, wished to govern the country without help, and he dismissed one of his uncles, who was on the people's side, and invited John of Gaunt to come back to England. John of Gaunt's son, Henry of Hereford, was made one of the new ministers. Immediately Chaucer was thought of. He was at once (July 12, 1389) appointed Clerk at the King's Works at Westminster—an office of some importance—which he was presently permitted to hold by deputy; and his salary was two shillings per day—that is 36*l.* 10*s.* a year, equal to about 370*l.* of our money.

It seems that Chaucer kept this appointment only for two years. Why, we cannot tell. We find numerous allusions to him among the old accounts, receipts to workmen, the King's writs, &c., but we can derive no clear idea of what Chaucer was doing, or whether he was competent to do the work expected of him. In 1390, St. George's Chapel, Windsor, was said to be very ruinous and on the point of falling to the ground. Chaucer was appointed to repair it and also the banks of the Thames by Greenwich. Just a year after, we find the chapel described in the same words, and the King's writ to Chaucer 'not to interfere' with John Gedney, his successor as Clerk of the Works at Windsor; and consequently the dead stock and tools, &c., which were delivered by inventory to Chaucer in 1389, are handed over by Chaucer to Gedney. Perhaps Chaucer did not fulfil the work. At any rate we find allusions to 'jousts' in Smithfield in May 1390, for which Chaucer was employed in preparing scaffoldings, for the King and Queen to witness them. There were 'miracle plays' in Smithfield (says Stow) in 1391, similar to those played now at Ammergau, and played by the parish clerks of London; they continued for three days together, and all the nobles of the land were present. All this looks as though the Windsor works may have been neglected for the excitement of London. Chaucer first had to be checked by a comptroller of the King's works, who was paid 12*d.* a day; then he got leave to do the works by deputy: six months later he gives up his appointment, which he never seems to have enjoyed.

There is reason to believe that Chaucer wrote his Knight's Tale in 1387, and its latter part describing a brilliant tourney may have been inspired by the jousts of 1386, in which Henry, son of the Duke of Lancaster, 'bore him well,' which would have had special interest for Chaucer, his father's friend. The Miller's Tale, written with much the same vigour and enthusiasm, and making great fun out of a dapper parish clerk who 'played Herod on a stage high,' may, I think, be dated about this time (1391), and if so, we can understand Chaucer's anxiety to get away from dull Greenwich and Windsor when the Court was in London, and suspect he divided his time between the 'larks' in Smithfield and dazed absorption over his pen.

There is no doubt that, if Chaucer neglected these works, the world is the better for it: for overseeing bricklayers could be done by anyone not a poet; but anyone could not write the Canterbury Tales and the feats of knights, and the pranks of young clerks and 'young wives.'

While he held this office (viz. September 1390) a misfortune befell him. Some notorious thieves attacked him, near the 'foule Ok' (foul Oak), and robbed him of 20*l.* (nearly 200*l.* present currency) of the King's money, his horse, and other movables. This was a mishap likely enough to overtake any traveller in those days of bad roads and lonely marshes, for there was no great protection by police or soldiery in ordinary cases. The King's writ, in which he forgives Chaucer this sum of 20*l.*, is still extant.

That Chaucer loved trees and knew their uses is clear from the Knight's Tale and the Parliament of Fowls. The next thing we know of Chaucer after his retirement from the King's Works in 1391 is his appointment by the Earl of March 'joint-substitutionary Forester' of North Petherton in Somersetshire. Here we have a double deputyship, as the 'Forester' of the King was allowed not only a substitute, but each substitute had another, so that all these appointments are likely to have been sinecures. In 1398 Geoffrey Chaucer by the Countess of March's appointment appears as 'sole substitutionary forester' with probably larger perquisites and no more to do. Yet in 1393 he was still living at Greenwich, where he had work on hand three years before—poor, and asking Scogan to intercede for him 'where it would fructify'—that is, at Court—and jesting on their both being 'hoar and round of shape.' Chaucer was then about fifty-one. In 1394, King Richard granted him a pension of 20*l.* per annum for life. This was the year when the Duke of Lancaster married Katherine, Lady Swynford, who thus became 'the second lady in the kingdom;' but I fear Chaucer was still in difficulties, for we hear of many small loans which he obtained on this new pension during the next four years. In 1398, the King granted him writs to protect him against arrest—that is, forbidding the people to whom Chaucer owed money to put him in prison, which they would otherwise have done.

It is sad that during these latter years of his life, the great poet who had done so much, and lived so comfortably, should have grown so poor and harassed. He ought to have been so provided for that his great genius could unfold itself in new thoughts and fresh vigour. He had had large sums of money; his dead wife's sister, if our surmise be correct, was Duchess of Lancaster;¹ his son was holding grants and offices under the Duke of Lancaster (in March 1399 commuted to a pension of 20 marks) when he was made Constable of Wallingford Castle, and he himself was constantly associated with persons of high position and influence. Perhaps he wasted his money.² We may add here—to defend our great man's character—that alchemy was believed in by many men of exceptional mental power. Roger Bacon, discoverer of gunpowder and the magnifying glass, is perhaps the greatest name among them; and vain as seemed much of their toil with crucibles and furnaces, alembics and aludels, we owe a great deal to the first meritorious alchemists, who really paved the way to modern chemistry.

There is no reason to suppose Chaucer had any vice likely to affect his pocket; but alchemy was the scientific mania of the day, and high and low were ready to risk fortune and health in pursuit of the philosopher's stone, the elixir of life, the way to manufacture gold. And, at the same time, there is no other sufficient reason for the extreme poverty which the poet had fallen into.

The pursuit of the philosopher's stone and breaking health have both been suggested to account for his losses. In the year of his new appointment at North Petherton one Isabella Bukholt sues for a debt of 14*l.* (equal 140*l.* now) and the Sheriff's return was 'nichil habet' (the de Banco Rolls). In 1417 we find the post of forester at North Petherton in the hands of Thomas Chaucer. Perhaps, therefore, it did not involve residence. Geoffrey Chaucer was living in Westminster, in a new house, in 1399.

¹ See note 1, p. 12.

² Mr. Furnivall's ingenious suggestion that Chaucer's penury may possibly be due to his having dabbled in alchemy (an empirical branch of chemistry), is borne out by the technical knowledge displayed in the Canon's Yeoman's Tale, and in Troilus he compares falling tears to 'liquor out of alambic full fast' distilling.

CHAUCER'S POEMS.

The Canterbury Tales are full of cheerfulness and fun; full of love for the beautiful world, and full of sympathy for all who are in trouble or misery. They are twenty-five in number, nineteen without a blemish; six more or less coarse, because the scene is laid in vulgar surroundings. He wrote twelve other important books, and numberless smaller poems and songs, with which it was said 'the land fulfilled is over all.' The beauty of Chaucer's character, and his deep piety, come out very clearly in these Tales, as I think you will see. No one could have sung the 'ditties and songs glad' about birds in the medlar trees, and the soft rain on the 'small sweet grass,' and the 'lily on her stalk green,' and the sweet winds that blow over the country, whose mind was clouded by sordid thoughts, and narrow, selfish aims. No one could have sung so blithely of 'fresh Emily,' and with such good-humoured lenity even of the vulgar, chattering 'Wife of Bath,' whose heart was full of angry feelings towards his fellow-creatures. And no one, who was not in his heart a religious man, could have breathed the words of patience with which Arcites tries to comfort his friend, in their gloomy prison—or the greater patience of poor persecuted Griselda—or the fervent love of truth and honourable dealing, and a good life, which fills so many of his poems—or a hundred other touching prayers and tender words of warning. There was a large-heartedness and liberality about Chaucer's mind, as of one who had mixed cheerfully with all classes and saw good in all. His tastes were with the noble ranks among whom he had lived; but he had deep sympathy with the poor and oppressed, and could feel kindly even to the coarse and the wicked. He hated none but hypocrites; and he was never tired of praising piety and virtue.

Chaucer's writings probably supported him when he had no other means of subsistence; they were in fact the novels of the day, novels with a purpose, and his songs and roundels were doubtless sung in every household. Chaucer wrote a great many short poems, which I have not spoken of. Many have been lost or forgotten. Some may come back to us in the course of time and search. All we know of are well worth reading, with the rest of the Canterbury Tales not in this book: a few of these poems I have placed at the end of the volume; and among them one To his Empty Purse, written only the year before his death.

15† It is between the lines that historians glean the most valuable hints about the manners and habits of the English people, their condition, their aims, their virtues, their vices, their needs, the state of science and religion, down to the very dress of the various classes. Between the lines we get considerable light on Chaucer's own character and tastes. But the wit, the brilliant imagery and the accidents often veiled political allusions and put new suggestions into the minds of rich and poor. This was recognised after his death if not before: for subsequently Parliament condemned 'Chaucer's bokes' as dangerous and seditious satires, and these magnificent poems were just saved (blessings on the shrewd old courtier!) by a small majority as 'fables only.' (Act of 34 Henry VIII.)

Chaucer's works have been divided into four periods: first, when he was young and wrote many imitations of French and other songs, also the Death of Pity, and the Booke of the Duchesse; second, 1373 to 1384, in which authorities include Troilus and Cressida, the Second Nun's Tale, the Parliament of Fowls, Complaint of Mars, Annelida and Arcite, the House of Fame, and a few small pieces; third (greatest period), when he wrote most of his Canterbury Tales, his Good Counsel, Legend of Good Women, and Mother of God; fourth period, called the decline, though I think 'without sufficient reason, during which he finished his Canterbury Tales as far as he lived to do it, wrote his Treatise on the Astrolabe for his son, the Compleynt of Venus, Envoy to Scogan, Marriage, Gentleness, Balade to King Richard, Fortune, and his last poem of all, Compleynt to his Purse, sent to Henry IV. I do not see why his powers should be regarded as in decline, since most men of sixty are hardly past prime, certainly not past good work, and Chaucer died at that age unexpectedly, instead of living and writing up to seventy-five or eighty. It is possible that Chaucer's health may have been failing; but as he took the life-lease of the Westminster house in 1399 for 53 years, he could not himself have anticipated speedy death or felt too old to change his habits with his bettered fortunes.

There is only a little more I can tell you about Chaucer's life.

About 1398 another grant of a tun of wine, a common form of annuity, was bestowed upon him, equal to about 5*l.* a year, or 50*l.* our money. Chaucer was still evidently a warm politician, now rather on the people's side than the Crown's, since the Crown was in fault, though he had not greatly sympathised with Wat Tyler's followers, whom he sneered at for their noise—as their ultimate failure left them open to sneers. His Balade sent to King Richard is dated by the best authorities in 1397-8. In it he appeals to Richard to be honourable, not extortionate, steadfast in government, redressing wrong, and winning back his people's love. But Richard was no longer the frank brave boy who had soothed a furious army with a word, but weak and ill-tempered, led by bad companions and deaf to good counsel. He had just put to death his uncle, Duke of Gloucester, greatly ill used the Dukes of Warwick and Arundel; and the Duke of Lancaster, shrewdest of the brothers, took care of himself by keeping quiet. Now the people turned to his son, Henry of Hereford, whom Richard had also despoiled and outlawed with ingratitude and treachery, and, unwilling as they had been to be ruled by John of Gaunt, they invited Henry to claim the throne while Richard was quelling riots in Ireland, and the once beloved King was speedily deposed, and afterwards murdered in Pomfret Castle. Henry was a wiser and better man than Richard, and the people loved him. John of Gaunt did not live to see his son king, for he died when Henry was abroad; still it is pleasant to find that Henry of Lancaster shared his father's friendship for Chaucer, then a man of about sixty.¹ I dare say he had been rocked on Chaucer's knee when a little child, and had played with Chaucer's children. About this time Chaucer wrote his Complaint to his Purse, for he was in great want of money, addressing it to Henry IV. as 'Conqueror of Brutus' Albion.'

The new King had not been on the throne four days before he helped Chaucer. John of Gaunt himself could not have done it quicker. He granted him an annuity of 26*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.* a year (equal to about 270*l.* now), in addition to the other 20*l.* granted by Richard.

The royal bounty was only just in time, if Chaucer, as is supposed, did not long survive his old friend, the Duke of Lancaster, dying about a year after him, aged sixty, when Henry had been king thirteen months.

But our only ground for this conclusion is the subsequent want of notices of Chaucer. He may have lived until Thomas Chaucer succeeded him as Forester.

John of Gaunt was buried in St. Paul's, by the side of his first and best loved wife, Blanche; Geoffrey Chaucer was buried in Westminster Abbey, in the cloister (says Stow), 'but since (1556), Nicholas Brigham, gentleman, raised a monument to him in the south cross aisle of the church,' which is still there.

So ended the first, and almost the greatest, English writer, of whom no one has spoken an ill word, and who himself spoke no ill words.

Poet, soldier, statesman, and scholar, 'truly his better ne his pere, in school of my rules could I never find. . . . In goodness of gentle, manly speech he passeth all other makers.'²

¹ Remembering the discussion raised as to the year of Chaucer's birth, coupled with the tradition of his venerable looks, we may suggest that in those days men were older at sixty than now. The average duration of life was lower, and the paucity of comforts probably told on appearance.

² Author of the Testament of Love.

CHAUCER'S SPEECH.

And now for Chaucer's 'speech.' How shall I show you its 'goodness,' since it is so difficult to read this old English? A very little trouble is necessary. Do not be afraid of the odd spelling, for you must remember that it is not so much that Chaucer spells differently from us, as that we have begun to spell differently from Chaucer. He would think our English quite as odd, and not half so pleasing, as his own; for the old English, when spoken, sounded very pretty and stately, and not so much like a 'gabble' as ours, and he would think it much less reasonable, for spelling was phonetic in his day, that is, according to the pronunciation, whilst ours often defies pronunciation, derivation, and everything else.

I said a little while ago that our talking is much faster than talking was in Chaucer's time; it seems very curious that a language can be so changed in a few hundred years, without people really meaning to change it. But it has changed gradually. As we think faster, we speak faster. Little by little new words have come into use, and others have got 'old fashioned.' Even the English of one hundred years ago was very unlike our own. But the English of five hundred years ago was, of course, still more unlike.

Now, I have put two versions of Chaucer's poetry on the page, side by side. First, the lines as Chaucer made them, and then the same lines in English such as we speak. You can thus look at both, and compare them.

You ought to hear the verses in the two ways of pronouncing them, Chaucer's way and our way: but when you have grown a little used to the old-fashioned English, you will soon see how much more musical it sounds than our modern tongue. Besides, it is interesting to be able to see the words as Chaucer and his scrivener arranged them, to know exactly how he talked.

In Chaucer's time, as I have shown, a great deal of French was spoken in England, and it was mixed up with English more than it is now. The sound of old French and old English were something the same, both spoken very slowly, with a kind of drawl, as much as to say—'I am in no hurry. I have all day before me, and if you want to hear what I have got to say, you must wait till I get my words out.' The a's and e's pronounced as in French, the e at the end of words generally sounded, as in German now, if a consonant follows.

Note, then, that Chaucer is always rhythmical. Hardly ever is his rhythm a shade wrong: and therefore, roughly speaking, if you pronounce the words so as to preserve the rhythm, all will be well. When the final e must be sounded in order to make the rhythm right, sound it, but when it is not needed leave it mute.

So, if we wish to hear Chaucer's stories, which are thoroughly worth hearing, we must let him tell them in his own way, and try and understand his quaint old language. And if we do not pronounce the words as he meant, we shall find the verses will sound quite rough—some lines being longer than others, and some not even rhyming, and altogether slovenly.

Chaucer himself was very anxious that people should read his words properly, and says in his verses, as if he were speaking to a human being—

GLOSSARY.

great diversity	And for there is so gretȝ dyversité tongue	In Englissh, ¹ and in writynge of our tongȝ, pray	So preye I God that non miswritȝ thee defect	Ne thee mys-meterȝ for defaute of tongȝ.— Troilus .

To mis-metre is to read the metre wrong ; and the metre is the length of the line. If you read the length all wrong, it sounds very ugly.

Now, suppose those lines were read in modern English, they would run thus :—

And because there is so great a diversity
In English, and in writing our tongue,
So I pray God that none miswrite thee
Nor mismetre thee through defect of tongue.

How broken and ragged it all sounds ! like a gown that is all ragged and loose, and doesn't fit. It becomes regular and musical if it is pronounced properly.

You will find that when Chaucer's words are rightly pronounced, remembering that a final e is usually a syllable, all his lines are of an even length and sound well. Chaucer had a fine ear for poetical rhythm, unlike his predecessors : and if a fault occurs in the metre, it is by error of the scrivener. Chaucer was the first English poet who apparently cared for smooth metre.²

When you find any very hard words in Chaucer's verses which you cannot understand, look in the glossary and the modern version beside them ; and you will see what is the word for it nowadays. A few words which cannot be translated within the metre you will find at the bottom of the page. Many of the words are like French or German words : so if you have learnt these languages you will be able often to guess what the word means.

For instance, you know how, in French, when you wish to say, I will not go or I am not sure, two negatives are used, ne and pas : Je *n'*irai pas, or je ne suis pas sûr. Well, in Chaucer's time two negatives were used in English. He would have said, 'I n'll nat go,' and 'I n'am nat sure.'

¹ Alluding to the numerous dialects in use in England at the time.

² The teacher should here read to the child some lines with the proper pronunciation : see 'Forewords,' pp. xiii, xiv.

There are many lines where you will see two negatives. 'I n'am nat precious.' 'I ne told no deintee.' 'I wol not leve no tales.' 'I ne owe hem not a word.' 'There n'is no more to tell,' &c. Sometimes, however, ne is used by itself, without not or nat to follow. As 'it n'is good,' 'I not' (for 'I ne wot'), 'I n'll say—or sain,' instead of 'it is not good—I know not—I will not say.'

And, as in this last word sain (which only means say), you will find often an n at the end of words, which makes it difficult to understand them; and this betokens their Anglo-Saxon root. But you will soon cease to think that a very alarming difficulty if you keep looking at the modern version. As, 'I shall nat lien' (this means lie). 'I wol nat gon' (go): 'withouten doubt' (without). 'Ther wold I don hem no pleasance' (do); 'thou shalt ben quit' (be). 'I shall you tellen' (tell). There are many old English words which, though phonetically spelt, are absolutely German: as fele, many (German, viel); ferne, far (German, ferne); wonnen, to go (German, wohnen); hond, hand (German, Hand). There are old English words which are quite French: as daunt, control, from Fr. dompter; savour, to taste, from savourer; reddour, violence, from redeur; and many old words linger among the servant class and provincial people; as, to find—to provide (we still say 'all found' in servants' diet); the vulgar pronunciation of poor, pore, is good old English, which we unjustly cavil at; so is 'ketch,' for catch. The common 'Wo!' addressed to horses is an old word—ho, a cry to stop or slacken any action.

And I think you will also be able to see how much better some old words are for expressing the meaning than our words. For instance, how much nicer 'flittermouse' is than 'bat.' That is an old North-country word, and very German (Fledermaus). When you see a little bat flying about you know it is a bat because you have been told: but 'flittermouse' is better than bat, because it means 'floating mouse.' Now a bat is like a mouse, floating in the air. The word expresses the movement and the form of the creature.

Again—the old word 'herteles' (heartless), instead of without courage, how well it expresses the want of courage or spirit: we often say people have no heart for work, or no heart for singing, when they are sad, or ill, or weak. Heartless does not always mean cowardly; it means that the person is dejected, or tired, or out of spirits. We have left off using the word heartless in that sense, however, and we have no word to express it. When we say heartless we mean cruel or unkind, which is a perfectly different meaning. Such old words as 'wide-where,'

'anywhen,'¹ 'anywhy,'¹ 'somewhen,'¹ 'inwit,'¹ (conscience), 'wanhope' (despair), 'grummet,'¹ (cloud or sediment), 'doom' (judgment) and 'doomsman,' 'hurtle' (push down), 'misboding' (presentiment), 'heart-spoon' (centre of the chest), 'ding' (re-iterate), would be better revived in our language than many Latinisms which have come in, as though we had no real English words to use; especially when, as in some cases, there is no new word to replace the lost old one. We have no equivalent now for 'wide-where;' we use the cumbrous sentence 'in a large area'—nor for 'somewhen'—we must say 'at some time or other.'

One more instance. The word 'fret' was used for devouring. This just describes what we call 'nibbling' now. The moth fretting a garment—means the moth devouring or nibbling a garment. This is a word we have lost sight of now in the sense of eating; we only use it for 'complaining' or 'pining.' But a fretted sky—and the frets on a guitar—are from the old Saxon verb frete, to eat or devour, and describe a wrinkly uneven surface, like the part of a garment fretted by the moth; in the old sense it would be correct to say, 'She is fretted' or 'the trouble frets (devours or gnaws) her.' It is not correct to say 'she frets,' but we may say 'she frets herself,' i.e. worries or devours herself with grief. So you must not be impatient with the old words, which are sometimes much better for their purpose, more forcible, or more poetic, than the words we use nowadays.

¹ Old words, which do not occur in Chaucer.

CANTERBURY TALES.

CHAUCER'S PILGRIMS.

SOME of Chaucer's best tales are not told by himself. They are put into the mouths of other people. In those days there were no newspapers—indeed there was not much news—so that when strangers who had little in common were thrown together, as they often were in inns, or in long journeys, they had few topics of conversation : and they used to entertain each other by singing songs, or quite as often by telling their own adventures, or long stories such as Chaucer has written down and called the Canterbury Tales.

The reason for the name Canterbury Tales was because they were supposed to be told by a number of travellers who met at an inn, and rode together on a pilgrimage to St. Thomas a Becket's shrine at Canterbury : this was not so much a solemn religious penance as a very pleasant picnic party. About four days were commonly occupied in the journey thither, which was broken at Dartford, Rochester, and Ospringe : for the Canterbury road in the fourteenth century was often heavy with 'slough,' which Chaucer repeatedly alludes to, and the equally heavy horses found ten or twelve miles a day ample, particularly as no one was in a hurry.

But I shall now let Chaucer tell you about his interesting company in his own way, and it must be remembered that probably every character in it, as would be consistent with the fashion of the day, was a recognisable portrait.

He begins with a beautiful description of the spring—about the 17th of April, the time usually chosen for long journeys, or for any new undertaking, in those days.

When we go out into the gardens or the fields, and see the fresh green of the hedges and the white may-blossoms and the blue sky, we may well think of Chaucer and his Canterbury Pilgrims !

CHAUCER'S PROLOGUE.

GLOSSARY.

When, sweet	WHAN that Aprille with his schowres swoote	When April hath his sweetest showers brought root	The drought of Marche hath perced to the roote,	To pierce the heart of March and banish drought, such	And bathed every veyne in swich licour,	Then every vein is bathed by his power, liquor	Of which vertue engendred is the flour;	With fruitful juice engendering the flower;
flower	Whan Zephirus ¹ eek with his swete breethe	When the light zephyr, with its scented breath, also, breath inspired, grove	} Enspired hath in every holte and heethe	Stirs to new life in everyholt and heath
young, sun	The tendre cropes, and the yonge sonne	The tender crops, what time the youthful sun run	Hath in the Ram his halfe cours i-ronne,	Hath in the Ram his course but half- way run;
small birds make sleep,	} And smale fowles maken melodie, That slepen al the night with open eye,	And when the little birds make melody, That sleep the whole night long with open eye, pricketh them, their impulses	} So priketh hem nature in here corages:—	So Nature rouses instinct into song,— long, go	Thanne longen folk to gon on pilgrim- ages,	Then folk to go as pilgrims greatly long, seek, shores	And palmers ² for to seeken straunge strondes,	And palmers hasten forth to foreign strands distant (Germ. ferne) saints	} To ferne halwes, kouthe ³ in sondry londes;	To worship far-off saints in sundry lands;
county	And specially, from every schires ende Of Engelond, to Caunterbury they wende,	And specially, from every shire's end Of England, unto Canterbury they wend, go	The holy blisful martir ⁴ for to seeke,	Before the blessed martyr there to kneel, blessed, seek them	That hem hath holpen whan that they were seeke.	Who oft hath help'd them by his power to heal.
sick

¹ Zephyrus, or Zephyr: the god of the west wind. It is become a name for the wind of summer.

² Pilgrims who have brought a palm branch from the Holy Land.

³ Kouthe: known of, past participle of the verb conne, to know, or to be able. It was used much as savoir is in French—to be able to do, to know how to do a thing.

The verse means, 'To serve the saints they could, or they knew of, or knew how to serve.'

⁴ Thomas Beket, Chancellor of Henry II. He was Archbishop of Canterbury for eight years, and was murdered by servants of the King in 1170. He was canonized, or made a saint, by the Pope, after his death, and pilgrimages were then constantly made

It happened that one day in the spring, as I was resting at the Tabard¹ Inn, in Southwark, ready to go on my devout pilgrimage to Canterbury, there arrived towards night at the inn a large company of all sorts of people—nine-and-twenty of them: they had met by chance, all being pilgrims to Canterbury.² The chambers and the stables were roomy, and so every one found a place. And shortly, after sunset, I had made friends with them all, and soon became one of their party. We all agreed to rise up early, to pursue our journey together.³

But still, while I have time and space, I think I had better tell you who these people were, their condition and rank, which was which, and what they looked like. I will begin, then, with

THE KNIGHT.

GLOSSARY.

there,	A KNIGHT ⁴ ther was and that a	A knight there was, and that a worthy valuable	worthy man,	man,
	That from the tyme that he ferst	Who from the time in which he first bigan	began
ride	To ryden out, he lovede chyvalrye,	To ride afield, loved well all chivalry, frankness	Trouthe and honour, fredom and	Honour and frankness, truth and curtesie.	courtesy.
war	Ful worthi was he in his lordes werre,	Most worthy was he in his master's war,
	And therto hadde he riden, noman	And thereto had he ridden, none more further	ferre,	far,
	As wel in Cristendom as in hethenesse,	As well in Christian as in heathen lands,
ever	And evere honoured for his worthi-	And borne with honour many high nesse.	commands.

to his tomb in Canterbury Cathedral. In those days it was usual in sickness or peril to vow a pilgrimage to the shrine of some saint who was supposed to be able to help people by interceding with God, when pilgrims prayed him to. Erasmus alludes to the quantities of offerings on Thomas Becket's shrine, given by those who believed the saint had healed or helped them.

¹ A tabard was an outer coat without sleeves, worn by various classes, but best known as the coat worn over the armour, whereon there were signs and figures embroidered, by which to recognise a man in war or tournament: for the face was hidden by the helmet, and it was easier to detect a pattern in bright colours than engraved in dark steel. So, of course, the pattern represented the arms used by him. And thus the tabard got to be called the coat of arms. Old families still possess what they call their coat of arms, representing the device chosen by their ancestors in the lists; but they do not wear it any more: it is only a copy of the pattern on paper. A crest was also fastened to the helmet for the same purpose of recognition, and there is usually a 'crest' still surmounting the modern 'coat of arms.' The inn where Chaucer slept was simply named after the popular garment. It, or at least a very ancient inn on its site, was recently standing, and known as the Talbot Inn, High Street, Borough: Talbot being an evident corruption of Tabard. We may notice here that the Ploughman, described later on, wears a tabard, which may have been a kind of blouse or smock-frock, but was probably similar in form to the knight's tabard.

² People were glad to travel in parties for purposes of safety, the roads were so bad and robbers so numerous.

³ Probably all or many occupied but one bedroom, and they became acquainted on retiring to rest, at the ordinary time—sunset.

⁴ The word Knight (Knecht) really means servant. The ancient knights attended on the higher nobles, and were their servants, fighting under them in battle. For as there was no regular army, when a war broke out everybody who could bear arms engaged himself to fight under some king or lord, anywhere, abroad or in England, and was paid for his services. That was how hundreds of nobly born men got their living—the only way they could get it.

He had been at Alexandria when it was won : in Prussia ¹ he had gained great honours, and in many other lands. He had been in fifteen mortal battles, and had fought in the lists for our faith three times, and always slain his foe. He had served in Turkey and in the Great Sea.² And he was always very well paid too. Yet, though so great a soldier, he was wise in council ; and in manner he was gentle as a woman. Never did he use bad words in all his life, to any class of men : in fact perfect, } He was a verray perfight, gentil knight. He was a very perfect, noble knight.

GLOSSARY.

gentle }

As for his appearance, his horse was good, but not gay. He wore a gipon of fustian, all stained by his habergeon ;³ for he had only just arrived home from a long voyage.

THE SQUIRE.

there, son	With him ther was his sone, a yong	With him there was his son, a gay
	SQUIRE,	young squire, lover	} A lover, and a lusty bachelor, ⁴	A bachelor and full of boyish fire, merry
locks curled	With lokkes crulle as they were leyd in presse.	With locks all curl'd as though laid in a press, guess	Of twenty yeer he was of age I gesse.	And about twenty years of age, I guess.
wonder- fully nimble, great	} Of his stature he was of evenlengthe, And wonderly delyvere, and gret of strengthe.	In stature he was of an even length, And wonderfully nimble, and great of strength.
had been
	And he hadde ben somtyme in chivachie, ⁵	And he had followed knightly deeds of war
	In Flaundres, in Artoys, and in Picardie,	In Picardy, in Flanders, and Artois, litle	And born him wel, as of so litel space,	And nobly borne himself in that brief space, stand	In hope to stonden in his lady grace. ⁶ Embrowded ⁷ was he, as it were a mede	In ardent hope to win his lady's grace. Embroidered was he, as a meadow bright, that is what the knight Arviragus does in the Franklin's Tale; leaving his bride, to win honour (and money) by fighting wherever he could.

The squire waited on the knight much as the knight did on the earl—much in the position of an aide-de-camp of the present day. The page served earl, knights, ladies. But knight, squire, and page were all honourable titles, and borne by noblemen's sons. The page was often quite a boy, and when he grew older changed his duties for those of squire, till he was permitted to enter the knighthood. The present knight is described as being in a lord's service, and fighting under him 'in his war,' but he a man held in the highest honour.

¹ With the knights of the Teutonic order, who were always warring with the heathen neighbours.

² Part of the Mediterranean, along the coast of Palestine.

³ The hauberk, or habergeon, was a mail-coat, worn over the gipon (jupon), a kind of jerkin made of leather or, as here, fustian.

⁴ 'On nommait Bacheliers les chevaliers pauvres, les bas Chevaliers . . . quand ceux-ci avaient reçu la chevalerie, on les appelait Chevaliers-Bacheliers . . . quant à l'Écuier (Squire) c'était le prétendant à la Chevalerie.'—LE GRAND, Fabliaux et Contes.

⁵ Chivachie: military expeditions.

⁶ This youth, whose expeditions and habit of flute-playing are specially noted, is probably the portrait of some well-known gentleman's son.

⁷ Mr. Bell considers that these two lines refer to the Squire's complexion of red and white. Speght thinks it means freckled.

There is little doubt that the material here is what Chaucer means, for the presence of Chaucer calling the Squire 'gay' and gorgeously dressed, and his reference to the Squire's 'bright' in the next line.

GLOSSARY.	Al ful of fresshe floures, white and reede.	All full of freshest flowers, red and white;
playing on the flute }	Syngynge he was, or floytynge al the day;	Singing he was, or whistling all the day;
	He was as fressh as is the moneth of May.	He was as fresh as is the month of May.
	Schort was his goune, with sleeves long and wyde.	Short was his gown, his sleeves were long and wide, could, horse	Wel cowde he sitte on hors, and faire ryde.	Well he became his horse, and well could ride;
relate	He cowde songes make and wel endite,	He could make songs, and ballads, and recite, also, draw pictures }	Juste and eek daunce, and wel purtreye and write.	Joust and make pretty pictures, dance, and write.

As for the young squire's manners—

	Curteys he was, lowly, and servysable,	Courteous he was, lowly, and serviceable, carved	And carf ¹ byforn his fadur at the table.	And carved before his father at the table.

THE YEOMAN.

no more it pleased him, so }	A YEMAN had he, and servauntz nomoo soo;	A yeoman had he (but no suite beside: Without attendants thus he chose to ride,)
	And he was clad in coote and hood of grene.	And he was clad in coat and hood of green.
arrows	A shef of pocok arwes ² bright and kene,	A sheaf of peacock-arrows bright and keen, bore	Under his belte he bar ful thriftily, Wel cowde he dresse his takel yemanly;	Under his belt he carried thriftily; Well could he dress his tackle yeomanly!
arrows drooped not }	His arwes drowpede nought with fetheres lowe, ³	None of his arrows drooped with feathers low, bore	And in his hond he bar a mighty bowe. A knot-head ⁴ hadde he, with a broun visage.	And in his hand he held a mighty bow. A knot-head had he, and a sunburnt hue, face (Fr. visage) knew }	Of woode-craft cowde he wel al the usage;	In woodcraft all the usages he knew;
bore	Upon his arme he bar a gay bracer, ⁵	Upon his arm a bracer gay he wore,
buckler	And by his side a sward, and a boke-ler, ⁶	And by his side buckler and sword he bore,

¹ As it was the custom for sons to do.

² Peacocks' feathers on them instead of swans'.

³ It was a sign of the yeoman's carefulness in his business that they stuck out from the shaft instead of drooping.

⁴ Knot-head: the tippet or tail of the hood was knotted round his head, for convenience.

⁵ Bracer: a leathern defence for the arm: a similar shield is now worn in archery.

⁶ Bokeler—buckler: a small round shield—used chiefly for a warder to catch the blow of an adversary. Some pictures show the buckler to have been only the size of a plate, but it varied. In comparing the Wife of Bath's hat to a buckler, Chaucer could not have meant so small a one. It was usual for serving men of noble families to carry swords and bucklers when in attendance on them.

GLOSSARY.	And on that other side a gay daggere.	While opposite a dagger dangled free;
dressed well	Harneyed wel, and sharp as poynt	Polished and smart, no spear could ornament	of spere ;	sharper be.
represent- ing St. Christo- pher, shone	} A Cristofre on his brest of silver schene.	A silver 'Christopher' on his breast bore	An horn he bar, the bawdrik ¹ was of	was seen, forester :	grene :	A horn he carried by a baldrick green:
truly }	A forster was he sothly, as I gesse.	He was a thorough forester, I guess.

THE PRIORESS.

her	Ther was also a Nonne, a PRIORESSE,	There also was a Nun, a Prioress,
	That of hire smylyng was ful symple	Who of her smiling was most simple and coy ;	and coy ;
oath	Hire gretteste oath ² ne was but by	Her greatest oath was only 'by St.
	seynt Loy,	Loy,' called	And sche was cleped madame Eglentynne.	And she was called Madame Eglantine.
	Ful wel sche sang the servise divyne,	Full well she sang the services divine.
seemly	Entuned in hire nose ³ ful semely,	Entuned through her nose melodiously,
	And Frensch sche spak ful faire and	And French she spoke fairly and elegantly	fetyaly,	fluently, school	After the scole of Stratford atte Bowe,	After the school of Stratford atte Bow, her unknown	For Frensch of Parys was to hire unknowne.	For French of Paris—that she did not know.
meat, taught	At mete wel i-taught was sche	At meal-times she was very apt withalle ;	withal ;
let	Sche leet no morsel from hire lippes	No morsel from her lips did she let falle,	fall,
wetted	Ne wette hire fynGRES in hire sauce	Nor in her sauce did wet her fingers deepe. ⁴	deep ;
carry	Wel cowde sche carie a morsel, and	Well could she lift a titbit, and well wel keepe,	keep,
fell	That no drope ne fille uppon hire	That not a drop should fall upon her breste.	breast ;
courtesy, pleasure }	In curteisie was set ful moche hire leste.	To cultivate refinement was her taste.
	Hire overlippe wypede sche so clene, ⁵	Her upper lip she ever wiped so clean scrap	That in hire cuppe was no ferthing sene	That in her drinking-cup no scrap was seen

¹ Bawdrik—baldrick: ornamented strap to suspend the horn or dagger.

² Oaths were only too common among ladies as well as men. It was an exceptional refinement to use only a small oath. Tyrwhitt erroneously prints the name of the saint, Eloy, contraction of Eligius, a saint who, having been a worker in metals, was often invoked by smiths, &c. St. Loy is the old spelling of St. Louis of France, by whom the Prioress swore. She is probably a well-known personage; these Prioresses were the 'finishing governesses' of fashionable young ladies: hence her showy habits and efforts to practise Court manners.

³ Bell approves reading voise for nose, as Speght has actually done. It has not struck either of them that Chaucer is all the way through laughing at the fastidious and rather over-attractive nun!

⁴ Knives and forks were not in use—people had to use their fingers; but some used them more agreeably than others.

⁵ At meals one cup for drinking passed from guest to guest, instead of each having his own glass, as now. It was considered polite to wipe one's mouth well before drinking, so that the next drinker should find no grease in the wine. The great stress Chaucer lays on the pretty nun's courtesy seems to hint at very dirty habits among ordinary folk at meals!

GLOSSARY.

had drunk seemly	Of greece, whan sche dronken hadde hire draughte.	Of grease, when she had drank as she thought good,
	Ful semely after hire mete sche raughte.	And gracefully she reach'd forth for her food.
assuredly	And sikerly sche was of gret disport, And ful plesaunt, and amyable of port,	And she was very playful, certainly, And pleasant, and most amiable to see.
ways	And peyned hire to countrefete cheere	And mighty pains she took to counter- feit stately, manner	} Of court, and ben estatlich of manere,	Court manners, and be stately and discreet, worthy speak	And to ben holden digne of reverence. But for to spoken of hire conscience,	And to be held as worthy reverence. But then to tell you of her con- science!
	Sche was so charitable and so pitous ¹ Sche wolde weepe if that sche sawe a mous	She was so charitable and piteous That she would weep did she but see a mouse
	Caught in a trappe, if it were deed or bledde.	Caught in a trap, if it were dead or bled;
small hounds	Of smale houndes hadde sche, that sche fedde	And little dogs she had, which oft she fed
	With rosted flessch, or mylk, and wastel breed. ²	With roasted meat, and milk, and finest bread;
them	But sore wepte sche if oon of hem were deed,	But sore she wept if one of them were dead, rod	Or if men smot it with a yerde smerte:	Or, haply, with a rod were smitten smart.
	And al was conscience and tendre herte.	And all was conscience and tender heart!
	Ful semely hire wymple ³ i-pynched was:	Most daintily her wimple plaited was:
well-pro- portioned, eyes, glass	} Hire nose tretys: hire eyen greye as glas:	Her nose was straight; her eyes were grey as glass;
	Hire mouth ful smal, and therto softe and reed;	Her mouth was little, and so soft and red!
surely	But sikerly sche hadde a faire forheed.	Besides, she had a very fine forehead, broad, think	It was almost a spanne brood, I trowe:	That measured nigh a span across, I trow!
certainly, under- grown	} For hardly sche was not undurgrowe.	For certainly her stature was not low, neat	Ful fetys was hire cloke, as I was	And very dainty was the cloak she wore;
aware	waar.
small	Of smal coral aboute hire arme sche	Around her arm a rosary she bore, bare	baar

¹ Mr. Bell naively points out the innocence and 'ignorance of the ways of the world,' which pervade the whole of the 'simple Prioress's character;' but you will notice that in laughing at the cheerful nun's affectation of court manners, Chaucer never once gives her credit for very high or noble character, though he does not speak ill-naturedly. I have ere now alluded to his dislike of the Church, friars, nuns, and all included: and here he shows that her charitableness and compassion on wholly inadequate objects. She is extravagant to the last degree in feeding her dogs, and weeping for dead mice; but nothing is said of charity to the poor, or any good works at all. She is too intent on fascinating everybody, and dressing smartly. There is sharp sarcasm in all this.

² Wastel bread—a kind of cake—the most expensive of all bread.

³ Wimple: a loose covering for the neck, close — — — — — tied daintily; worn

GLOSSARY.

set of beads	A peire of bedes ¹ gauded al with grene;	Of coral small, with little gauds of green, jewel, bright} (Ger. schön)	And thereon heng a broch of gold ful schene,	And thereon hung a golden locket shene;
written	On which was first i-write a crowned A,	On which was graven first a crowned A,
	And after, Amor vincit omnia . ²	And after, Amor vincit omnia .

only 3 three priests.
The Prioress was attended by another nun, who acted as her chaplain, and mastery	A MONK ther was, a fair for the maistrie, ³	A monk there was—one safe to rise no doubt, hunting	An out-rydere, that lovede venerye;	A hunter, and devoted rider out;

THE MONK.

be	A manly man, to ben an abbot able.	Manly—to be an abbot fit and able,
dainty horse	Ful many a deynté hors hadde he in stable:	For many a dainty horse had he in stable;
when	And when he rood, men might his bridel heere ⁴	And when he rode, his bridle you could hear hear jingling, clear also	} Gynglen in a whistlyng wynd as cleere, And eek as lowde as doth the chapel belle,	} Jingle along a-whistling wind as clear And quite as loud, as doth the chapel bell, where, religious house	} Ther as this lord was kepere of the selle.	} Where this good monk is keeper of the cell.

This jolly monk cared for little else but hunting, though this has never been considered a proper pursuit for the clergy. He was indifferent to what was said of him, and spared no cost to keep the most splendid greyhounds and horses for hard riding and hare-hunting. I saw his sleeves edged with the rare fur gris at the wrist, and that the finest in the land; his hood was fastened under his chin with a curious gold pin, which had a love-knot in the largest end. His pate was bald and shiny, his eyes rolled in his head; his favourite roast dish was a fat swan.⁵

THE FRIAR.

friar, wanton	A FRERE ther was, a wantoun and a merye,	A friar there was, so frisky and so merry—solemn	A lymytour, ⁶ a ful solempne man.	A limitour, a most important man,

¹ A rosary, the coral beads of which were divided by smaller ones, or gauds, of a green colour.

² 'Love conquers all things.' The Prioress might have twisted this device to refer to the text, 'The greatest of these is charity;' but the double entendre is apparent.

³ From a French phrase, bone pur la maistrise=good to excel all others. The monk bids fair to excel all others or outstrip the rest in promotion, on account of his worldliness.

⁴ 'The custom of hanging small bells on the bridle and harness of horses is still observed on the Continent for the purpose of giving notice to foot-passengers to get out of the way; but it was no doubt often used for ostentation. So Wiclif inveighs against the clergy in his Triologe for their 'fair hors, and jolly and gay sadels, and bridels ringing by the way.'

⁵ A bird more commonly eaten in those days than it is now, but expensive even then.

⁶ Lymytour: a friar licensed to beg within a certain district or limit. The friar, no very pleasing character, is described as making such a good thing out of begging, that he bribed his fellow?

GLOSSARY.

is able to do, knows, or can do	} In alle the ordres foure ¹ is noon that	In the four orders there is none that dalliance, language	} can So moche of daliaunce and fair lan- gage.	can Outdo him in smooth talk and playful- ness.
familiar everywhere, country	} Ful wel biloved and famulier was he With frankeleyns ² overal in his cuntre,	He was most intimate and popular With all the franklins dwelling near and far, also, rich	And eek with worthi wommen of the toun :	And with the wealthy women of the town.
easy when, knew	Ful sweetely herde he confessioun, And plesaunt was his absolucioun; ³ He was an esy man to yeve penaunce Ther as he wiste han a good pitaunce ;	So sweetely did he hear confession ay In absolution pleasant was his way. In giving penance, very kind was he When people made it worth his while to be ;
poor, give sign, shrieve	For unto a poure ordre for to yive Is signe that a man is wel i-schrive.	For giving largely to some order poor Shows that a man is free from sin, be sure, boast	For if he yaf, he dorste make avaunt,	And if a man begrudged him not his dole, knew	He wiste that a man was repentaunt. For many a man so hard is of his herte,	He knew he was repentant in his soul. For many a man so hard of heart we see, heart he may smart	} He may not wepe although him sore smerte ; Therefore in-stede of wepyng and prayeres,	He cannot weep, however sad he be ; Therefore, instead of weeping and long prayers, may	Men moot yive silver to the poure freres.	Men can give money unto the poor friars.

He carried a number of pretty pins and knives about him that he made presents of to people ; and he could sing well, and play on the rotta.⁴ He never mingled with poor, ragged, sick people—it is not respectable to have anything to do with such,—but only with rich people who could give good dinners.

affection	Somwhat he lippede for his wantow- nesse,	Somewhat he lispéd for his wanton- ness, tongue	To make his Englissch swete upon his tunge ;	To make his English sweet upon his tongue ; and when he played and sang, his eyes twinkled like the stars on a frosty night.

to come within his particular haunt, and interfere with his doings: an unprincipled dandy, who is another instance of Chaucer's sarcasm against the Church.

¹ There were four orders of mendicant friars—Dominicans, Franciscans, Carmelites, and Augustins.

² Frankelins: a franklin was a rich landholder, free of feudal service, holding possessions immediately from the king.

³ Confession, absolution, and penance, sacraments in the Roman Catholic Church.

⁴ The rotta was an ancient instrument of the guitar tribe.

THE MERCHANT.

GLOSSAR

	A MARCHAUNT was ther with a forked	A merchant was there with a forked beard	berd,	beard,
motley, horse	} In motteleye, ¹ and highe on hors he	In motley dress'd—high on his horse
	sat,	he sat,
Flemish beaver	} Uppon his heed a Flaundrisch bevere	And on his head a Flemish beaver hat.
	hat.

THE CLERK.

Oxford	A CLERK ² there was of Oxenford	A clerk of Oxford was amid the throng, logic, gone	also, That unto logik hadde longe i-go.	Who had applied his heart to learning long.
lean, horse	As lene was his hors as is a rake, And he was not right fat, I undertake	His horse, it was as skinny as a rake. And he was not too fat, I'll undertake!
looked hollow uppermost short cloak	} But lokede holwe, and therto soberly.	But had a sober, rather hollow look;
	Ful thredbare was his overest courtiepy.	And very threadbare was his outer cloak.
got	For he hadde geten him yit no benefice,	For he as yet no benefice had got:
	Ne was so worldly for to have office.	Worldly enough for office he was not!
he would	For him was levere have at his beddes heede	or liefer would he have at his bed's head
	Twenty bookes, clad in blak or reede,	A score of books, all bound in black or red,
	Of Aristotle, and his philosophie,	Of Aristotle, and his philosophy, robes	Then robes riche, or fithele, or sawtrie.	Than rich attire, fiddle, or psaltery.

Yet, although the poor scholar was so wise and diligent, he had hardly any money, but all he could get from his friends he spent on books and on learning; and often he prayed for those who gave him the means to study. He spoke little—never more than he was obliged—but what he did speak was always sensible and wise.

tending to	Sownynge in moral vertu was his speche,	Full of true worth and goodnees was his speech, would, learn	And gladly wolde he lerne, and gladly teche.	And gladly would he learn, and gladly teach.

Then there was a

¹ Motley, or dresses of two colours, were so popular that they became common—later on they were the badge of the lower orders, or clowns, and later still of the Fools, who were drawn from the lower orders. The institution of Fools was based on the silly and vulgar habit of making fun of ignorant or afflicted persons, though in time it was found 'to take a wise man to make a good fool.' Our 'clown' is the last relic.

² Clerk: a scholar probably preparing for the priesthood. In many Roman Catholic countries it was the custom till very lately for poor scholars to ask and receive contributions from the people for the expenses of their education. They were often extremely indigent, coming from the labouring classes. The parson, for instance, spoken of later, is said to be brother of the ploughman travelling with him. The poor scholar and the good parson are 'birds of a feather.'

SERJEANT-OF-LAW.

GLOSSARY.

was not, } abbr. ne was }

Nowher so besy a man as he ther nas,
And yit he seemede besier than he was.

Nowhere there was a busier man than he,
Yet busier than he was, he seemed to be.

mixed fabric }

He roode but hoonly in a medlé coote

He rode but homely-clad, in medley coat,

belt }

Gird with a seynt of silk, with barres smale.

Girt with a belt of silk, with little bars.

THE FRANKLIN.

A FRANKLEIN was in his compaignye;
Whit was his berde, as is the dayesye.

There was a Franklin in his company,
And white his beard was, as the daisies be.

morning }

Of his complexioun he was sangwýn, Wel lovede he by the morwe a sop in wyn.

In his complexion he was sanguine;
Well loved he in the morn a sop of wine.

baked meats } (pies) }

Withoute bake mete was nevere his hous,
Of flessch and fisch, and that so plentevous

Without good meat, well cooked, was ne'er his house,
Both fish and flesh, and that so plenteous,

It snowed }

Hit snewed¹ in his hous of mete and drynke,
Of alle deyntees that men cowde thynke.

It seemed as though it snowed with meat and drink,
And every dainty that a man could think.

sundry }

After the sondry sesouns of the yeer So chaungede he his mete and his soper.

According to the seasons of the year
He changed his meats and varied his good cheer.

supper }

His table dormant² in his halle alway Stood redy covered al the longe day.

His table-dormant in his hall alway Stood ready furnished forth throughout the day.

He was the most hospitable of men, and very well-to-do. He kept open house, for everybody to come and eat when they liked. He had often been sheriff and knight of the shire;³ for he was very highly thought of.

all An anlas and a gipser al of silk Heng at his gerdel, whit as morne mylk.

A dagger and a hawking-pouch of silk Hung at his girdle, white as morning milk.

A Haberdasher, a Carpenter, a Webber, a Dyer, and a Tapiser came next, with the Cook they brought with them, a Shipman 'with hew al broune,' a Doctor of Physic, well-to-do, but of a saving turn—he kepte that he wan in pesti-

¹ Or, abounded: the O. E. sneue, like the Prov. Eng. snee, snie, snive, snew, signifies to swarm.

² The table dormant was a permanent table, not a board on trestles such as the ordinary one. It was only used by very rich people, for it was a new fashion, and expensive.

³ Knight of the shire, or M.P. Ch was knight of the shire for Kent in 18

lence'—and a 'worthy woman,' called the Wife of Bath, because she lived near that city.

THE WIFE OF BATH.¹

She was so expert in weaving cloth, that there was no one who could come up to her; and she thought so much of herself, that if another woman even went up to the church altar before her, she considered it a slight upon her. The Wife of Bath was middle-aged, and somewhat deaf: she had had five husbands, but they had all died—she was such a shrew: and she had taken pilgrimages to Cologne and Rome, and many other places; for she had plenty of money, as one might see by her showy dress.

GLOSSARY.

hose	Hire hosen weren of fyn scarlet reed,	Her stockings were of finest scarlet red,
	Ful streyte yteyd, and schoos ful moyst and newe.	All straitly tied, and shoes all moist and new.
	Bold was hire face, and fair, and rede of hew.	Bold was her face, and fair, and red of hue.

She was well wimpled with fine kerchiefs, and her hat was as broad as a buckler or a target.

THE PARSON.

Then came the poor Parson—poor in condition, but 'rich in holy thought and work'—who was so good, and staunch, and true, so tender to sinners and severe to sin, regarding no ranks or state, but always at his post, an example to men.

wide	Wyð was his parisch, and houses fer asonder,	Wide was his parish, the houses far asunder, left (ceased) } not	But he ne lafte not for reyne ne thunder,	But never did he fail, for rain or thunder, mischief } furthest } much and } little	In siknesse nor in meschief to visite The ferrest in his parissche, moche and lite, Upon his feet, and in his hond a staf.	In sickness and in woe to visit all Who needed—far or near, and great and small— On foot, and having in his hand a staff.
knowledge	But Cristes lore and his apostles twelve	Christ's and the twelve apostles' law he taught, followed	He taughte and ferst he folwede it himselfe. ²	But first himself obey'd it, as he ought.

¹ Possibly the Wives of Bath were eminent for skill, insolence, and free living. The neighbourhood of Bath was noted for cloth-making.

² Chaucer speaks, you see, in very different terms of the poor and conscientious parish priest (who was supported only by his benefice and tithes of the people—a small income) from what he does of the monastic orders, corrupted by the wealth they had accumulated. He was probably a Wicliffite, as mine host says he 'smells a Lollard in the wind' when the Parson checks his bad language. Bell says: 'It was quite natural that Chaucer, the friend of John of Gaunt, should praise the parochial clergy, who were poor, and therefore not formidable, at the expense of the rich monastic orders who formed the only barriers which then existed against the despotic power of the aristocracy.' But, however that may be, there is no doubt that these parish parsons actually were a much better and more honest class of men than the monks, and the begging friars,

THE PLOUGHMAN.

Then the parson's brother, who was only a Ploughman, and worked hard in the fields, kind to his neighbours, ever honest, loving God above all things. He wore a tabard, and rode on a mare.¹

There was also a Reeve, 'a slender choleric man' from Norfolk:² a Miller, a Summoner, a Pardoner, a Manciple,³ and myself [Chaucer].

THE SUMMONER.

The Summoner⁴ was a terrible-looking person, and rode with the Pardoner, who was his friend: the Pardoner singing a lively song, and the Summoner growling out a bass to it, with a loud, harsh voice. As for his looks, he had

GLOSSARY.

	A fyr-reed cherubynes face, ^s	A ‘fiery-cherubin’ red face, pimply	For sawceflem he was with eyghen narwe.	For pimply he was, with narrow eyes.

Children were sore afraid of him when they saw him, he was so repulsive, and so cruel in extorting his gains. He was a very bad man: for though it was his duty to call up before the Archdeacon's court anybody whom he found doing wrong, yet he would let the wickedest people off, if they bribed him with money; and many poor people who did nothing wrong he forced to give him their hard earnings, threatening else to report them falsely to the Archdeacon. He carried a large cake with him for a buckler, and wore a garland big enough for the sign-post of an inn.⁶

THE PARDONER.

The Pardoner⁷ was a great cheat too, and so the friends were well matched; he had long thin hair, as yellow as wax, that hung in shreds on his shoulders. He wore no hood, but kept it in his wallet: he thought himself quite in the tip-top of fashion.

and all the rest, were at this time. They were drawn, like the Roman Catholic secular clergy of the present day, from the labouring classes. Chaucer tells us that the ploughman was the parson's brother. Amongst these parsons Wiclif found most followers, and we know that Chaucer sympathised with the Duke of Lancaster's patronage of Wiclif. It has been surmised that the parson is the great reformer himself.

¹ No one of good position rode on a mare in the middle ages. This good and honest ploughman may, not improbably, have suggested to Langland his main figure in his Vision of Piers Plowman.

² A steward or bailiff.

⁵ An officer whose duty it is to purchase victuals for an inn of court, or a college.

4 Summoner : an officer employed by the ecclesiastical courts to summon any persons who broke the law to appear before the archdeacon, who imposed what penalty he thought fit. The Summoners found it to their interest to accept bribes not to report offences: therefore bad people who could afford to pay got off, whilst those who could not afford to pay were punished with rigour. Many Summoners extorted bribes by threatening to say people had transgressed the law who had not; and so they got to be detested by the masses, and Chaucer's hideous picture gives the popular notion of a Summoner.

⁵ A face as red as the fiery cherubin: a rather profane simile! In many ancient pictures we find the cherubin painted wholly scarlet; and the term had become a proverb. 'Sawce-flem' is from salsum flegma, a disease of the skin.

⁶ See note ¹, p. 166.

⁷ Pardoner: Seller of the Pope's indulgences.

GLOSSARY.

except	Dischevele, sauf his cappe, he rood al bare.	Dishevell'd, save his cap, he rode bare-head :
such, eyes	Suche glaryng eyghen hadde he, as an hare.	Such glaring eyes, like to a hare, he had !
	A vernicle ¹ hadde he sowed on his cappe ;	A vernicle was sewed upon his cap ;
before	His walet lay byforn him in his lappe.	His wallet lay before him, in his lap.
truly	But trewely to tellen atte laste, He was in churche a noble ecclesiaste. Well cowde he rede a lessoun or a storye, ²	But honestly to tell the truth at last, He was in church a noble ecclesiast. Well could he read a lesson or a story, best of all	But altherbest he sang an offertorie :	But ever best he sang the offertory :
knew, when	For wel he wyste, whan that song was songe	For well he knew that after he had sung, preach, whet	He moste preche, and wel affyle his tonge.	For preaching he must polish up his tongue, win	To wynne silver, as he right wel cowde :	And thus make money, as he right well could :
	Therefore he sang ful meriely and lowde.	Therefore he sang full merrily and loud.

Now I have told you as much as I can what people came into the Tabard Inn that night, and why they were all travelling together, and where they were going.

Our host³ made us very welcome, and gave us a capital supper. He was a thoroughly good fellow, our host—a large, stout man, with bright, prominent eyes, sensible and well behaved, and very merry.

After supper, he made us all laugh a good deal with his witty jests ; and when we had all paid our reckonings, he addressed us all :—

truly	And sayde thus : 'Lo, lordynges, trewely	And said to us : 'My masters, certainly shall	Ye ben to me right welcome hertely :	Ye be to me right welcome heartily :
lie	For by my trouthe, if that I schal not lye,	For by my truth, and flattering none, say I, saw	I ne saugh this year so mery a companye	I have not seen so merry a company inn (Fr. auberge)	} At oones in this herbergh, as is now.	At once inside my inn this year, as now !
	Fayn wolde I do yow mirthe, wiste I how.	I'd gladly make you mirth if I knew how.
	And of a mirthe I am right now by-thought,	And of a pleasant game I'm just by-thought do, ease	To doon you eese, and it schal coste nought.'	To cheer the journey—it shall cost you nought !'

'Whoever wants to know how, hold up your hands.' We all held up our hands, and begged him to say on.

¹ A vernicle—diminutive of Veronike—was a small copy of the face of Christ, worn as a token that he had just returned from a pilgrimage to Rome.

² The Pardoner's eloquence and musical gifts account, perhaps, for the exquisite story he afterwards tells.

³ The Host is elsewhere mentioned by name—Harry Bailly, no doubt the well-known master of a well-known inn. His facial characteristics are dwelt upon.

'Well, my masters,' said he, 'I say that each of you shall tell the rest four stories—two on the way to Canterbury, and two on the way home. For you know it is small fun riding along as dumb as a stone. And whichever in the party tells the best story, shall have a supper at this inn at the cost of the rest when you come back. To amuse you better, I will myself gladly join your party, and ride to Canterbury at my own expense, and be at once guide and judge; and whoever gainsays my judgment shall pay for all we spend by the way. Now, tell me if you all agree, and I will get me ready in time to start.'

We were all well pleased; and the next morning, at daybreak, our clever host called us all together, and we rode off to a place called the Watering of St. Thomas.¹ There we halted, and drew lots who should tell the story first, knight, clerk, lady prioress, and everybody.

The lot fell to the knight, which every one was glad of; and as soon as we set forward, he began at once.

NOTES BY THE WAY.

[One of the things most deserving of notice in reading Chaucer is his singularly strong grasp of character. In the Canterbury Tales this is self-evident, and the succinct catalogue of the thirty-one pilgrims, which in feebler hands would have been dry enough, is a masterpiece of good-humoured satire, moral teaching, and, above all, photographic portraits from life. You will notice that Chaucer meant to make his Canterbury Tales much longer than he lived to do. His innkeeper proposes that each of the pilgrims shall tell four stories. Only twenty-four of these exist.

You will never find any character drawn by Chaucer acting, speaking, or looking inconsistently. He has always well hold of his man, and he turns him inside out relentlessly. He very seldom analyses thought or motives, but he shows you what is so clearly, that you know what must be without his telling you.

The good-humoured naïveté of mine host, like all his class, never forgetful of business in the midst of play, is wonderfully well hit off; for the innkeeper clearly would be the gainer by this pleasant stratagem: and he prevents any one's giving him the slip by going with them to Canterbury and back. The guests are glad enough of his company, for he could be especially useful to them on the way.

The stories, also, will be found perfectly characteristic of the tellers—there is no story given to a narrator whose rank, education, or disposition make it inconsistent. Each tells a tale whose incidents savour of his natural occupation and sympathies, and the view each takes of right or wrong modes of conduct is well seen in the manner as well as the matter.

Chaucer's personal distrust of and contempt for the contemporary Church and its creatures was the natural and healthy aversion of a pure mind and a sincerely religious heart to a form of godliness denying the power thereof—a Church which had become really corrupt. It is significant of his perfect artistic thoroughness that, with this aversion, he never puts an immoral or unfitting tale into the mouth of nun or friar; for it would be most unlikely that these persons, whatever their private character might be, would criminate themselves in public.

The characters are no doubt all portraits.]

¹ Mr. Wright says this place was situated at the second milestone on the old Canterbury road.

THE KNIGHT'S TALE.¹

ONCE upon a time, as old stories tell us, there was a duke named Theseus, lord and governor of Athens, in Greece, and in his time such a conqueror that there was none greater under the sun. Full many a rich country owned his sway.

GLOSSARY.	That with his wisdam and his chivalrie,	What with his wisdom and his chivalry kingdom, Amazons once, called fresh	} He conquereð al the regne of Femenye, That whilom was i-cleped Citheè ; And weddede the fresshe quene Ipolita, ² And broughte hire hoom with him in his contrè,	The kingdom of the Amazons won he, That was of old time naméd Scythia, And wedded the fresh Queen Ipolita, And brought her to his own land sumptuously, country much. solemnity	} With mochel glorie and gret solempnité ;	With pomp and glory, and great festivity ;
also, sister	And eek hire yonge suster Emelye, And thus with victorie and with melodye	And also her young sister Emelye. And thus with victory and with melody
muske duke	Lete I this noble duk to Athenes ryde,	Let I this noble duke to Athens ride, arme	And al his host, in armes him biside.	And all his glittering hosts on either side.

And, certainly, if it were not too long to listen to, I would have told you fully how the kingdom of the Amazons was won by Theseus and his host. And of the great battle there was for the time between Athens and the Amazons ; and how Ipolita—the fair, hardy queen of Scythia—was besieged ; and about the feast that was held at the wedding of Theseus and Ipolita, and about the tempest at their home-coming. But all this I must cut short.

plough	I have, God wot, a large feeld to ere ;	I have, God knows, a full wide field to sow, weak	And wayke ben the oxen in my plough.	And feeble be the oxen in my plough.

I will not hinder anybody in the company. Let everyone tell his story in turn, and let us see now who shall win the supper !

I will describe to you what happened as Theseus was bringing home his bride to Athens.

¹ The Knight's Tale is an adaptation from Boccaccio's Teseide. It can hardly be called a translation, as out of 2,250 lines Chaucer has only translated 270 ; only 374 bear a general, and 132 a slight, likeness to the Teseide. Boccaccio himself owed something to Statius. It was probably written in 1387.

² Tyrwhitt.

GLOSSARY.	This duk, of whom I make menciohn,	This duke afresaid, of deserved renown, come	Whan he was comen almost unto the toun,	When he had almost come into the town prosperity	In al his wele and in his moste pryde,	In all his splendour and in all his pride, aware	He was war, as he cast his eyghe aside,	Perceived, as he cast his eyes aside, kneeled.	} Wher that ther knelede in the hye weye	A company of ladies, in a row, high-way
two	A companye of ladies, tweye and tweye,	Were kneeling in the highway—two by two,
each, black	Ech after other, clad in clothes blake;	Each behind each, clad all in black array;
woe	But such a cry and such a woo they make,	But such an outcry of lament made they,
there is not	That in this world nys creature lyvyng,	That in this world there is no living thing
lamenting	That herde such another weymentynge,	That e'er heard such another outcrying; cease.	} And of that cry they nolde nevere stenten,	Nor would they cease to wail and to complain would not caught	Til they the reynes of his bridel henten.	Till they had caught him by his bridle-rein.
	'What folk be ye that at myn hom comynge	'What folk are ye who at my home-coming perturb	Pertourben so my feste ¹ with cryinge?' Quod Theseus; 'Have ye so gret envye Of myn honour, that thus compleyne and crie?	Perturb my festival with murmuring,' Quoth Theseus. 'Or do you envy me Mine honour that ye wail so woefully?
injured	Or who hath yow misboden or offended?	Or who hath injured you, or who offended?
	And telleth me, if it may ben amended; And why that ye ben clothed thus in blak?'	Tell me, if haply it may be amended, And why are all of you in black arrayed?'
black
them, spoke	The oldest lady of hem alle spak . . .	The oldest lady of them all then said—

'Lord, to whom fortune has given victory, and to live ever as a conqueror, we do not grudge your glory² and honour, but we have come to implore your pity and help. Have mercy on us in our grief. There is not one of us that has not been a queen or duchess; now we are beggars, and you can help us if you will.

'I was wife to King Capaneus, who died at Thebes:³ and all of us who kneel and weep have lost our husbands there during a siege; and now Creon, who is king of Thebes, has piled together these dead bodies, and will not suffer them to be either burned or buried.'

And with these words all the ladies wept more piteously than ever, and prayed Theseus to have compassion on their great sorrow.

The kind duke descended from his horse, full of commiseration for the poor

¹ Feste in this place means rather festival than feast, as Theseus was only on his way to the city.

² At this period the personal pronoun you was used only in the plural sense, or in formal address, as on the Continent now; whilst thou implied familiarity. The Deity, or any superior, was therefore addressed as you: intimates and inferiors as thou. Throughout Chaucer the distinction is noticeable: but as the present mode reverses the order, I have in my lines adhered to no strict principle, but have used the singular or plural personal pronoun according as seemed most forcible.

³ Thebes, in Greece.

ladies. He thought his heart would break with pity when he saw them so sorrowful and dejected, who had been lately of so noble a rank.

He raised them all, and comforted them, and swore an oath that as he was a true knight, he would avenge them on the tyrant king of Thebes in such a fashion that all the people of Greece should be able to tell how Theseus served Creon!

The duke sent his royal bride and her young sister Emelye onward to the town of Athens, whilst he displayed his banner, marshalled his men, and rode forth towards Thebes. For himself, till he had accomplished this duty, he would not enter Athens, nor take his ease for one half-day therein.

The duke's white banner bore the red statue of Mars upon it; and by his banner waved his pennon, which had the monster Minotaur (slain by Theseus in Greece) beaten into it in gold. Thus rode this duke—thus rode this conqueror and all his host—the flower of chivalry—till he came to Thebes.

To make matters short, Theseus fought with the King of Thebes, and slew him manly as a knight in fair battle, and routed his whole army. Then he destroyed the city, and gave up to the sorrowful ladies the bones of their husbands, to burn honourably after their fashion.

When the worthy duke had slain Creon and taken the city, he remained all night in the field. During the pillage which followed, it happened that two young knights were found still alive, lying in their rich armour, though grievously wounded. By their coat-armour¹ the heralds knew they were of the blood royal of Thebes; two cousins, the sons of two sisters. Their names were Palamon and Arcite.

These two knights were carried as captives to Theseus' tent, and he sent them off to Athens, where they were to be imprisoned for life; no ransom would he take.

Then the duke went back to Athens crowned with laurel, where he lived in joy and in honour all his days, while Palamon and Arcite were shut up in a strong tower, full of anguish and misery, beyond all reach of help.

Thus several years passed.

GLOSSARY.		This passeth yeer by yeer, and day by day,	Thus passeth year by year, and day by day, morning	see	Till it fel oones in a morwe of May	Till it fell once upon a morn of May
		That Emelye, that fairer was to scene	That Emelye—more beauteous to be seen flowers	Than is the lilie on hire stalkes grene,	Than is the lily on his stalk of green,
		And fresscher than the May with floures newe—	And fresher than the May with flowers new strove	hue	For with the rose colour strof hire hewe,	(For with the rose's colour strove her hue;
abbr. newot. know not		I n'ot which was the fayrere of hem two—	I know not which was fairer of the two),
drressed		Er it were day as was her wone to do, Sche was arisen, and al redy dight;	Early she rose as she was wont to do, All ready robed before the day was bright;

¹ A garment worn over the armour, on which the armorial bearings were usually embroidered, for the purpose of recognition. See tabard, p. 33.

GLOSSARY.

sloth	For May wole han no sloggardyne anyght. The sesoun priketh every gentil herte, And maketh him out of his sleep to sterte,	For May time will not suffer sloth at night; The season pricketh every gentle heart, And maketh him out of his sleep to start, arise, thine	And seith, Arys, and do thin observaunce. ¹ This maketh Emelye han remembrance	And saith, Rise up, salute the birth of spring! And therefore Emelye, remembering do	To don honour to May, and for to ryse.	To pay respect to May, rose speedily:
clothed	I-clothed was sche fressh for to devyse. ²	Attired she was all fresh and carefully, yellow	Hire yolwe heer was browdid in a tresse, Byhynde hire bak, a yerde long I gesse.	Her yellow hair was 'braided in a tress Behind her back, a full yard long, I guess,
	And in the gardyn at the sonne upriste Sche walketh up and down wher as hire liste.	And in the garden as the sun uprose She wandered up and down where as she chose, pleased	Schegadereth floures, party whyte and reede,	She gathereth flowers, part'y white and red, subtle	To make a sotil gerland ³ for hire heede, And as an aungel hevenliche sche song.	To make a cunning garland for her head. And like an angel's singing rose her song.
sang	The grete tour that was so thikke and strong Which of the Castell was the cheef dongeoun (Ther as the knightes weren in prisoun Of which I toldē you, and tellen schal) Wasevenejoynant to the gardeyn wal, ⁴	The mighty tower, that was so thick and strong, The castle's chiefest dungeon (wherein pent The knights were doom'd to life-imprisonment, Of which I told you some, but not yet all) Was close adjoining to the garden wall

¹ The rites and ceremonies observed on the approach of spring from the earliest times in many countries, have now died out in England, but they are among the most natural and beautiful of all popular fêtes. I have already in the preface alluded to the custom of riding out into the fields at daybreak to do honour to May, the month which was held to be the symbol of spring-time. Rich and poor, the court and the commoners, all rode out with one impulse. Boughs of hawthorn and laburnum were brought home to decorate all the streets, and dancing round the maypole, and feasting, and holiday-making, were observed almost like religious rites. It was a great privilege to be elected Queen of May, and one which every young maiden coveted. At a later time we read of Henry VIII. and Queen Catherine of Aragon formally meeting the heads of the corporation of London, on Shooter's Hill, to 'go a maying.'

But one thing should be remembered when we see how many pleasures were referred to May, and how much more people seemed to count on the weather of a month nowadays proverbially disappointing. The seasons were not the same then as they are now. Not because the climate of the land has altered so much, though that may be fairly surmised, but because the seasons were actually arranged otherwise. In Chaucer's time May began twelve days later than our May, and ended in the midst of June, and therefore there was a much better chance of settled weather than we have. This fact also accounts for the proverbial connection of Christmas and hard weather, snow, and ice, which we get as a rule in January, while December is foggy and wet. Twelfth Day was the old Christmas Day.

² At point devise—with exactness.

³ The love of the Anglo-Saxons and the early English for flowers is very remarkable. The wearing of garlands of fresh flowers was a common practice with both sexes: a beautiful custom, followed by ⁴ and previously by the Greeks

⁴ The big round tower chain of fortresses linked by

GLOSSARY.

where, was amusing herself }Ther as this Emelye hadde hire pleyyng.

Wherein this Emelye was rambling.

Bright was the sonne, and cleer that morwenyng;Bright was the sun and clear that May morning,And Palamon, this woful prisoner, As was his wone, by leve of his gayler,And Palamon, that mournful prisoner, As was his wont, by leave of his gaolerroamed high sawWas risen and romede in a chambre on heigh
In which he al the noble cité seigh,Was ris'n, and at an upper chamber stood also

And eek the gardyn, ful of braunches grene,And all the garden full of branches greenbeautiful
Germ. schön }

Ther as this freshe Emely the schene

Where this fresh Emely, beauteous to be seen, roamed

Was in hire walk and romede up and down.Was in her walk and roaming up and down.

goeth

This sorweful prisoner, this Palamon Gooth in the chambre, romyng to and fro,
And to himself compleynyng of his woo:This sorrowful prisoner, this Palamon Goes in his chamber—pacing to and fro—

said

That he was born, ful ofte he seyde alas!That he was born full oft he sigh'd
'alas!'

chance

And so byfel by aventure or cas

And so befell, by chance or some strange case, through

That thurgh a wyndow thikke, of many a barre
Of iren greet, and squar as eny sparre,That thro' a window thick with many a bar
Of iron, great and square as a ship's spar,

blenched

He caste his eyen upon Emelya;
And therwithal he bleynte, and cryede, a!He cast his eyes on Emelye below;
And therewith he blench'd, dazzled, and cried 'Oh!'

stung

As though he stongen were unto the herte.Like a man stung, or wounded to the heart.And with that crye Arcite anon upsterteAnd at that cry Arcite did forward startAnd seyde, 'Cosyn myn, what eyleth the?Saying, 'Dear cousin mine, what alleth thee?

That art so pale and deedly on to see?

Thou art so pale, and deathly-white to see.criedest thou, thee done }Why crydestow? who hath the doon offence?Why did you cry out? What's the last offence?For Goddes love, tak al in pacience Oure prisoun, for it may non other be:For God's love, take it all in patience, This prison-life—it can't be otherwise—

given

Fortune hath yeven us this adversite.¹

Fate is the cause of our adversities.

running around the domain: from one of which the captive knights saw Emelye, her garden being within the walls, and as the castle was generally built on an eminence, on higher ground than the country beyond.

¹ Arcite is a fatalist. All his sentiments point to this—a philosopher of Necessarian doctrine. It is helpful to some minds, but others reject it as destructive of all effort and right feeling.

and resent never a because for redx

GLOSSARY.	We moste endure it : this is the short and pleyne.'	We must endure it, this is short and plain.'
said	This Palamon answerde, and seyde ageyn	Palamon rebuking, answered him again, opinion vain imagination }	'Cosyn, forsothe of this opynyoun Thou hast a veyn ymaginacioun. This prisone causede me not for to crye,	'Cousin, forsooth, that fix'd opiniön Is but a vain imaginatiön. Nay, prison-misery did not cause my cry.
	But I was hurt right now thurghout myn eye	But I was hurt that moment thro' mine eye mine	Into myn herte, that wol my bane be.	Unto my heart, and that my bane will be.
	The fairnesse of that lady that I see	The fairness of the lady that I see roam	Yond in the gardyn rome to and fro	Yonder i' the garden roaming to and fro abbr. ne wot I know not }	Is cause of al my crying and my wo. I not whether sche be womman or goddesse,	Is cause of all my outcry and my wo ; And I know not whether she be goddess truly	But Venus is it, sothly as I gesse.' ¹	Or woman—but 'tis Venus, as I guess.'
fell	And therewithal on knees adoun he fil,	And therewith saying, falling on his knee, yourself	And seyde : 'Venus, if it be youre wil Yow in this gardyn thus to transfigure,	He cried 'O Venus, if thy wil it be, Thus in the garden taking gentle shape sorrowful	Biforn me sorweful wrecched creature, Out of this prisoun help that we may scape.'	In sight of wretched, hapless, woeful me, Out of this prison help us to escape.'
began, spy	And with that word Arcite gan espye Wher as this lady romed to and fro.	And with that word Arcite cast his eye Where this fair lady roam'd to and fro :
	And with that sight hire beauté hurte him so,	And with that sight, her beauty stung him so,
	That if that Palamon was wounded sore,	That if young Palamon is wounded sore,
	Arcite is hurt as moche as he, or more.	Arcite is hurt as much as he, or more.
said	And with a sigh he seyde pitously :	Then with a sigh he murmur'd piteously
	'The fressche beauté sleeth me sodeynly	'Ah, the fresh beauty slay'th me suddenly
	Of hir that rometh in the yonder place;	Of her that roameth out in yonder place :
	And but I have hire mercy and hire grace	And, save I win her mercy and her grace, at the least	That I may seen hire atte leste weye,	That I at least may see her day by day, am not; is not	I nam but deed ; ther nys no more to seye.'	I am but dead—there is no more to say.'
	This Palamon, whan he tho wordes herde,	This Palamon, when he those words had heard,

¹ An excitable mind is probably and by the privations of the fair Venus, on whom a figure which

Arcite's cooler temperament at once recognises as a woman. Or, my theory may hold good, propounded in Chaucer for Children, which see Appendix, p. 108.

GLOSSARY.
despitefully faith

desire, evil began two traitor

die

hinder ease

certainly not be perish

dare, say

Dispitously he loked, and answerde :

'Whether seistow this in earnest or in pley?'

'Nay,' quoth Arcite, 'in earnest by my fey.

God help me so, me luste ful evele pleye.'

This Palamon gan knytte his browes tweye :

'It nere,' quod he, 'to the no gret honour,

For to be fals, ne for to be traytour To me, that am thy cosyn and thy brother

I-sworn ful deepe, and ech of us to other,

That never for to deyen in the payne,¹

Til that the deeth departe schal us twayne,

Neyther of us in love to hyndren other,

Ne in non other cas, my leeve brother;

But that thou schuldest trewely forthren me

In every caas, and I schal forthren the. This was thyn oth, and myn also certayn ;

I wot right wel, thou darst it nat withsayn.

Thus art thou of my counsel,² out of doute.

And now thou woldest falsly ben aboute

To love my lady, whom I love and serve,

And evere schal, til that myn herte sterve.

Now certes, fals Arcite, thou schal not so.

I lovede hire first, and tolde the my woo

As to my counsel, and my brother sworn

To forthre me, as I have told biforn. For which thou art i-bounden as a knight

To helpe me, if it lay in thi might, Or elles art thou fals, I dar wel sayn.'

Furious he looked—and presently answer'd—

'Whether sayst thou this—in earnest or in play?'

'Nay,' said Arcite, 'in earnest, by my fay.

God help me, I am in no mood for playing.'

This Palamon knitted his brows then: saying,

'It would be no great honour unto thee

For to be false and traitorous to me Who am by birth thy cousin, and thy brother

Sworn solemnly, each of us to the other

That never, though we perish'd in the pain

Till death itself shall come to part us twain

Neither of us in love should cross the other,

Nor yet in any other straits, dear brother.

But that thou shouldest truly further me

In every case, as I shall further thee. This was thy oath, and mine—and true it is :

Right well I know thou dar'st not gainsay this.

Here thou art one with me, I cannot doubt.—

And now, thou wouldest falsely go about

To love my lady, whom I love and serve,

And shall, while I have life—my heart a nerve!

Truly, false Arcite, that thou shalt not do.

I lov'd her first, and told to thee my woo

As to my friend, and brother too, who swore

To further me, as I have said before. For which thing thou art bounden as a knight

To help me if it lies within thy might: Else you are false, and that I tell you plain.'

¹ The peyne. Torture, used in every court of law.² Of my counsel—on my side, or of my way of thinking.

GLOSSARY.	This Arcite ful proudly spak agayn.	This Arcite then full proudly spoke again.
shalt	'Thou schalt,' quoth he, 'be rather fals than I. Bnt thou art fals, I telle the utterly. For par amour ¹ I lovede hir first er throw.	' Thou wilt be sooner false (he cries) than I. And thou art false, I tell thee, utterly, For par amour I lov'd her before thou.
wilt yet	What wilt thou sayn? thou wistest not yit now Whether sche be a womman or goddesse.	What dost thou say? thou knewest not just now Whether she were a woman or goddess!
thine mine	Thyn is affecciou of holynesse, ² And myn is love, as to a creature; For which I tolde the myn adventure As to my cosyng, and my brother sworn.	Thine is affection unto holiness, And mine is love, as to a human thing, For which I told thee of my suffering As cousin, and sworn brother, of all men.
before	I pose, that thou lovedest hire biforn; Wost thou nat wel the olde clerkes ³ sawe, That who schal yeve a lover eny lawe,	But given that you had lov'd her first, what then? Dost thou not recollect the old clerk's saw, That who will, may, give lovers any law—greater	Love is a grettere lawe, by my pan,	Love is a stronger law, I warrant, than than, given	Then may be yeve to eny erthly man? Therefore positif lawe, and such decre,	All ties imposed on any earthly man; Therefore law positive by man's decree, each must needs, head	Is broke alday for love in ech degree. A man moot needes love maugre his heed.	Is daily broke for love in each degree. A man loves; well, he must love, maugr' his head.
flee	He may nought fien it, though he schulde be deed, ¹ Al be sche mayde, or widewe or elles wyf. And eek it is nat likly al thy lyf	He cannot flee it, tho' he should be dead, Though she be maid, or widow, or else wife. Beside, it is not likely, all thy life stand	To stonden in hire grace, no more schal I;	To win her grace at all, no more shall I.
verily	For wel thou wost thyselfen verrailly,	For well thou know'st thyself, that thou and I doomed	That thou and I been dampned to prisoun	Are doom'd to suffer in this living grave we shall gain	Perpetuelly, us gayneth no raunsoun.	For ever, and no ransom shall we have.
struggle	We stryve, as dide the houndes for the boon, They foughte al day, and yit here part was noon; Ther com a kyte, whil that they were wrothe,	We're squabbling as the dogs did for the bone. They fought all day, and yet they both got none. There came a kite that way while they were wroth

¹ Par amour: an old phrase for to love excessively. The French retain it; aimer, for liking, aimer avec amour for being in love. Arcite's sentiments are fatalistic again, and he has the common mediæval feeling about love. See note ¹, p. 66.

² A mere religious feeling.

³ Boethius is the 'old clerk,' from whose book De Consolatione Chaucer has often borrowed.

GLOSSARY.

bare	And bar away the boon bitwixe hem bothe.	And bore away the bone betwixt em both.
	And therefore at the kynges court, ¹ my brother,	And therefore recollect, at court, my friend,
	Eche man for himself, ther is non other.	Each man for himself, that's all, and that's the end.
ever	Love if the list; for I love and ay schal;	Love, if you like. I love, and always shall.
truly, dear	And sothly, leewe brother, this is al.	We both may play at loving, and that's all.
must	Here in this prisoun moote we endure,	Here, in this prison, we shall stay, dear brother.
each, chance	And everych of us take his aventure. ²	And one has just as good chance as the other. ²

Long the two knights quarrelled and disputed about the lady who was out of their reach. But you shall see what came to pass.

There was a duke called Perithous, who had been fellow and brother in arms² of Duke Theseus since both were children, and he came to Athens to visit Theseus. These two dukes were very great friends: so much so that they loved no one so much as each other.

Now, Duke Perithous had known Arcite at Thebes, years before, and liked him, and he begged Theseus to let Arcite out of prison.

Theseus consented, but only on the condition that Arcite should quit Athens, and that he should lose his head, were he ever found there again.

So Arcite became a free man, but he was banished the kingdom.

How unhappy then Arcite was! He felt that he was worse off than ever. 'Oh, how I wish I had never known Perithous!' cried he. 'Far rather would I be back in Theseus' prison, for then I could see the beautiful lady I love.'

	How gret a sorwe suffreth now Arcite!	How great a sorrow suffereth now Arcite!
heart	The deth he feleth thurgh his herte smyte.	Grim death he feeleth thro' his body smite.
	'O dere cosyn Palamon,' quod he, 'Thyn is the victorie of this aventure, Ful blisfully in prisoun maistow dure;	'O my dear cousin, Palamon,' cried he, 'In this ill hap the gain is on thy side. Thou blissful in thy prison may'st abide!
thine, chance may'st thou endure }	In prisoun? certes nay, but in paradys!	In prison? truly nay—but in para- dise!
thee	Wel hath Fortune y-torned the the dys, That hast the sighte of hire, and I thabsence.	Kindly toward thee hath Fortune turn'd the dice, That hast the sight of her—not I, forced hither.
the absence since	For possible is, syn thou hast hire presence, And art a knight, a worthi and an able,	'Tis possible, since thou art present with her, And art a knight, a worthy and an able.
case	That by som cas, syn Fortune is chaungeable,	That by some means (luck is so vari- able)

¹ At the king's court: probably a proverb.

² Formal compacts for the purpose of mutual counsel and assistance were common to the heroic and chivalrous ages.—B.

GLOSSARY.	Thou maist to thy desir somtyme at- teyne.	Thou may'st attain to thy desire some day.
barren	But I that am exilèd and bareyne	But I who am exiled, and barren, yea, all, great	Of alle grace, and in so gret despeir	Of all grace and all peace, and in despair, is not	That ther nys erthe, water, fyr, ne eyr, Ne crëature that of hem makèd is,	So that there is no fire, earth, water, air, Nor any creature that is made of them do	That may me helpe or doon comfort in this.	That can console or heal me as I deem—die, despair	Wel oughte I sterve in wanhope and distresse;	Needs must I die of hopeless dull dis- tress—life, strength	Farwel my lyf, my lust, and my glad- nesse.	Farewell, my life, my strength, my happiness!
complain, in } common	Alas, why playnyn folk so in com- mune Of purveiance of God, or of Fortune,	'Alas, why do men murmur so to- gether At God's good Providence, or Fortune's either, them	That yeveth hem ful ofte in many a	That giveth him full oft in many guise	gyse	wise
they	Wel bettre than thei can hemself devyse?	More good and better than he can devise?
some, have	Som man desireth for to han richesse	This man desireth riches, which may bring murder	That cause is of his morthre or gret	His own destruction or great suffering.
sickness	seeknesse. And som man wolde out of his prisoun fayn,	And that man out of prison fain would be, house, people	That in his hous is of his meyné slayn.	Then, by his servants slain at home is he.
matter	Infinite harmes ben in this mateere.	Infinite danger thus besets our way, here	We witen nat what thing we prayen heere.	We know not what we pray for when we pray.
drunk	We faren as he that dronke is as a mous. ¹	We fare like drunkards, stupid as a mouse—
	A dronke man wot wel he hath an hous,	A drunken man well knows he has a house, knows not (he wot)	} But he not which the righte wey is thider,	But he don't know which is the right way thither, slippery	And to a dronke man the wey is slider :	And all the road seems sliding down together.
fare	And certes in this world so faren we. We seeken faste after felicité,	Lo, truly in this world so blind are we ! Oft we pursue felicity so fast truly	But we gon wrong ful ofte trewely.	That we do blunder by it in our haste.
say, namely	Thus may we seyen alle, and name- lyche I	Thus we may all say, and especially I, thought	That wende and hadde a gret opinioun	Who thought and held a firm opiniõn
if, escape	That yif I mighte skape fro prisoun	That if I got clear of my dungeõn, been, perfect	Than hadde I ben in joye and perfyt hele:	I should be whole, and joyful, and at ease—
weal	Ther now I am exilèd fro my wele.	And there now, I am exiled from my peace!

¹ Dazed as a mouse under the cat's eye.

GLOSSARY.

see	Syn that I may not see you, Emelye,	For since I cannot see you, Emelye, am not, is not	I nam but deed: ther nys no remedye.'	I am but dead—there is no remedy.'
alide	Uppon that other syde Palamon	But on the other hand poor Palamon, knew	Whan that he wiste Arcite was agoon	When he perceived that Arcite was gone,
	Such sorwe he maketh, that the grete tour	Such sorrow he maketh, that the whole great tower
	Resowneth of his yolling and clamour.	Resounded with his yelling and clamour.
were	The pure fettres on his schynes grete	The very fetters on his shins so great Weren of his bittre salte teeres wete.	With all his salt and bitter tears were wet.
	'Allas!' quod he, 'Arcita, cosyn myn,	'Alas!' quoth he, 'Arcita, cousin mine!
struggle	Of al oure stryf, God woot, the fruyt is thin.	Of all our strife, God knows the fruit is thine!
	Thou walkest now in Thebes at thi large,	Thou walkest now in Thebes town, at large, gives little heed	} And of my woo thou yevest litel charge.	And of my wo thou hast nor heed nor charge.
	Thou maist, syn thou hast wysdom and manhede,	Since strength, and wits, and manhood all are thine, kindred	Assemblen al the folk of oure kynrede,	Thou may'st assemble all our kith and kin, country	And make a werre so scharpe on this cuntrè ¹	And wage a war so sharp upon this land
(Fr. aventure)	That by som aventure, or som treté,	That by some chance—some treaty shrewdly plann'd,
	Thou maist have hire to lady and to wyf	Thou may'st get her to lady and to wife must	For whom that I mot needes leese my lyf.	For whose sweet sake I needs must lose my life.
way	For as by wey of possibilité	For having such a possibility,
	Syth thou art at thi large, of prisoun free	Since thou art out, at large, of prison free, commander. advantage. (Fr. avantage)	} And art a lord, gret is thin avauntage	And art a lord—ah, what a chance hast thou!
	More than is myn, that sterve here in a kage.	Far more than mine—caged in and dying now.
	For I moot weepe and weyle, whil I lyve	For I may weep and wail while I do live,
	With al the woo that prisoun may me yive,	With all the misery that jail may give,
(Fr. peine)	And ecke with peyne that love me yeveth also	And all the pain that love awakes also,
	That doubleth al my torment and my wo.'	That doubleth all my torment and my woe.'
caught	Therwith the fyr of jelousye upsterte	With that the fire of jealousy did start
	Withinne his breste, and hente him by the herte,	Up in his breast and held him by the heart, ¹ Tyrwhitt.

GLOSSARY.

madly, like	So woldly that he lyk was to byholde	So fiercely that his face was to behold
(Germ. asche)	The box-tree, or the asschen deede and colde.	Like white boxwood, or ashes dead and cold.

'O cruel gods!' he cried, 'that govern the world with your eternal laws, how is man better than a sheep lying in the fold? For, like any other beast, man dies, or lives in prison, or is sick, or unfortunate, and often is quite guiltless all the while. And when a beast is dead, it has no pain further; but man may suffer after death, as well as in this world.'

Now I will leave Palamon, and tell you more of Arcite.

Arcite, in Thebes, fell into such excessive sorrow for the loss of the beautiful lady that there never was a creature so sad before or since. He ceased to eat and drink, and sleep, and grew as thin and dry as an arrow. His eyes were hollow and dreadful to behold, and he lived always alone, mourning and lamenting night and day. He was so changed that no one could recognise his voice nor his look. Altogether he was the saddest picture of a man that ever was seen—except Palamon.

One night he had a dream. He dreamed that the winged god Mercury stood before him, bidding him be merry; and commanded him to go to Athens, where all his misery should end.

Arcite sprang up, and said, 'I will go straight to Athens. Nor will I spare to see my lady through fear of death—in her presence I am ready even to die!'

He caught up a looking-glass, and saw how altered his face was, so that no one would know him. And he suddenly bethought him that now he was so disfigured with his grief, he might go and dwell in Athens without being recognised, and see his lady nearly every day.

He dressed himself as a poor labourer, and accompanied only by a humble squire, who knew all he had suffered, he hastened to Athens.

He went to the court of Theseus, and offered his services at the gate to drudge and draw, or do any menial work that could be given him. Well could he hew wood and carry water, for he was young and very strong. Now, it happened that the chamberlain of fair Emelye's house took Arcite into his service.

Thus Arcite became page of the chamber of Emelye the bright, and he called himself Philostrate.

Never was man so well thought of!—he was so gentle of condition that he became known throughout the court. People said it would be but right if Theseus promoted this Philostrate, and placed him in a rank which would better display his talents and virtues.

At last Theseus raised him to be squire of his chamber, and gave him plenty of gold to keep up his degree. Moreover his own private rent was secretly brought to him from Thebes year by year. But he spent it so cunningly that no one suspected him. In this crafty way Arcite lived a long time very happily, and bore himself so nobly both in peace and war that there was no man in the land dearer to Theseus.

Now we will go back to Palamon.

Pocr Palamon had been for seven years in his terrible prison, and was quite wasted away—~~was~~ not the slightest chance of getting out; last, however, one May night some pitying friend helped him to give his gaoler a drink which sent him into a deep sleep: so that Palamon made his escape from the tower. He fled from the city as fast as ever he could go, and hid himself in a grove; meaning afterwards to go by night secretly to Thebes, and beg all his friends to aid him to make war on Theseus. And then he would soon either die or get Emelye to wife.

GLOSSARY.	Hit fel that in the seventhe year in May The thridde night, (as olde bookes	It fell that in the seventh year, in May On the third night (as ancient bookes say	seyn,	aver,
(Fr. aventure)	That al this storie tellen moré pleyn)	Wherein the story is told plainlier), shaped	Were it by aventure or destiné,	Were it by merest chance, or destiny
	(As, whan a thing is schapen, it schal be,)	(As when a thing ordain'd is, it must be),
	That soone after the mydnyght, Pala- mounn	That somewhat after midnight, Pala- mon
	By helpyng of a freend brak his prisoun,	By a friend's help brake from his dun- geon
	And fleeth the cite faste as he may goo, For he hadde yive his gayler drinke soo	And fled the city, fast as he may go, Having had means to dose his gaoler so
	Of a clarré, ¹ maad of a certeyn wyn,	With a rare clarré , made of a certain wine,
	With nercotykes and opye of Thebes fyn,	With shrewd narcotics and Theban opium fine,
	That al that night though that men wolde him schake,	That all that night, though you might try to shake him,
	The gayler sleep, he mighte nought awake.	The gaoler slept, and nothing could awake him.
	And thus he fleeth as faste as evere he may.	And thus he fieth as fast as ever he may.
close upon	The night was schort, and faste by the day,	The night was short, and drawing to the day,
	That needes-cost he moste himselven hyde,	When at all costs himself he needs must hide.
	And til a grove faste ther besyde	And to a grove of trees that grew beside, fearful	With dredful foot than stalketh ² Palo- moun.	With frightened foot then stalketh Palamon.
opinion	For shortly this was his opynyoun, That in that grove he wolde him hyde al day,	For, shortly, 'twas his resolution To lie in hiding in the grove all day, would	And in the night then wolde he take his way	And in the night to take his wary way
	To Thebes-ward, his frendes for to preye	To Thebes, to gather friends from near and far pray	On Theseus to holpe him to wcrreye.	To wage on Theseus a bitter war.
in short, either	} And schorteliche, or he wolde lese his lyf,	Then in briefwhile himself would lose his life
	Or wynnen Emelye unto his wyf.	Or win fair Emelye to be his wife.
	This is theeffect of his entente playn.	Here is th' effect, and his intent is plain.
turn	Now wol I torne unto Arcite agayn,	Now will I tell you of Arcite again, ¹ Clarré: a drink made of wine, honey, and spices, and afterwards cleared by straining.

² To stalk—a noiseless step, hence 'deer-stalking,' and the expression applied to ghosts 'that stalk abroad.'

GLOSSARY.

knew, near	} That litel wiste how nyh that was his care, Til that fortune hadde brought him in the snare.	Who little guess'd how nigh him was his care Until his fortune brought him in the snare.
saluteth	The busy larke, messenger of day, Salueth in hire song the morwe gray ;	The busy lark, the messenger of day, Saluteth in her song the morning grey ;
	And fyry Phebus ryseth up so brighte, That al the orient laugheth of the lighte,	And fiery Phœbus riseth up so bright, That all the orient laugheth for the light ;
rays groves	And with his stremes dryeth in the greves	And in the woods he drieth with his rays leaves	The silver dropes, hongyng on the leaves.	The silvery drops that hang along the sprays.
royal	And Arcite, that is in the court ryal ¹	Arcite—unknown, yet ever waxing higher squire	With Theseus, his squyer principal, Is risen, and loketh on the merye day.	In Theseus' royal court, now chiefest squire— Is risen, and looketh on the merry day :
do, ceremony	And for to doon his observance to May, Remembryng on the poynt of his desir,	And, fain to offer homage unto May, He, mindful of the point of his desire, starting, fire fields, play	He on his courser, stertyng as the fir, Is riden into the feeldes him to pleye Out of the court, were it a myle or tweye.	Upon his courser leapeth, swift as fire, And rideth to keep joyous holiday Out in the fields, a mile or two away.
you	And to the grove of which that I yow tolde,	And, as it chanced, he made towards the grove, chance, began	By aventure his wey he gan to holde,	All thick with leaves, whereof I spake above, make	To maken him a garland of the greves, Were it of woodebynde or hawethorn	Eager to weave a garland with a spray Of woodbine, or the blossoms of the may.
leaves	leves,	And loud against the sunshine sweet he sings, sang, against	And lowde he song ayens the sonne scheene: O May, ² with al thy floures and thy greene, Welcome be thou, wel faire fressche May !	And loud against the sunshine sweet he sings, 'O May, with all thy flowers and thy green things, Right welcome be thou, fairest, freshest May !
some, may get	I hope that I som grene gete may.	Yield me of all thy tender green to- day !'
heart	And fro his courser, with a lusty herte,	Then from his courser merrily he sprang, started	Into the grove ful hastily he sterte,	And plunged into the thicket as he sang ;

¹ The words court and royal, now applied only to the sovereign of the land, were applicable then to the domains of the great nobles, who were to all intents and purposes kings. Their pride, and wealth, and immense power, made them very formidable to the sovereign, as we constantly find in following the history of England or any other country. They often mustered as big an army as the king, because they could afford to pay the knights (see note 4, p. 83), and were invincible in their strongholds, surrounded by their serfs dependent on them.

² Tyrwhitt.

GLOSSARY.

roamed	And in a path he rometh up and doun,	Till in a path he chanced to make his way where, chance	Ther as by aventure this Palamoun	Nigh to where Palamon in secret lay.
bush	Was in a busche, that no man might him see,	Sore frightened for his life was Palamon :
afraid, death	For sore afered of his deth was he.	But Arcite pass'd, unknowing and unknown ;
	Nothing ne knew he that it was Arcite :	And neither guess'd his brother was hard by ;
knows, guessed, little	} God wot he wolde han trowed it ful lite.	But Arcite knew not any man was nigh.
truly, gone, since	} For soth is seyde, goon sithen many yeres,	So was it said of old, how faithfully, eyes	That feld hath eyen, and the woode	'The woods have ears, the empty field can see.'
cars	hath ceres.
evenly balanced meet, un-fixed appointments	} It is ful fair a man to bere him evene, Be wary, be prepar'd for every case,
	} For al day meteth men at unset stevene. ¹	All day men meet in unexpected ways.
	Whan that Arcite hadde romed al his fill,	Now when Arcite long time had roam'd his fill,
	And songen al the roundel ² lustily,	And sung all through the rondel lustily, reverie	Into a studie he fel sodeynly,	He fell into dejection suddenly,
curious fashions	} As don thes loveres in here queynte geeres,	As lovers in their strange way often do,
	Now in the croppe, ³ now down in the breres,	Now in the clouds and now in abject wo, briers	Now up, now down, as boket in a welle.	Now up, now down, as bucket in a well.

He sat down and began to make a kind of song of lamentation. 'Alas,' he cried, 'the day that I was born! How long, O Juno, wilt thou oppress Thebes? All her royal blood is brought to confusion. I myself am of royal lineage, and yet now I am so wretched and brought so low, that I have become slave and squire to my mortal foe. Even my own proud name of Arcite I dare not bear, but pass by the worthless one of Philostrate! Ah, Mars and Juno, save me, and wretched Palamon, martyred by Theseus in prison! For all my pains are for my love's sake, and Emelye, whom I will serve all my days.'

	'Ye ⁴ slen me with youre eyen, Emelye;	'You slay me with your eyes, O Emelye!
be	Ye ben the cause wherfore that I dye :	You are the cause wherfore I daily die.
remnant	Of al the remenant of myn other care	For, ah, the worth of all my other woes

¹ It is good for a man to keep his mind so even-balanced that he is prepared for everything : for all day meetings, not set or arranged, are taking place.

² Rondel, or roundel, a round song or 'catch': see those p. 177. They were in three-line stanzas, like Arcite's.

³ Crop, the top of the wood; briers, the thorny brushwood and weeds growing on the ground. This pretty metaphor well expresses the fluctuating moods of an overwrought state of feeling.

⁴ Ye, the plural, was used respectfully, as the Germans use Sie, whilst thou, like the German du, was reserved for familiarity, either to a beloved equal, or to inferiors.

GLOSSARY.

amount	Ne sette I nought the mountaunce of a tare,	Is not as e'en the poorest weed that grows, were able to	So that I couthe don aught to youre pleasaunce!	So that I might do aught to pleasure you!
Palamon, hearing this, felt as though a cold sword glided through his heart. He was so angry that he flung himself forth like a madman upon Arcite.
	And whan that he hadde herd Arcites tale,	And when that he had heard Arcite's tale, mad	As he were wood, with face deed and pale,	Like a man mad, with face all dead and pale,
	He sterte him up out of the bussches thikke	He darts from the thick bushes in his sight.
said	And seyde: 'False' Arcyte—false	Crying, 'False, wicked traitor! false wicked	traitour wikke,	Arcite!
	Now art thou hent, that lovest my lady so,	Now art thou caught, that lov'st my lady so,
	For whom that I have al this peyne and wo,	For whom I suffer all this pain and wo!
counsel	And art my blood, and to my counseil sworn,	Yet art my blood—bound to me by thy vow, before now	As I ful ofte have told the heere by-forn,	As I have told thee oftentimes ere now—
tricked	And hast byjaped here duk Theseus,	And hast so long befool'd Duke Theseus
	And falsly chaunged hast thy name thus;	And falsely hid thy name and nurture thus!
dead, else	I wol be deed, or elles thou schalt dye.	For all this falseness thou or I must die.
	Thou schalt not love my lady Emelye,	Thou shalt not love my lady Emelye—more	But I wil love hire oonly and no mo;	But I will love her and no man but I, foe	For I am Palamon, thy mortal fo.	For I am Palamon, thine enemy!
weapon	And though that I no wepne have in this place,	And tho' I am unarmed, being but now escaped	But out of prisoun am astert by grace,	Escap'd from out my dungeon, care not thou, fear	I drede not, that outhur thou schalt dye,	For nought I dread—for either thou shalt die
	Or thou ne schalt not loven Emelye.	Now—or thou shalt not love my Emelye.
	Ches which thou wilt, for thou schalt not asterte.'	Choose as thou wilt—thou shalt not else depart.'
escape	This Arcite, with ful dispitous herte,	But Arcite, with all fury in his heart, then	Whan he him knew, and hadde his tale herde,	Now that he knew him and his story heard, fierce	As fers as a lyoun, pullede out a swerde,	Fierce as a lion, snatch'd he forth his sword,
	And seide thus: 'By God that sit above,	Saying these words: 'By Him who rules above, were it not	Nere it that thou art sik and wood for love,	Were't not that thou art sick and mad for love,

GLOSSARY.

also	And eek 'that thou no wepne hast in this place,	And hast no weapon—never should'st thou move,
step	Thou schuldest neveré out of this grove pace,	Living or like to live, from out this grove, die	That thou ne schuldest deyen of myn hond.	But thou shouldest perish by my hand! on oath de'f'y	For I defye the seurté and the bond	I cast thee back the bond and surety, both,
sayest	Which that thou seyst that I have maad to the;	Which thou pretendest I have made to thee.
	What, verray fool, think wel that love is fre!	What? very fool! remember love is free, in spite of	And I wol love hire mawgre al thy might.	And I will love her maugré all thy might!
because	But, for as much thou art a worthy knight,	But since thou art a worthy, noble knight, art willing	And wilnest to derreyne hire by batayle,	And willing to contest her in fair fight, pledge	Have heere my trouthe, to morwe I nyl not fayle,	Have here my troth, to-morrow, at daylight, without knowledge, person }	Withouten wityng of eny other wight,	Unknown to all, I will not fail nor fear will, found	That heer I wol be founden as a knight,	To meet thee as a knight in combat here,
	And bryngen harneys ¹ right inough for the;	And I will bring full arms for me and thee;
	And ches the beste, and lef the worste for me.	And choose the best, and leave the worst for me!
	And mete and drynke this night wil I brynge	And I will bring thee meat and drink to-night,
	Inough for the, and clothes for thy beddyng.	Enough for thee, and bedding as is right:
win	And if so be that thou my lady wynne,	And if the victory fall unto thine hand,
wood	And sle me in this woode, ther I am inne,	To slay me in this forest where I stand,
	Thou maist wel han thy lady as for me.'	Thou may'st attain thy lady-love, for me!'
	This Palamon answerde, 'I graunt it the.'	Then Palamon replied—'I grant it thee.'

Then these, who had once been friends, parted till the morrow.

all	O Cupide, out of alle charité!	O god of love, that hast no charity!
kingdom	O regne, that wolt no felawe have with the!	O realm, that wilt not bear a rival nigh!
truly, nor	Ful soth is seyde, that love ne lordschipe	Truly 'tis said, that love and lordship ne'er willingly, fellowship }	Wol not, his thonkes, have no felaweschipe.	Will be contented only with a share.
find	Wel fynden that Arcite and Palamoun.	Arcite and Palamon have found it so.
	Arcite is riden anon unto the town	Arcite is ridden soon the town unto:

¹ Harness was a technical term for the complete armour or equipment, as opposed to portions, which were equally armour.

GLOSSARY.

before	And on the morwe, or it were dayes light,	And, on the morrow, ere the sun was high,
prepared	Ful prively two harneys hath he dight,	Two harness hath he brought forth privily, sufficient field, them two	Bothe suffisaunt and mete to darreynne } The bataylle in the feeld betwix hem tweyne.	Meet and sufficing for the lonely fight. Out in the battle-field mid daisies white.
carried before	And on his hors allone as he was born, He caryeth al this harneys him by forn ; And in the grove, at tyme and place i-set,	And riding onward solitarily All this good armour on his horse bore he : And at the time and place which they had set be	This Arcite and this Palamon ben met.	Ere long Arcite and Palamon are met.
then their kingdom	Tho chaungen gan the colour in here face, Right as the honger in the regne of Trace That stondeth in the gappe with a spere, Whan honted is the lyoun or the bere, And hereth him come ruschyng in the greves,	To change began the colour of each face— Ev'n as the hunter's, in the land of Thrace, When at a gap he standeth with a spear, In the wild hunt of lion or of bear. And heareth him come rushing through the wood, breaking	And breketh bothe bowes and the leves, And thenketh, Here cometh my mortel enemy,	Crashing the branches in his madden'd mood, And think'th, 'Here com'th my mortal enemy, without	Withoute faille, he mot be deed or I ; For eyther I mot slen him at the gappe, Or he moot sleen me, if that me mys-happe :	Now without fail or he or I must die ; For either I must slay him at the gap, Or he must slay me if there be mis-hap.'
their hue	So ferden they, in chaungyng of here hewe,	So fared the knights so far as either knew,
far, them	As fer as everich of hem other knewe.	When, seeing each, each 'deepen'd in his hue.
was not, saluting	Ther nas no good day, ne no saluyng ; But streyt withouten word or rehersyng,	There was no greeting—there was no 'Good day,' But mute, without a single word, straightway
each, helped	Everych of hem help for to armen other,	Each one in arming turn'd to help the other, own	As frendly, as he were his owne brother ; And after that with here scharpe speres stronge	As like a friend as though he were his brother. And after that, with lances sharp and strong, foined	They foynen ech at other wonder longe.	They dash'd upon each other—lief and long.
then, seemed	Though myghtest wene that this Palamon	You might have fancied that this Palamon, mad	In his fightyng were as a wood lyoun, And as a cruel tygre was Arcite :	Fighting so blindly, were a mad lion, And like a cruel tiger was Arcite.
began	As wilde boores gonne they to smyte,	As two wild boars did they together smite.
their madness	That frothen white as foam for rage-wood.	That froth as white as foam for rage—

GLOSSARY.

their	Up to the ancle foughte they in here blood. ¹	And fought until their feet were red with blood.
	And in this wise I lete hem fightyng dwelle;	Thus far awhile I leave them to their fight.
you	And forth I wol of Theseus yow telle.	And now what Theseus did I will recite.

Then something happened that neither of them expected.

It was a bright clear day, and Theseus, hunting with his fair queen Ipolita, and Emelye, clothed all in green, came riding by after the hart, with all the dogs around them; and as they followed the hart, suddenly Theseus looked out of the dazzle of the sun, and saw Arcite and Palamon in sharp fight, like two bulls for fury. The bright swords flashed to and fro so hideously that it seemed as though their smallest blows would fell an oak. But the duke knew not who they were that fought.²

Theseus smote his spurs into his horse, and galloped in between the knights, and, drawing his sword, cried, 'Ho!'³ No more, on pain of death! By mighty Mars, he dies who strikes a blow in my presence!' Then Theseus asked them what manner of men they were, who dared to fight there, without judge or witness, as though it were in royal lists?⁴

You may imagine the two men turning on Theseus, breathless and bloody with fight, weary with anger, and their vengeance still unslaked.

	This Palamon answerde hastily,	And Palamon made answer hastily need	And seyde: 'Sire, what nedeth wordes mo?	And said—'O Sire, why should we waste more breath?
two wretches, califfs	We han the deth deserved bothe tuo.	For both of us deserve to die the death.
	Tuo woful wrecches ben we, tuo kaytyves	Two wretched creatures are we, glad to die, encumbered by	That ben encombred of oure owne lyves,	Tired of our lives, tired of our misery—
	And as thou art a rightful lord and juge	And as thou art a rightful lord and judge give us not	Ne yeve us neyther mercy ne refuge.	So give us neither mercy nor refuge!
holy	And sle me first, for seynte charite;	And slay me first, for holy charity—
also	But sle my felawe eek as wel as me.	But slay my fellow too as well as me!
	Or sle him first; for, though thou knowe it lyte,	—Or slay him first, for though thou little know, little	This is thy mortal fo, this is Arcite,	This is Arcite—this is thy mortal foe,
	That fro thy lond is banyschet on his heed,	Who from thy land was banished on his head, dead	For which he hath deserved to be deed.	For which he richly merits to be dead!
	For this is he that com unto thi gate	Yea, this is he who came unto thy gate, was named	And seyde, that he highte Philostrate.	And told thee that his name was Philostrate—befooled	Thus hath he japed the ful many a yer,	Thus year by year hath he defied thine ire—

¹ An exaggeration simply for picturesque effect, such as many have indulged in since Chaucer.

² The helmet entirely concealing the face.

³ Ho was the word by which the heralds or the king commanded the cessation of any action.

⁴ What were called the 'lists' were the places built and enclosed for combats on horseback, and tournaments. These combats got sometimes very serious, and many knights and horses were wounded, or even killed.

GLOSSARY.
made

	And thou hast makid him thy cheef squyer.	And thou appointest him thy chiefest squire
	And this is he that loveth Emelye.	--And this is he who loveth Emelye!
	For sith the day is come that I schal dye,	For since the day is come when I shall die,
	I make pleylny my confessioun,	Thus plain I make confession, and I own that	That I am thilke woful Palamoun,	I am that miserable Palamon wickedly	That hath thy prisoun broke wickedly.	Who have thy prison broken wilfully!
	I am thy mortal foo, and it am I	I am thy mortal foe,—and it is I
	That loveth so hoothe Emelye the brighte,	Who love so madly Emelye the bright,
	That I wol dye present in hire sighte.	That I would die this moment in her sight!
sentence	Therefore I aske deeth and my juwyse;	Therefore I ask death and my doom to-day—
slay	But slee my felawe in the same wyse,	But slay my fellow in the self-same way:—
	For bothe han we deserved to be slayn.'	For we have both deserv'd to be slain.'
	This worthy duk answerde anon agayn,	And angrily the duke replied again,
	And seyde: 'This is a schort conclusioun:	'There is no need to judge you any more, own	Your owne mouth, by youre confessioun,	Your own mouth, by confession, o'er and o'er condemned	Hath dampned you, and I wil it recorde.	Condemns you, and I will the words record.
	It needeth nought to pyne yow with the corde. ¹	There is no need to pain you with the cord.
dead	Ye schul be deed, by mighty Mars the reede!	Ye both shall die, by mighty Mars the red!

Then the queen, 'for verray wommanhede,' began to weep, and so did Emelye, and all the ladies present. It seemed pitiful that two brave men, both of high lineage, should come to such an end, and only for loving a lady so faithfully. All the ladies prayed Theseus to have mercy on them, and pardon the knights for their sakes. They knelt at his feet, weeping and entreating him—

	And wold have kist his feet ther as he stood,	And would have kissed his feet there as he stood, runneth	Till atte laste aslaked was his mood;	Until at last appeas'd was his mood, shook	For pite renneth sone in gentil herte,	For pity springeth soon in gentle heart.
	And though he first for ire quok and sterte,	And though he first for rage did quake and start,
	He hath considerd shortly in a clause	He hath considered briefly in the pause
	The trespass of hem bothe, and eek the cause:	The greatness of their crime, and, too, its cause;
their	And although that his ire here gylt accusede,	And while his passion had their guilt accused, them	Yet in his resoun he hem bothe excusede.	Yet now his calmer reason both excused.

Everybody had sympathy for those who were in love;¹ and Theseus' heart had compassion of women, for they wept ever in on' (continually).

So the kindly duke softened, and said to all the crowd good-humouredly, What a mighty and great lord is the god of love !'

GLOSSARY.	'Lo, her this Arcite and this Palamoun,	'Here are this Arcite and this Palamon, freely	That quyttly weren out of my prisoun,	Safe quit of prison both, who might have gone
	And might have lyved in Thebes	And dwelt in Thebes city royally, royally	royally,
know, their	And witen I am here mortal enemy,	Knowing I am their mortal enemy.
their, lieth	And that here deth lith in my might also,	And that their death within my power lies :
	And yet hath love, maugré here eyghen tuo,	Yet hath blind Love, in spite of both their eyes,
	I-brought hem hider bothe for to dye.	Led them both hither only to be slain !
look, high	Now loketh, is nat that an heiigh folye ?	Behold the height of foolishness most plain !
be	Who may not ben a fool, if that he love ?	Who is so great a fool as one in love ?
	Byholde for Goddes sake that sit above,	For mercy's sake—by all the gods above,
	Se how they blede ! be they nought wel arrayed !	See how they bleed ! a pretty pair are they !
	Thus hath here lord, the god of love, y-payd	Thus their liege lord, the god of love, doth pay them	Here wages and here fees for here service.	Their wages, and their fees for service done ;
their	And yet they wenen for to ben ful wise,	And yet each thinks himself a wise man's son great rage when he knew who the knights were. Palamon's insolent address in the singular personal pronoun was not likely to mollify him, coming as it did from a captive, though an equal by birth.

¹ How idealised, and how idolised, the passion of love had grown to be with the new elevation of woman's condition in these times is well known. Love literally covered a multitude of sins: the malefactor was pardoned whose offences were caused by love; the rough was made smooth for the feet of love to tread upon. There was a reason for this. It is but too true that the morals of the people will not bear the light of modern times; but it would be unfair to judge them by that light. Those were rough days, when laws were often feeble, narrow, or ill-enforced. The want of legal organisation placed a great refining and ennobling power in the hands of woman. Many a knight who was coarse or cowardly was pricked to courteous ways and deeds of courage by his love of some fair woman, when without it he would have sunk lower and lower in vice and degradation. The arts were oftentimes cultivated to win a woman's ear or eye; knowledge itself was sought for her sake, for knowledge is power. Of course the love of courtesy, valour, and learning were deeply rooted in the age, or the woman's sympathy could not have existed. But her encouragement of all that was æsthetic, her influence over men, and therefore the impetus she gave to the higher life, must never be underrated, however we may reprove the errors of that day. The institution of actual 'Courts of Love'—tribunals for the judgment of love-matters, bearing a definite recognition, and which seem so strange, almost repulsive to us, presided over as they were by ladies only—was the result of the worship of physical beauty and the passion which it inspired, and the proof, however grotesque, of the real value seen to lie in it. This will be better understood when we observe that even children were encouraged to cultivate somewhat of this ideal love, and the childish education of boys and girls consisted to a very large extent in learning the art of writing love-letters. Thus Palamon's and Arcite's adoration of fresh Emelye are seen to be neither exaggerated nor futile.

GLOSSARY.

serve	That serven love, for ought that may bifalle.	Who serveth Love, whatever may befall.
	But this is yet the beste game of alle,	But this is still the greatest joke of all,
	That sche, for whom they han this jolitee,	That she, the cause of this rare jollity, fun cau them, much }	Can hem therfore as moche thank as me.	Owes them about as many thanks as I!
knows	Sche woot no more of al this hoot fare,	She knew no more of all this hot to-do, knows	By God, than wot a cuckow or an hare.	By Mars! than does a hare or a cuckoo!
must be tried	But al moot ben assayed, hoot and colde;	But one must have one's fling, be't hot or cold;
must be, either }	A man moot ben a fool other yong or olde;	A man will play the fool either young or old.
one	I woot it by myself ful yore agon : For in my tyme a servant was I on.'	I know it by myself—for long ago In my young days I bowed to Cupid's bow.'

This is as if he should say, 'These two foolish boys have got nothing from their liege lord, the god of love, but a very narrow escape with their heads. And Emelye herself knew no more of all this hot business than a cuckoo! But I, too, was young once, and in love, and so I won't be hard upon them!' 'I will pardon you,' he added, 'for the queen's sake and Emelye's, but you must swear to me never to come and make war on me at any time, but be ever my friends in all that you may for the future.'

And they were very thankful and promised as he commanded.

Then Theseus spoke again, in a kind, half-laughing way:—

speak, royal	'To speke of real lynage and richesse,	'And as for wealth and rank, and royal birth, princess	Though that sche were a queen or a pryncesse,	Although she were the noblest upon earth,
each	Ech of yow bothe is worthy douteles	Each of you both deserves to wed your flame, marry nevertheless }	To wedden, when tyme is, but natheles,	Being of equal worth; but all the same
	I speke as for my suster Emelye,	It must be said, my sister Emelye
	For whom ye han this stryf and jelousye,	(For whom ye have this strife and jealousy), know	Ye wite youreself, sche may not wedde two	You see yourselves full well that she can never once, fought	At oones, though ye fighten evere mo;	Wed two at once although ye fought for ever!
unwilling or willing }	That oon of yow, or be him loth or leef,	But one of you, whether he likes or no, must	He mot go pypen in an ivy leef; ¹	Must then go whistle, and endure his wo.
	This is to sayn, sche may nought now han bothe,	That is to say, she cannot have you both, angry	Al ye be nevere so jelous, ne so wrothe.'	Though you be never so jealous or so wroth.'

¹ 'To pipe in an ivy leaf:' a proverbial expression, similar to 'go whistle'—meaning to be engaged in any useless employment.

With that he made them this offer—that Palamon and Arcite should each bring in a year's time (fifty weeks) a hundred knights, armed for the lists,¹ and ready to do battle for Emelye; and, whichever knight won, Palamon and his host, or Arcite and his host, should have her for his wife.

Who looks happy now but Palamon! and who springs up with joy but Arcite! Every one was so delighted with the kindness of Theseus that they all went down on their knees to thank him—but of course Palamon and Arcite went on their knees most.

Now, the preparations Theseus made for this great tournament were something wonderful.

First, the theatre for the lists had to be built, where the tournament was to take place. This was built in a circular form, with hundreds of seats rising up on all sides one behind another, so that everybody could see the fight, and no one was in anybody's way. The walls were a mile round, and all of stone, with a ditch running along the outside. At the east and at the west stood two gates of white marble, and there was not a carver, or painter, or craftsman of any kind that Theseus did not employ to decorate the theatre. So that there never was such a splendid place built in all the earth before or since.

Then he made three temples: one over the east gate for Venus, goddess of love; one over the west gate for Mars, who is god of war; and towards the north, he built a temple all alabaster and red coral; and that was for Diana. All these beautiful things cost more money than would load a cart.

Now for what the temples were like inside.

First, in the Temple of Venus were wonderful paintings of feasts, dancing, and playing of music, and beautiful gardens, and mountains, and people walking about with the ladies they liked. All these were painted on the walls in rich colour.

There was a statue of Venus besides, floating on a sea of glass, and the glass was made like waves that came over her. She had a citole in her hand, which is an instrument for playing music on; and over her head doves were flying. Little Cupid was also there, with his wings, and his bow and arrows, and his eyes blinded, as he is generally made.

Then, in the Temple of Mars, who is the god of war, there were all sorts of dangers and misfortunes painted. Battles, and smoke, and forests all burning with flames, and men run over by carts, and sinking ships, and many other awful sights. Then a smith forging iron—swords and knives for war.

The statue of Mars was standing on a car, armed and looking as grim as possible; there was a hungry wolf beside him.

As for the Temple of Diana, that was very different from Venus's. Venus wishes everybody to marry the one they love. Diana does not want any one to marry at all, but to hunt all day in the fields. So the pictures in Diana's Temple were all about hunting, and the merry life in the forest.

¹ The tournament, great as the loss of life often was, seems to have been the greatest delight of the people in the middle ages. The ladies especially loved them, as they were often in homage to themselves. The victor in the mimic battle received a crown from the queen of the tournament. In this case, Emelye is not asked whether she likes to be disposed of thus coolly! but she could not fail to be touched by the great compliment paid her.

Her statue showed her riding on a stag, with dogs running round about, and underneath her feet was the moon. She was dressed in the brightest green, and she had a bow and arrows in her hand.

Now you know all about the splendid theatre and the three temples.

At last the day of the great tournament approached !

It was on a Sunday, about nine o'clock in the morning, when all the lords and knights came into Athens.

GLOSSARY.

returning	The day approacheth of here retourn- ynge	The day approacheth for the muster- ing should	That everych schulde an hundred knyghtes brynge	When each of them a hundred knights should bring you	The bataille to derreyne as I you tolde.	To battle out the question, as I told.
to	And til Athenes, here covenant to holde	And now in Athens, covenant to hold, every one	Hath everych of hem brought an hundred knightes	Each with his hundred knights, the rivals are :
(Germ. rechte)	Wel arméd for the werre at allē rightes.	Well arm'd at all points, for the mimic war.
surely	And sikerly ther trowede many a man	And true it is, declareth many a man, since	That nevere, siththen that the world bigan	That never since the world itself be- gan
	As for to speke of knighthod of here hond	As regards knights, and skill of knightly hand, made	As fer as God hath maked see or lond,	As far as God created sea and land,
abb. Ne was There was not	Nas, of so few, so noble a compainye. For every wight that lovede chyvalrye	Was, in so few, so noble a company. For every man that cared for chivalry willingly	And wolde, his thankes, han a passant name	And had a will to win a passing name
	Hath preyed that he mighte ben of that game ;	Hath begg'd a place in such a brilliant game ;
	And wel was him that thereto chosen was !	And blithe was he that thereto chosen was !
case	For if ther fel tomorwe such a caas	For if there fell to-morrow such a case, know	Ye knowen wel, that every lusty knight	Ye know full well that every lusty knight
	That loveth paramours, ¹ and hath his might	That loved a dame, and had the means and might,
	Were it in Englelond or elleswhere	Whether it were in England or else- where, willingly, wish	They wolde, here thankes, wilne to be there.	Would wish and strive and hasten to be there.
	To fighte for a lady : benedicite !	To fight for a lady— benedicite !
	It were a lusty sightē for to see.	Such jousting were a lusty sight to see.
fare	And right so ferden they with Pala- mon.	And thus they mustered under Pala- mon.
	With him ther wentē knightēs many oon.	With him there went good warriors, many a one.
	Som wol ben arméd in an habergoun In a brestplat and in a light gypoun.	Some would be armed in a habergeon In a breastplate, and in a light gipon :
	And somme wold have a peyre plates large ;	Some chose a pair of plates, so bright and large,

GLOSSARY.	And somme wold have a Prucesheld, ¹ or a targe ; Somme woln been armed on here legges weel,	Some bore a Prussian shield, and some a targe : Some would be armed upon the lega full well, also	And have an ax, and somme a mace of steel. Ther nys no newe gyse, that it nas old. ² Armed were they, as I have you told,	And have an axe—and some a mace of steel. There was no newest guise but it was old. Thus were the forces arm'd, as I have told.
own	Everich after his owen opinioun. Ther maistow sen, comyng with Palamoun, Ligurge ³ himself, the grete kyng of Trace ; Blak was his berd, and manly was his face.	Each man after a fancy of his own. Then might you see, coming with Palamon Licurge himself, the mighty king of Thrace ; Black was his beard, and manly was his face, eyes between	The cerdes of his eyen in his heed They gloweden bytwixe yow and reed, And lik a griffoun looked he aboute, With kempe heres ⁴ on his browes stowte ;	The circles of his eyes within his head Glow'd of a hue part yellow and part red, And like a griffon look'd he about, With hair down-combed upon his brows so stout ;
stout limbs, muscles	His lymes grete, his brawnes hard and stronge,	His limbs were great, his muscles hard and strong, shoulders	His schuldres broode, his armes rounde and longe.	His shoulders broad, his arms were round and long.
guise, country high, car bulls, the traces	And as the gyse was in his contré, Ful heye upon a char of gold stood he, } With foure white boles in a trays. In stede of cote-armure on his harnays, With nales yelwe and bright as eny gold, He had a beres skyn, col-blak, for-old.	According to the fashion of his land, Full high upon a car of gold stood he And to the car four bulls were link'd, milk-white. 'Stead of coat-armour on his harness bright. With yellow nails and bright as any gold, A bear's skin hung, coal-black, and very old.
long hair combed	} His longe heer was kembd byhynde his bak,	His flowing hair was comb'd behind his back, shone	As eny ravenes fether it schon for blak. A wrethe of gold arm-gret, of huge wights, Upon his heed, set ful of stoones bryghte,	As any raven's wing it shone for black. A wreath of gold, arm-thick, of mon- strous weight. Crusted with gems, upon his head was set, diamonds	Of fyne rubies and of fyn dyamauntz.	Full of fine rubies and clear diamonds.

¹ The knight, having fought in Prussia, refers to the Prussian modes.

² Classic? Possibly some hint of Renaissance fashions which may have appeared in Florence as early as that.

³ Lycurgus.

⁴ Kemped heres: Dr. Morris rejects the usual rendering of the word kemped as combed, and asserts that it means the very reverse, and, 'instead of smoothly combed, means bent, curled, and hence rough, shaggy.' A similar term occurs a few lines farther on, describing the hair 'kempt behind his back,' where Dr. Morris reads combed. It seems, however, contrary to the rule of courtesy observed by lovers, that a noble knight should appear at a festival like a wild man of the woods. If, on the other hand, the shaggy hairs were on the eyebrows, it certainly adds to the ferocity of his look. I prefer the former reading for Emel, bridegroom.

GLOSSARY.	About his char ther wenten white alauntz, ¹	About his car there leap'd huge white hounds, steer (bullock)	Twenty and mo, as grete as eny stere, To huntun at the lyoun or the bere, ²	Twenty and more, as big as any steer, To chase the lion or to hunt the bear, muzzle	And folwede him, with mosel fast i- bounde,	And follow'd him, with muzzles firmly bound, spikes, filled	Colerd with golde, and torettz ³ fyled rounde.	Collar'd in gold, with golden spikes around.
	An hundred lordes hadde he in his route Armed ful wel, with hertes stern and stoute.	A hundred lords did follow in his route, Well arm'd they were, with bearing stern and stout.
India	With Arcita, (in stories as men fynde) The gret Emetreus, the kyng of Ynde, Uppon a steede bay, trapped in steel,	With Arcite (as men in stories find) The great Emetrius, the King of Ind, Upon a bay steed trapp'd in shining steel, diapered	Covered with cloth of gold dyapred wel,	Covered with cloth of gold from head to heel, like	Cam rydyng lyk the god of armes, Mars. His coote-armure was of cloth of Tars, ⁴	Came riding like the god of armies, Mars; His coat-armour was made of cloth of Tars, overlaid	Cowched with perles whyte, and round, and grete.	O'erlaid with pearls all white and round and great:
burnished	His sadel was of brend gold newe y- bete;	His saddle was of smooth gold, newly beat.
mantle	A mantelet ⁵ upon his schuldre hang- ynge	A mantlet on his shoulder as he came,
cram-full, fire	} Bret-ful of rubies reed, as fir sparklyng.	Shone, cramm'd with rubies sparkling like red flame, run	His crispe her lik rynges was i-ronne,	And his crisp hair in shining rings did run, yellow- brown	} And that was yelwe, and gliterede as the sonne. His nose was heigh, his eyen bright cytryn, ⁶	Yellow it was, and glittering as the sun. His nose was high, his eyes were bright citrine,

¹ Alauns: a species of dog used for hunting the boar, &c. Spanish, alano. Speght says they were greyhounds, Tyrwhitt mastiffs, much esteemed in Italy in the fourteenth century. See Cotgrave—'Allan, a kind of big, strong, thick-headed, and short-snowted dog—the brood whereof came first out of Albania.' The alano now is the large brindled mastiff-like dog seen in the mountains in Spain with the shepherds and neat-herds: the same word exists in the Neapolitan patois, in the Spanish sense.

² Aldine ed.

³ They wore gold collars filled with toretz. This word is variously explained. Torette, ring-turret (Morris); ring or terret (Bell). 'Toret, a small wimble (or auger, big gimblet); touret, a drill, &c.' (Cotgrave). 'Gros clou dont la tête arrondie est arrêtée dans une branche d'un mors' (Suppl. to Fr. Acad. Dict.); 'tourette,' a little tower. I have ventured on translating

'toret' spike, after vainly seeking for authority for a collar filled with rings; though a single ring often hung beneath the throat. Contemporary illustrations of dogs' collars filled with long spikes are common enough—e.g. the fine fourteenth century tapestry now in the museum at Chartres, &c. In India dogs are furnished with spiked collars in tiger and boar hunting: the allans were clearly hunting dogs, and such spiked collars would thus be almost indispensable.

⁴ A kind of rich silk, probably oriental—from Tarsus.

⁵ The 'mantelet' was at first devised to protect the burnished helmet from becoming inconveniently heated by the sun: it became afterwards fantastic in form, and is the origin of the 'mantling' seen in modern coats of arms.

⁶ Citrine, one of the tertiary colours: a kind of citron-colour.

GLOSSARY	His lippes rounde, his colour was sangwyn,	His lips were round, his colour was sanguine, sprinkled	A fewe fraknes in his face y-spreynd,	With a few freckles scattered here and there, somewhat, mixed	} Betwixe yelwe and somdel blak y-meynd,	'Twixt black and yellow mingling they were, looking	And as a lyoun he his loking caste.	And lionlike his glance went to and fro, suppose	Of fyve and twenty year his age I caste.	His age was five and twenty years, I trow.
	His berd was wel bygonne for to sprynge;	A downy beard had just begun to spring,
	His voys was as a trumpe thundrynge.	His voice was like a trumpet thundering.
laurel	Upon his heed he werede of laurer grene	Upon his head he wore a garland green, hand, delight	} A garlond fresch and lusty for to sene.	Of laurel, fresh, and pleasant to be seen.
eagle, any	} Upon his hond he bar for his deduyt ¹	Upon his wrist he bore for his delight
	An egle tame, as eny lylle whyt.	An eagle, tame, and as a lily white.
	An hundred lordes hadde he with him ther,	A hundred lords he had about him there
Fr. sauf, save	} Al armed sauf here hedes in here ger.	All arm'd, except the head, in warlike gear.

About this king ran many tame lions and leopards.

There was a great festival, and the dancing, and minstrelsy, and feasting, and rich array of Theseus' palace were most wondrous to behold. I should never have time to tell you be	What ladies fayrest ben, or best daun-synge,	What ladies danced the best, or fairest were,

sing	Or which of hem can carole ² best and singe,	Or which of them best sung or carol'd there;
	Ne who most felyngly speketh of love; ³	Nor who did speak most feelingly of love;
sit	What haukes sitten on the perche above,	What hawks were sitting on the perch above, lie	What houndes liggen on the floor adoun.	What hounds lay crouching on the floor adown.

Then there were the temples to visit, to ask grace and favour from the gods. Palamon went to the Temple of Venus, the goddess of love, and prayed her to help him to gain his lady. Venus promised him success.

¹ This fair countenance is oddly assigned to an Indian monarch: but some of the details of his appearance are poetic embellishments, and must not be relied upon. The white eagle carried for his pleasure is probably one of the many exaggerations for picturesque effect, and is only a magnified falcon, a bird which was at this time the constant companion of the noble: hawking was in high favour, and the bird's tameness depended on its habituation to its owner's voice and touch. A little later on the hawks are mentioned as sitting on perches during the festival; such perches were in every room and hall in common life; so provision had to be made for their accommodation on the grandest occasions. In Wright's Woman-kind we read: 'Different species of the hawk were allotted to persons of the different grades and ranks of society. Thus we are told that the eagle and the vulture belonged to the emperor, from which we must understand that the emperor was not expected to go often a-hawking.' Evidently Chaucer was well read in his books on falconry.

² Carole (Tyrwhitt—the other editions have dance) was a round dance, probably accompanied by the voices of the dancers, as in a 'singing quadrille.'

³ See note 1, p. 66.

Arcite thought it more prudent to go to the god of war, Mars; so he sacrificed in his temple, and prayed for victory in the lists. Mars promised him the victory.

But Emelye did not wish to marry either of her lovers. She went to the temple of Diana early in the morning, and asked the goddess to help her not to get married! She preferred her free life, walking in the woods and hunting. She made two fires on Diana's altar: but Diana would not listen to her, and both the fires went out suddenly, with a whistling noise, and Emelye was so frightened that she began to cry. Then Diana told her that she was destined to marry one of these poor knights who had suffered so much for her, and so she must make up her mind to it.

Emelye then departed: but Mars and Venus had a great dispute, because, as you know, they had promised success to each of the two knights, and Emelye could not marry both. Now, you shall see how each of them managed to gain a victory.

All Monday was spent in jousting and dancing, and early on Tuesday began the great tourney.

GLOSSARY.

began	And on the morwe whan that day gan sprynge, Of hors and herneys noyse and claterynge Ther was in the hostelryes al aboute ; And to the paleys rood ther many a route Of lordes, upon steedes and palfreys.	And on the morrow, as the day 'gan spring, Noises of horse and harness clattering Sounded in all the hostelryes about! And to the palace rode a lengthening route Of lords on steeds and palfreys with- out price.
devylng	Ther mayst thou seen devysyng of herneys So uncouth ¹ and so riche and wrought so wel	There might you see harness of strange device, Curious and rich, with wondrous goldsmithry embroidering	Of goldsmithrye, of browdyng, and of steel ;	And fine steel work, and dainty broidery.
head-pieces	Thescheldes brighte, testers, and trap- pures ; Gold-beten helmes, hauberkes, cote armures ;	The shining shields, trappings, and head-pieces, Gold-beaten helms, mail-coats, and armour-dress, ornamental apparel	} Lordes in paramantz on here courseres, Knights of retenue, and eek squyeres Naylyng the speres, and helmes boke- lynge, (Fr. lancière) } Giggyng of scheeldes, with layneres thong } lasyng ; Ther as need is, they were nothing ydel ; The fomy steedes on the golden bridel	Lords in gay gear upon their coursers tall, And knights of retinue—squires in yard and hall Nailing on spear-heads, buckling helms, with clash Of shifting shields, lacing the tight whip-lash ; Wherever need was—not a man was idle. The foamy steeds upon the gol- dride champing the bit	} Gnawyng, and faste the armurers also	Gnawing, and fast &c.

¹ Uncouth, not known, unfamiliar, from kouth, to know, or for foreign.

GLOSSARY.	With fyle and hamer prikyng to and fro ;	With file and hammer pricking to and fro ; commons	Yemen on foote, and communes many oon With schorte staves, thikke as they may goon ;	Yeomen on foot, and flocking through the land, Commons with short staves, thick as they can stand.
go
kettledrums	Pypes, trompes, nakeres, clariounes,	Pipes, kettledrums, trumpets, and clarion-chime battle (Fr. bataille)	That in the bataille blowe bloody sownes ; The paleys ful of peples up and down, Heer thre, ther ten, holdyng here questioun,	That blow the bloody signal in war-time ; The palace full of people, up and down, Here three, there ten, debate and question guessing (Fr. deviner)	Dyvynyng of thise Thebane knyghtes two. Somme seyden thus, somme seyde it schal be so ;	Discussed the Theban knights, the famous two. Some said 'Tis thus ,' some said 'It will be so .'
black	Sommeheelde with him with the blake berd, ¹ Somme with the balled, somme with the thikke herd ;	Some held with him that had the blackish beard, Some with the bald, and some with the thick-hair'd :
scree	Somme sayde he lokede grym and wolde fighte ;	Some said 'He looks a grim one !' and 'He'll fight !
battle-axe	He hath a sparh of twenti pound of wighte.	He hath a sparh of twenty pound o' weight.'
guessing (Fr. deviner)	Thus was the halle ful of divynynges, Longe after that the sonne gan to springe.	So the hall buzz'd with gainsaying and surmise A long time since the sun began to rise.
	The grete Theseus that of his sleep awaked With menstralcy and noyse that was maked,	Great Theseus, tho' soon awak'd was he By reason of the noise and minstrelsy, made palace	Held yit the chambre of his paleys riche, Til that the Thebane knyghtes, bothe i-liche	Still kept his room in royal privacy Until the Theban knights (both equally alike	Honoured, weren into the paleys fet. Duk Theseus was at a wyndow set, Arrayed right as he were a god in trone.	Esteem'd and honour'd) reach'd the palace-gate. Duke Theseus at the palace-window sate, In raiment like a throned deity, soon	The peple preseth thider-ward ful sone Him for to seen, and doon him reverence,	The people pressing thitherward to see Him well and early, do him reverence, commands	And eek herkne his hest and his sentence. An heraud on a skaffold made an hoo, ²	And hearken to his orders and sentence. A herald on a scaffold made a Ho !

¹ Vide Lycurge's portrait, p. 70.² Ho ! an interjection meaning Stop ! It is the origin of the old 'Oyez !' now fallen into 'O yes !' among town-criers ; of the carter's 'Whoa !' to his horse. And there may be in it a clue to the Australian call of 'Coo-ee !' as a sound that travels farthest.

GLOSSARY.	Til al the noyse of the peple was i- do ;	Till all the people's noise was done, and so,
	And whan he sawh the peple of noyse al stille,	When he perceived the mass of men was still shewed	Thus schewede he the mighty dukes wille. ¹	Thus he announc'd the great Duke's sovereign will.
	'The lord hath of his heih discre- cioun	'My Lord hath of his high discre- tion
	Considered, that it were destruccioun To gentil blood, to fighten in the gyse	Considered, that it were destruction To gentle blood, to tourney in the guise arrange	Of mortal bataille now in this emprise; Wherfor to schapen that they schuln not dye, He wol his firste purpos modifye. No man therfore, up payne of los of lyf, No maner schot, ne pollax, ne schort knyf Into the lystes sende, or thider brynge ;	Of mortal battle in this enterprise. Wherefore, to guard that none of them shall die, He will his earlier purpose modify. No man therefore, on pain of loss of life, No manner of shot, nor pole-axe, nor short knife Into the lists shall bring, nor thither send.
stab	Ne schorte swerd for to stoke, with pointe bytynge No man ne drawe, ne bere by his side. Ne noman schal unto his felawe ryde	No short sword with a point or biting end No man shall draw nor carry at his side. And no man with his fellow-knight shall ride spear	Butoon cours, with a sharpe ygrounde spere; Foyne if him lust on foote, himself to wera.	More than one course with lances sharply ground. Fence if he will, on foot, to 'scape a wound.
comes to grief.	} And he that is at meschief, schal be take,	And whosoe'er is wounded they shall take, slain	And nat slayn, but be brought to the stake,	And not slay, but shall bring unto the stake ordained	That schal ben ordeyned on eyther syde ; But thider he schal by force, and ther abyde.	That shall be duly fixed on either side. Thither by force brought, there he shall abide.
chief	And if so falle, a cheventein be take	And if a chieftain come in such a strait mate	On eyther syde, or elles sle his make, ²	On either side—or if he slay his mate,

¹ The lord of the tourney enforced his own conditions. Theseus desired to avoid bloodshed.

² Single combat was, of course, the proper order of the tourney. In my Chaucer for Children I gave an illustration of the form of attack. The adversaries tilted across a bar or fence according to many MSS. Skill rather than strength was needed. The spear, as in pig-sticking in India, was thrust rather by the weight of the horse than by the weight of the arm. Strength of back and arm was necessary to avoid being bent backward or driven over the crupper: but extreme skill was requisite to hit one's slippery foe with anything like force. They aimed at the head. When both knights hit their mark so that fire flew from their helmets without either falling, it was reckoned a 'handsome course.' The horses were the chief sufferers in these mimic frays; the heavy beasts, protected as they were by a great weight of armour, were often injured. The best-trained dreaded the shock of encounter, and, as we read in Froissart, their restiveness and swerving at the last moment frequently spoiled the 'conree.' Accontee is most violent spurring, to their GLOSSARY.	No lenger schal the turneyinge laste.	Thereat no longer shall the tourneying last.

	God spede you ; go forth and ley en faste.	God speed you all ! go forth and lay on fast.
	With long sward and with mace fight your fille.	With long sword and with mace fight ye your fill !
	Goth now your way ; this is the lordes wille.'	Go your own way—this is the lord his will.'
	The voice of the peple touchede the heven,	The voice of all the people reach'd the sky heaven a cry in unison	} So lowde criede thei with mery steven :	So loud they shouted with a merry cry
	'God save such a lord that is so good,	'God save him, such a lord that is so good :
destruction	He wilneth no destruccioun of blood !'	He will not have a wanton waste of blood !'
	Up goth the trompes and the melodye. And to the lystes ryt the compainye	Up go the trumpets and the melody ! Now to the lists ride forth the company
	By ordynauce, thurghout the cité large,	By ordinance, throughout the city large,
	Hanged with cloth of gold, and not with sarge.	Hung all with cloth of gold, and not with serge.
	Ful lik a lord this noble duk gan ryde,	Full lordly 'gan the noble Duke to ride,
	These tuo Thebanas upon eyther side ;	The two knights Theban upon either side :
	And after rood the queen, and Emelye,	After them rode the queen and Emelye :
	And after that another compainye, Of oon and other after here degre.	And last behind, the other company, One and another, after their degree.
passen	And thus they passen thurghout the cité,	Thus they rode thro' the city fair and free,
	And to the lystes come thei by tyme.	And to the lists came, at the given time.
was not	It nas not of the day yet fully pryme, ¹ Whan sette was Theseus ful riche and hye,	It was still early, not yet fully prime, When Theseus was richly thron'd on high
	Ypolita the queen and Emelye,	With Hyppolyte the queen, and Emelye,
	And other ladyes in degrees aboute. Unto the seetes preseth al the route ; ²	And other ladies in the rows about. Up to the seats are pressing all the rout !
Mars also	And west-ward, thurgh the yates under Mart,	And through the gates of Mars on the west side
	Arcite, and eek the hundred of his parte,	Arcite, with all his hundred knights, in pride entered	With baner red ys entred right anoon ;	With banner streaming red, is come anon.

chagrin and disappointment, and the disgust of the lady-loves. The heavy and elaborate armour worn by man and beast increased the shock. It was of doubtful utility, for thrown riders could not rise for the weight of their 'harness;' and suffocation in the dust was a frequent cause of death. The tourney helmet, as may be noticed in museums, had only minute breathing holes ; the vizor could not be kept down long.

¹ Prime, the conclusion of the first quarter of the day—i.e., 9 o'clock.

² The seats were arranged in degrees or steps, as in an amphitheatre.

GLOSSARY.	And in that selve moment Palamon Is, under Venus, est-ward in that place,	And in the self-same moment, Palamon Rides beneath Venus, eastward in the place, manner	With baner whyt, ¹ and hardy cheere and face.	With banner white, and hardy mien and face.
seek	In al the world, to seeken up and down,	In all the world (ransack it as you may), well-balanced were not was not, could	So evene without variacioun Ther nere suche compainyes tweye. For ther nas noon so wys that cowthe seye,	So equal and complete, as on that day Never before were two such companies. No one was found so captious or so wise advantage (Fr. avan- tage)	That any had of other avauntage	As to see which side had the better chance.
cstate	Of worthines, ne of estaat, ne age, So evene were they chosen for to gesse.	In rank, or age, or worth, or valiance, So even balanced there could be no choice.
guess range them- selves	And in two renges faire they hem dresse.	So in two ranks were ranged the two convoys.
	Whan that here names rad were everychon,	When all the names were read forth one by one
gulle	That in here nombre gile were ther noon, Tho were the gates schet, and cried was lowde :	That in the numbers cheating could be none, Then were the gates shut, and the shout rose loud—
	‘Doth now your devoir, yonge knightes proude!’	‘Forward! Now do your devoir, young knights proud!’
	The heraldz lafte here prikyng up and down ;	The heralds ceas’d their pricking up and down, ring	Now ryngen trompes loude and clarioun ; Ther is nomore to sayn, but est and west	Now clang the trumps out shrill and clarioun. There is no more delay ; but east and west seriously	In gon the speres ful sadly in arest ; Ther seen men who can juste, and who can ryde ; In goth the scharpe spore into the side.	In go the spears, in earnest, into rest ; There one sees who can joust, and who can ride ! In goes the sharp spur in the smoking side ;
shields	Ther schyveren schaftes upon scheel- des thykke ; He feeleth thurgh the herte-spon ² the prikke.	There shafts are shivering on the bucklers thick ! (Right thro’ the heart-spoon he can feel the prick !)
	Up springen speres twenty foot on highte ;	Up spring the lances, twenty foot in height—go	Out goon the swerdes as the silver bryghte.	Out dart the swords like living silver bright—break to pieces	The helmes thei to-hewen and to- schrede ;	The helmets that they smash and hew and shred !

¹ Red was the colour of Mars, as white was of Venus. The rivals entered under the protection of the deities they had invoked.

² The word can hardly be translated—it means that point of the chest, between the ribs, where, by holding the breath, a spoon-shaped cavity is formed. Who can doubt, in this exciting picture of a tourney, that Chaucer himself had not only seen, but taken part in, such games, as every young soldier’s ambition led him to? There is light and colour in every line, and a fierce delight in even the ‘stern red streams’ of spouting blood, that is absolutely infectious ; and every figure may be a reminiscence of real events. One cannot read it without thinking he is really pointing to this man and that.

GLOSSARY.	Out brast the blood, with sterne	Out bursts the blood, in stern stream stremes reede,	rushing red!
	With mighty maces the bones thay	The bones they crush, with mighty to-breste.	maces strong!
began to	He thurgh the thikkeste of the throng	He thrusts into the middle of the thrust	gan threoste.	throng!
	Ther stomblen steedes stronge, and	There the strong steeds are stumbling go	doun goon alle.	—down go all!
	He rolleth under foot as doth a ballie.	See, he rolls under foot, there like a ball!
eneth	He foyneth on his foot with a tron-	On foot—see!—fencing with his trun-choun,	cheoun!
hustles	And he him hurtleth with his hors	He dashes on him while his horse is adoun.	down—
since	He thurgh the body is hurt, and sith-	He through the body is hurt, and now then take	they take in spite of	Maugré his heed, and brought unto	Him willy-nilly, and drag him to the
	the stake,	stake
agreement	As forward was, right ther he most	As warning was—and there he must (fore-word)	abyde.	abide.
is led	Another lad is on that other syde.	Now comes another, from the other side!
makes.	And som tyme doth hem Theseus to	Now Theseus gives them breathing-
(Fr. fait)	reste,	time, to rest
	Hem to refreissche, and drinken if hem	Or freshen them, or drink, as may be choose	leste.	best.
	Ful ofte a-day han thise Thebanes	Full oft-to-day have met the Thebans two	two,
	Togidre y-met, and wrought his felawe	Have met and dealt each other many woe (harm)	woo;	a dreadful blow,
	Unhorsed hath ech other of hom	Twice each unhorsed the other in the twice	tweye.	fray.
was not	Ther nas no tygre in the vale of	No tiger in the vale of Gargophey, Galgopheye, ¹
	Whan that hir whelp is stole, whan it	When her young cub is stolen in her little	is lite,	sight,
	So cruel on the hunte, as is Arcite	Is crueller in the chase than is Arcite
	For jealous hert upon this Palomoun :	For jealous heart upon this Palamon!
	Ne in Belmary ² thern is no fel lyoune,	And in Belmary is no fell lion mad	That hunted is, or is for hunger wood,	Hunted, and mad for hunger in the wood,
	Ne of his prey desireth so the blood,	That seeing his prey so thirsteth for his blood
	As Palomon to slen his foo Arcite.	As Palamon to slay his foe Arcite!
	The jealous strokes on here helmes	The jealous strokes deep in their hel-byte;	metts bite.
	Out rennth blood on bothe here sides	Out runneth the red blood, for both reede. ³	do bleed.

¹ This word is variously written in the MSS. There was a town called Galapha in Mauritania Tangitana; or it might be the Vale of Gargaphie (Ovid, Met. III. 155, 156).

² A Moorish kingdom in Africa.

³ There is no doubt this rough play, with the mildest prior intentions, often turned before the day was out into ghastly earnest.

The combatants, naturally violent, excited by the cries of their ladies and by real passion, panting and heated with efforts, lost command of themselves and their horses, and grew really bloodthirsty. It is shocking that love should have made such cruel foes of two true friends. Not but what it must have been a splendid scene.

GLOSSARY.	Som tyme an ende ther is of every dede ;	Sometime an end must be of every deed.
catch	For er the sonne unto the reste wente, The stronge kyng Emetreus gan hente	For ere the sun unto his setting went The King Emetrius made a fierce descent fought	This Palomon, as he faught with Arcite, And made his swerd depe in his fleissch to byte ;	On Palamon hard fighting with Arcite, And made his sword deep in his flesh to bite.
taken	And by the force of twenti he is take Unyolden, and i-drawe unto the stake. And in the rescous of this Palomoun The stronge kyng Ligurges is born adoun ; And kyng Emetreus for al his strengthe Is born out of his sadel a swerdes lengthe,	Then by the force of twenty he is seiz'd, Dragg'd to the stake, unyielding, unappeas'd. And in the rescue of this Palamon The mighty king Lyncurgus is borne down : And King Emetrius for all his strength Is borne out of his saddle a sword's length, taken	So hit him Palomon er he were take ; But al for nought, he was brought to the stake. His hardy herte mighte him helpe nought ;	So Palamon hit out ere they could take Him—still they brought him to the stake. His hardy courage now could help him nought, remain	He most abyde whan that he was caught, By force, and eek by composicioun.	He must abide there idle, being caught, By force of men, and by agreement too.
sorroweth	Who sorweth now but woful Palomoun,	Who grieveth now like Palamon, for wo go	That moot nomore gon agayn to fighte ? And whan that Theseus hadde seen this sighte, Unto the folk that foughten thus echon He cryed, 'Hoo ! nomore, for it is doon !	That he no more may rush into the fight ? And when Duke Theseus had seen that sight, Unto the folk still fighting everyone, He shouted 'Hoo ! no more, for it is done.
party (to injustice)	I wol be trewe juge, and nought partye. Arcyte of Thebes schal have Emelye, That hath by his fortune hath hire faire i-wonne.'	I will be true judge, nowise partial I. Arcite of Thebes shall have Emelye, That by good fortune hath her fairly won.'
	Anoon ther is a noyse of peple by-gonne For joye of this, so lowde and heye withalle, It semede that the listes scholde falle.	And now there is a noise of crowds begun For joy of this, so loud and high withell, It seem'd as though the very lists should fall.

What can fair Venus do now ? She wept with disappointment till her tears filled the lists, saying, 'Now I am shamed !' But Saturn comforted her, saying, 'Daughter, hold thy peace : Mars hath his will, his knight hath had the victory, but thou shalt be eased soon.'

The trompes with the lowde mynstralcye,

The trumpets, and the loudest — stralsy

GLOSSARY.	The herawdes, that ful lowde yolle and cry,	The heralds, that full loudly yell and cry, are delighted	Been in here wele for joye of daun Arcyte	Blare with a will, for joy of lord Arcite wait, little	But herketh me, and stynteth now a lite,	But hearken, wait, give me a brief respite, what, there taken off helmet }	Which a miracle ther bifel anon.	—See what a miracle befell anon.
	This fierse Arcyte hath of his helm ydoon,	This fierse Arcite hath now his helm undone,
	And on a courser for to schewe his face,	And on a courser for to show his face,
	He priked endelonge ¹ the large place, Lokyng upward upon his Emelye ;	He pricketh endlong up the ample place Looking upward upon his Emelye.
upon	And sche agayn him cast a frendly eyghe,	And she cast down on him a friendly eye
	(For wommen, as to speken in comune,	(For women, speaking in a general way, Thay folwen al the favour of fortune)	Follow the favour of good fortune aye), her manner	And was alle his in cheer, and in his herte.	And seem'd all his in mien, as in his heart.
	Out of the ground a fyr infernal sterte,	Out of the ground the fires infernal dart
	From Pluto sent, at requeste of Saturne,	From Pluto sent, demanded by Saturn fear began	For which his hors for feere gan to turne,	Whereat his horse for terror back did turn,
leap	And leep asyde, and foundrede as he leep ;	And leapt aside and foundered in his leap ;
before, take } heed	And or that Arcyte may take keep,	And ere Arcite his flagging seat could keep,
	He pighte him on the pomel of his heed,	He flung him on the pummel of his head
	That in that place he lay as he were deed,	So that upon the earth he lay as dead.
crushed	His brest to-brosten with his sadil bowe.	His breast-bone broken on the saddle-bow,
	As blak he lay as eny col or crowe,	As black he lay as any coal or crow, run	So was the blood y-ronnen in his face. ²	So had the dark blood rushed into his face.
borne	Anon he was y-born out of the place	Swiftly they lift and bear him from the place,
	With herte soor, to Theseus paleys.	Sore-hearted, to the palace for relief.
carved (cut)	Tho was he corven out of his harneys,	Then was he cut out of his harness stiff
	And in a bed y-brought ful faire and blyve,	And in a fair bed tended with all skill,
	For he was yit in memory and on lyve,	For he was yet alive, and conscious still,
	And alway crying after Emelye	And always crying out for Emelye.

¹ Endlong. A feat used for display. By spurring a horse on one side, and at the same time holding him tight with a severe bit, he is made to curvet, or advance endlong in short bounds. The horse of Arcite, tired and excited, was not up to the effort, and Arcite was exhausted.

² A graphic touch! Chaucer must have seen this, the commonest of accidents; the high saddles, sometimes locking the rider in his seat all round, were constructed to retain him in his seat however violent the push: but they were the cause of many an unhappy accident. William the Conqueror died from the same thing—crushing against the saddle-bow.

Duke Theseus came back to the town of Athens in great state and cheer. Were it not for this unlucky accident at the end, there had not been a single mishap; and as the leeches said Arcite would soon be well again, that was no such great disaster. None had been actually killed, though many had been grievously wounded: which was very gratifying. For all the broken arms could be mended, and the bruises and cuts healed with salves, and herbs, and charms.

There had even been no discomfiture, for falls did not count as shame, nor was it any disgrace to be dragged to a stake with kicks and hootings, and held there hand and foot all alone whilst one's horse was driven out by the sticks of the grooms. That was no disgrace, for it was not cowardice: and such things must happen at a tourney. And so all the people made mirth.

The Duke gave beautiful gifts to all the foreign knights, and there were ever so many more shows and feasts for the next three days, and the two mighty kings had the greatest honour paid to them, till all men had gone home to their houses.

So there was an end of the battle for fair Emelye.

But Arcite did not get well so soon as they thought he would. His wound swelled up, and the sore increased at his heart more and more. He was so injured that the balms and the salves gave him no ease, and nature could not do her part. And when nature cannot work, farewell physic! there is no more to be done but carry the man to the churchyard.

In short, Arcite was evidently dying, and he sent for Emelye, who held herself his wife, and for Palamon, his cousin, and they both came to his bedside.

Then he told Emelye all the sorrow that was in his heart, at losing her whom he had loved so dearly; and how he still loved her, and wanted her to pray for him when he was dead.

GLOSSARY.		'Naught may the woful spirit in myn herte	'Naught may the woeful spirit in my heart
one	Declare o poynt of alle my sorwes smerte	Declare of all my bitter sorrows smart
	To you, my lady, that I lovè most ; But I byquethe the service of my gost ¹ To you aboven every creature, Syn that my lyf ne may no lenger	To you, my lady, that I still love most ; But I bequeath the service of my ghost, To you above all creatures evermore, Since my poor life will now, ere long, endure	dure.	be o'er.
pains	Allas, the woo! alas, the peynes stronge	Alas, the woe! alas, the trials strong, suffered	That I for you have suffred, and so longe!	That I for you have borne—and, ah, so long!
death	Allas, the deth! alas, myn Emelye!	Alas, to die! alas, mine Emelye!
separating	Allas, departyng of our compaignye!	Alas, that we so soon part compaigny!

¹ The old word ghost cannot here be translated. Neither 'soul' nor 'spirit' gives the grim unearthly touch of Chaucer's meaning. Arcite's perfect faithfulness, even in death, so that being no more a man he still will yield her the service of his bodiless spirit, is a transcendent description of medieval feelings of honour. There are various sentiments in other Chaucer-poems which correspond. In the Parliament of Fowls the Dove repudiates the now ceasing to love even when the be is obdurate till death, or even will dead.

GLOSSARY.	Allas, myn hertes queen ! alas, my wyf !	Alas, my heart's one queen ! alas, my wife !
	Myn hertes lady, endere of my lyf !	Ah, my heart's lady, ender of my life !
ask	What is this world ? what asken men to have ?	What is life worth ? what do men yearn to have ?
	Now with his love, now in his colde grave	Now with his darling—now in his cold grave, any	Allone, withouten eny compainye !	Alone, alone, and with no company !
foe	Farwel, my swete foo ! myn Emelye ! ¹	Farewell, my sweet foe—farewell, Emelye,
	And softe tak me in youre armes tweye,	And softly take me in your arms to-day
two	For love of God, and herkneth what I seye.	For love of God, and listen what I say.
hearken	I have heer with my cosyn Palamon Had stryf and rancour many a day agon	I have here with my cousin Palamon Had strife and hatred days and years ago
	For love of yow, and for my jelousie.	For love of you, and for my jealousy.
	So Jupiter have of my soule part, As in this world right now ne knowe I non	So Jupiter have of my soul a part, As in the whole wide world now know I none
	So worthy to be loved as Palamon, That serveth you, and wol don al his lyf.	So worthy to be loved as Palamon, Who served you well, and will do all his life.
shall	And if that evere ye schul ben a wyf,	Therefore, if ever you shall be a wife, forget	Foryet not Palamon, the gentil man.'	Forget not Palamon, that noble man.'
began to fail	And with that word his speche faille gan,	And with that word his speech to fail began,
	For fro his feete up to his brest was come	For from his feet up to his breast was come
	The cold of deth, that hadde him overnome. ²	The cold of death, that hath him overcome.
already	And yet moreover in his armes two	And now moreover, in his arms at last gone	The vital strengthe is lost, and al ago.	The vital strength is lost, and all is past.
without	Only the intellect, withouten more, That dwellede in his herte sik and sore,	Only the intellect, all clear before, That lingered in his heart so sick and sore, began to fail	Gan fayllen, when the herte felte deth ;	Began to falter when the heart felt death darkened, failed	} Dusken his eyen two, and failleth breth.	Then his two eyes grew dark, and faint his breath,
	But on his lady yit caste he his eye ;	But on his lady yet cast he his eye ;
	His laste word was— Mercy, Emelye.	And his last word was—' Mercy, Emelye. '
ther as, whither	} His spiryt chaungede hous, and wente ther	His spirit chang'd houses, and went whither
	As I cam nevere, I can nat tellen wher.	I cannot tell, as I came never thither.

He was dead.

Emelye was carried away from Arcite, fainting; and the sorrow she felt is ¹ Tyrwhitt's and Bell's editions read, 'Farwel, my swete, farwel, myn Emelye!'

² Tyrwhitt. Overnome is participle past of overnimen (Sax.), to overtake. The following, and the sixth line further on, are also Tyrwhitt's reading.

more than I can tell. Day and night she wept, for she had learned to love Arcite as much as if he had been already her husband, so that she was nigh to dying.

All the city mourned for him, young and old. Theseus and Palamon, and everybody was filled with grief. Never had there been such sorrow.

Theseus had a splendid bier made, for Arcite to be burned according to the custom, with the greatest honours. Huge oak trees were cut down on purpose to burn on his pile. Arcite's body was covered with cloth of gold, with white gloves on his hands, his sword by his side, and a wreath of laurel on his head. His face was uncovered, so that all the people might see him, when he was carried forth from the great hall of the palace.

Theseus ordered that Arcite should be burned in that very grove where Palamon and Arcite had first fought for love of Emelye, on that sweet May morning a year ago. So the funeral pile was raised in that grove.

Three beautiful white horses, covered with glittering steel harness and the arms of Arcite, bore all his armour and weapons before him to the spot.

The whole city was hung with black, and the noblest Greeks in the land carried the bier. Duke Theseus, and his old father Egeus, and Palamon, walked beside it, carrying in their hands golden cups, full of milk and wine and blood, to throw upon the pile. Then came Emelye, weeping, with fire in her hand, as the custom was, wherewith to set light to the pile.

With great care and ceremony the wood and straw were built up around the body, so high that they seemed to reach to the sky, and cloth of gold and garlands of flowers were hung all round it.

Poor Emelye fainted when she set fire to the pile, in the course of the funeral service, for her grief was more than she could bear. As soon as the fire burned fast, perfumes and jewels were flung in, and Arcite's shield, spear, and vestments, and the golden cups. Then all the Greeks rode round the fire to the left, three times shouting, and three times rattling their spears; and three times the women cried aloud.

And when all was over, Emelye was led home; and there were curious ceremonies performed, called the lykewake, at nightfall.

Long afterwards, Theseus sent for Palamon. The mourning for Arcite was over in the city, but Palamon came, still wearing his black clothes, quite sorrowful.

Then Theseus brought Emelye to Palamon, and reminded them both of Arcite's dying words. It was not natural, he said, that grief should endure for ever. The hardest pain ends at last, the strongest must give way, life itself ends.

GLOSSARY.	Lo the ook, that hath so long a noris-schyng	Lo, the oak, that hath so slow a nourishing
	Fro tynē that it gynneth first to springe,	From that time when it 'ginneth first to spring,
	And hath so long a lyfe, as we may see,	And hath so long a life, as we may see,
	Yet, atte lastē, wasted is the tree.	Yet at the last, a-wasted is the tree.
hard	Considereth eek, how that the hardē stoon	Consider too, how that the ha stone

GLOSSARY.

tread	Under oure feet, on which we trede	Under our feet, where feet have trod go	and goon,	and gone,
lieth, way	Yit wasteth it, as it lith by the weye.	Yet it decayeth, lying by the road.
	The brode ryver som tyme wexeth	The river drieth up, however broad :
	alreye.
disappear	The grete townes seen we wane and	The greatest towns, we see them wane
	wende ;	and wend.
	Then may ye see that al thyng hath	Thus may ye see that all things have an ¹ ende.	an end.
	Of man and womman sen we wel also	Of man and woman also, well we know
	That nedeth in oon of thise termes	That needs must be, in one of the
	two.	terms two,
	This is to seyn, in youthe or elles age	That is to say, in Youth, or else in Age
	He moot ben deed, the kyng as schal	All have to die, the king like the poor a page.	page.
	Som in his bed, some in the deep ⁸	Some in their beds, some in the heavy
	see,	sea,
	Som in the larg ⁸ fe ¹ d as men may	Some in the great green fields, as we
	se.	may see.
same	Ther helpeth naught, al goth that ilke	There is no help, all goeth the same weye.	way.
see, (Ger. schen) die	} Thanne may I seyn that al this thing	Thus may we say ev'n sorrow must moot deye.	decay.

He took Emelye's hand and placed it in the hand of Palamon, adding—

	I rede that we make of sorwes two	I purpose that we make, of sorrows
		two,
One	O parfyt joye lastyng evere mo.	One perfect joy, that lasteth evermo.

Then Palamon and Emelye were married, and they lived happy ever after.

welfare	For now is Palamon in alle wele,	For now this Palamon hath all the wealth, health	Lyvyng in blisse, in riches, and in	Living in bliss, in riches, and in
	hele ;	health ;
	And Emelye him loveth so tendrely,	And Emelye loveth him so tenderly, nobly	And he hire serveth al so gentilly,	And he doth cherish her so faithfully, there,	That nevere was ther no word hem	That all their days no thought they between	bitweene	had again
affliction	Of jelousye, or any other teene.	Of jealousy, nor any other pain.
	Thus endeth Palamon and Emelye,	Thus endeth Palamon and Emelye, fair	And God save al this fayre compainye.	And God save all this kindly company!

HERE ENDS THE 'KNIGHT'S TALE.'

NOTES BY THE WAY.

[The outline of the foregoing Tale was borrowed by Chaucer from Boccaccio's 'Theseida:' but the treatment and conception of character are wholly his own. It is a common and foolish thing to say of the Knights Tale that with all its merits the two principal actors, Arcite and Palamon, are very much alike, and constantly may be mistaken for each other. It seems to me that such a remark is a proof of not having read the tale, for the characters of the two men are almost diametrically opposed, and never does one act or speak as the other would do.

¹ Bell's edition.

Notice, therefore, the striking contrast all through the story between the characters. From the first, Arcite in the prison is seen to be cooler and more matter-of-fact than Palamon, whose violent nature suffers earliest from imprisonment, mentally, perhaps morally; and whom we find pacing restlessly about, and ceaselessly bemoaning his fate, while Arcite is probably sitting still in philosophic resignation.

Palamon is clearly a man of violent, uncontrolled passions—reckless, even rash, and frantically jealous. Arcite's is by far the stronger mind—wise, clever, cool, but quite as brave and fervent as his friend, a fatalist, strong in his firm philosophy, which Palamon rejects as vain, perhaps mischievous. Every incident brings out their character in strong relief. To Palamon it is given to see Emelye first. He mistakes her for Venus, and prays to her as such—his mind being probably slightly disordered by the privations of mediæval prison life, as a mind so excitable would soon become. Arcite recognises her instantly as a woman, and claims her calmly. Palamon 'flies out,' reproaches him bitterly, violently, with the term most abhorrent to the chivalrous spirit of the time—'false.' Arcite answers with passion, but he is matter-of-fact in the midst of it, reminding his friend how little consequence it is to either of them, for both are perpetual prisoners; and he can even wind up with a touch of humour, quoting the two fighting dogs and the kite.

The release of the two knights is significant. Arcite, the fatalist, would possibly not have tried the ruse which freed Palamon. He escapes his fate by a chance. Palamon by an effort of his own.

On his release from prison, Arcite follows out successfully a most difficult rôle, concealing his identity in the midst of Theseus' court, and in the agitating presence of his lady, at the risk of his life—for years: a stratagem requiring constant sang-froid and self-control, which would have been as impossible to Palamon, as mistaking a beautiful woman for a divine vision would have been to Arcite. He does not forget Palamon during this time, though powerless to help him. He is unselfish enough to pray Juno for him, in his soliloquy in the wood.

At the meeting of the rivals in the wood, Palamon, mastered at once by rage, bids Arcite fight with him, that instant, regardless of his (Palamon's) being unarmed: he fears nothing, he only wants to fight. Arcite, also furious, can nevertheless see the common-sense side of the affair, and the need for fair play and proper accoutrements; and enumerates very reasonably the arms and other necessities he will bring Palamon, including (so matter-of-fact is he) food and bedding for the night.

When the combatants are discovered in their illegal and unwitnessed fight, Palamon does not fear death. He is only anxious that, whether he be dead or alive, Arcite shall not have Emelye; and reiterates his entreaty that Arcite may be slain too—before or after, he doesn't care which, as long as he is slain.

Palamon's intense jealousy, which could face death cheerfully, but not the yielding up of his beloved to another man, and his anxiety that Arcite should not survive him, are of course less ignoble than they seem if viewed in the light of the times. It was this same jealousy which prompted him to betray Arcite as soon as he got the chance—forgetting that Arcite had not betrayed him, the day before, when he was in his power. But Chaucer himself once or twice refers to his mind being unhinged—'wood for love'—which claims our forbearance.

It is also noteworthy that Palamon entreats Venus for success, for he thinks of nothing but his love: Arcite thinks it more prudent to address since he has got to win Emelye by fight—he has considered the question, you see; and it is therefore (I think) that the preference is given to Palamon in marrying Emelye, because society so exalted the passion of love in those days, while Arcite is made to suffer for his very prudence, which might argue a less absorbing passion.

It was a master-thought to make Arcite die by an accident, so that neither of the rivals vanquished the other, and Palamon escapes the possible reproach of winning his happiness by slaying his friend.

The sympathy, however, remains with Arcite. His character is beautifully developed. It is not inconsistent with his power of self-control and brave heart, noble throughout, that he is able to make such a sacrifice on his death-bed as to give Emelye to Palamon. It is a sign of forgiveness of Palamon, who, at the point of death, showed no such generosity; and the greatness of the sacrifice must be estimated by remembering the mediæval view of love and love matters.

I do not think that Palamon could have done that, any more than he could have concealed his identity in Theseus' Court.

One last suggestion. As Van Eyck's pictures are crowded with incident, so mediæval story is decked with quaint touches, and personal allusions, constantly bearing a double meaning.

Chaucer has given no portraits of Palamon and Arcite, whose characters are so clear and forcible all through the tale, that some physical description is sorely needed: unless it is allowable to take the kings Emetrius and Licurge as their representatives. The portraits of the two sovereigns fit singularly well the fierce, passionate nature of Palamon, and the cooler but nobler one of Arcite.

Again, the appearance of Licurge (taken as Palamon's portrait) is very characteristic. His eye is fierce, his get-up is mighty, barbaric, bizarre; but Emetrius (Arcite) appears in a much more regular way. Licurge mounts a chariot drawn by bulls—Emetrius rides on horseback, like an ordinary knight. Licurge is enveloped in a bear's hide—Emetrius is properly caprisoned.

Certain as I have always been that the minute descriptions of two dummy kings were not minute without a purpose, their portraits are likely to represent not only the two rivals, otherwise mere shadows unprecedentedly thrown on the mind's eye for form and colour, but real personages. It is said that Henry of Derby, son of John of Gaunt, 'bore him well' at the tourney held in London in 1386.¹ Henry was 25 in 1386, the age attributed to Emetrius. The son of a fair mother (see Boke of Duchesse), his visage is not inconsistent: and the flattery would have been politic as well as natural. The tale is supposed to have been written about 1387.

The Earl of Mar, who was killed in a tilt in the reign of Richard II., may, on the other hand, be indicated by Emetrius.

But the eagle, as well as the lion, continually occurs as the royal badge, both white and coloured. The white bulls and great white dogs which accompany Licurge (Palamon) are not traceable to any distinguished tilter who might have been noted by Chaucer: but the white bull is likely to have indicated about 1390 descent from the Neville family; the white dog was also a Neville badge.]

¹ Stowe.

THE CLERK'S TALE.

GLOSSARY.	WHAN that the Kright hadde thus his tale i-told	Now when the good Knight thus his tale had told, was not (he was) }	In al the route nas ther yong ne old,	In all the group there was nor young nor old
	That he ne seyde it was a noble story, And worthi to be drawn in memdry.	But said it was a very noble story, And worth remembering—full of game and glory.
everyone	And namely the gentils everichoon.	The gentlefolk in chief their praises give.
laughed	Our Hoste tho' lowh and swoor, 'So moot I goon,	Our Host laugh'd loudly, swearing 'As I live!
mail (Fr. malle) }	This gooth right wel : unboked is the male : ¹	This goes right well! unbuckled is the mail!
	Let se now who schal telle another tale.'	Let's see now who shall tell another tale.'
Oxford	Sir Clerk of Oxenford,' our hoste sayde,	'Sir Clerk of Oxford,' then our landlord said,
	'Ye ryde as stille and coy as doth a mayde ²	'You ride as shy and quiet as a maid
	Were newe spoused, syttyng at the bord ; ³	Newly espous'd, who sits beside the board ;
	This day ne herde I of your mouth a word.	All day we have not had from you a word.
sophism	I trow ye study aboute som sophyme.	I guess, some subtle lore you're studying.
	But Salomon saith, everythyng hath tyme.	But Solomon says there's time for everything.
be	For Goddis sake as beth of better cheere,	Prithee, rouse up, and be of better cheer, study	It is no tyme for to stodye hiere.'	It is no time for your deep studies here.'

'Do not give us a sermon, or something so learned that we cannot understand it.'

¹ The French word malle applies to a box rather than a bag: but the old English word mail still refers to the locked bag of transit. The old French male was used for a great budget.

² Students then entered the university at a far younger age than at the present day, almost indeed when boys now enter the public schools, so that the Clerk of Oxford may have been but a boy, which would account for his dilident demeanour: yet his education and knowledge might warrant mine host's fear of his being too learned³ them.

³ Table: a board upon trestles.

GLOSSARY. 'Spekith so playn at this tyme, we yow praye,
That we may understonde that ye saye.' 'Speak to us very plainly, now, we pray,
That we may understand the whole you say.'

This worthy Clerk answered pleasantly, 'Host, I am under your orders, so I will obey you, as far as is reasonable.'

	'I wil yow telle a tale, which that I Lerned at Padowe of a worthy clerk, As provyd by his wordes and his werk. He is now deed and nayled in his chest,	'I'll tell you now a story that I learnt At Padua, from a most worthy clerk, As proved by all his words and all his work. Now he is dead, and nailled in his chest, coffin
give	Now God yive his soule wel good rest! Fraunces Petrark, ¹ the laureat poete,	I pray to God to give his spirit rest! Francis Petrarch, the poet laureate, was named	Highte this clerk, whos rethorique swete	This clerk was call'd, whose rhetoric sweet did late
Italy	Enlumynd al Ytail of poetrie, As Linian ² did of philosophie,	Illume all Italy with poetry, As Linian did with philosophy, law	Or lawue, or other art particulere; But deth, that wol not suffre us duellen here,	And law, and other noble arts as well; But death, that will not suffer us here to dwell, eye	But as it were a twyncling of an ye, Hem bothe hath slayn, and alle schul we dye.'	But, as it were, a twinkling of an eye, Hath slain them both, and we, too shall all die.'

PART I.

To the west of Italy there is a territory called Saluces,³ which once belonged to a marquis very much beloved by all his people. They all obeyed and respected him, both lords and commoners, and he was very happy.

Besides, he was the noblest born of any one in Lombardy—handsome, and strong, and young—courteous to all, and discreet enough, except in some things where he was not quite perfect! and his name was Walter.

The worst fault of him was the careless sort of life he led. He did nothing but hunt, and hawk, and amuse himself, instead of attending to more serious duties. This made his people very sorry, and they thought if Walter had a wife he would get more steady, and not waste his time so sadly.

One day all his people went in a great crowd to see him; and the wisest one among them said—'O noble marquis, your goodness gives us courage to come to you and tell you what we want. Do not be angry, but deign to listen to us, for we all love you. The only thing needed to make us quite happy is for you to

¹ These are the lines on which the supposition is based that Petrarch and Chaucer had met. The Clerk's Tale was probably written in 1375, shortly after Petrarch's death, and two years after hearing it from Petrarch's own lips; or about 1379, after his second visit to Lombardy. Petrarch himself asserts that he learnt the tale by heart for the express purpose of telling it to friends: and Chaucer's translation from Petrarch's

MS. version is likely to have been made when the meeting, or the new visit to Lombardy, set his mind to work on the Italian story. See Table of Events.

² 'Joannes of Lignano, near Milan, a then illustrious canonist and natural philosopher, who flourished about 1370.'

³ Saluzzo, a marquisate near Mount Viso: Lat. Vesulus.

marry. Consider, if death should break off your noble line, how we should suffer under a strange successor! Though your green youth flower as yet, age creepeth in always, still as a stone. Hear us, then; bow your neck under that blissful yoke of sovereignty, not service, which men call wedlock. And we will choose you a wife in a short space of time, born of the best and gentlest blood —'

Walter listened, and then answered—'My dear people, you ask a great sacrifice from me, for I enjoy my liberty: I don't want a wife. But if it makes you any happier, I will try and get one as soon as I can. As for choosing me one, pray don't. Let me alone in choosing of my wife: that charge upon my own back I will bear. Only remember, that when I am married, ye shall not quarrel with my choice. For since I consent to give up my freedom to please you, you must pay such honour to my wife, whoever she may be, as though she were an emperor's daughter.'

All the people promised they would be quite content with any wife he liked, for they were so much afraid he would not marry at all if they didn't.

Then, to make quite sure, they begged him to fix exactly the day when the wedding should take place, and he did so, promising to get everything ready, according to their request. And the people thanked him on their knees and went away.

PART II.

Now, near the marquís's palace, there was a village of poor labouring people.

GLOSSARY.
poor

GLOSSARY. poor	Among this pore folk there dwelt a man,	Among the poorer folk there dwelt a man,
	Which that was holden porest of hem alle:	And he was held the poorest of them all.
	But heighe God som tyme sende can	But God Almighty, when He wills it, can thorpe (village)	His grace unto a litel oxe stalle. ¹	Send grace unto a little ox's stall.
	Janicula men of that throop him calle.	Janicle all the villagers him call.
	A doughter had he, fair y-nough to sight,	A daughter had he, fair, and without blame, was called	And Grisildes this yonge mayden hight.	Griselda was this fair young maiden's name.
	But for to speke of hir vertuous beauté,	But if all maidenly virtues beauteous be,
one	Than was sche oon the fayrest under the sonne:	Then was the maid the fairest under the sun;
	For porely i-fostered up was sche,	So humbly nurtur'd in her home was she,
run	No licorous lust was in hir body ronne:	No greedy wants seem'd in her thoughts to run.
	Wel offer of the welle than of the tonne ²	For oftener of the well than of the tun

¹ A delicate allusion to Him who was born in a manger.

² The tun was the wine-cask: the provided a cheaper beverage.

GLOSSARY.

because	Sche dronk, and for sche wolde vertu please, Sche knew wel labour, but noon ydel ense. But though this mayden tender were of age,	She drank, and as a good life did her please, She knew what work was—never idle ease. But though this maiden was as yet so young, breas girlhood	} Yet in the brest of her virginité	Under her girlish innocence there lay mature, serious	} Ther was enclosed rype and sad cor- rage; ¹	A brave and serious spirit, ever strong;
love	And in gret reverence and charité Hir olde pore fader fostered sche;	And with good heart she laboured day by day To tend and help her fater, poor and grey.
se	A fewe scheep spyunnyng on the feld sche kepte.	Some sheep while spinning in the fields she kept, would not be	Sche nolde not ben ydel til sche slepte.	For never was she idle till she slept.
came bring words	And when sche hom-ward com, sche wolde brynge Wortis or other herbis tymes ofte,	And she would often, as she homeward sped, Bring with her herbs and cresses gathered there, chop, boll living	The which sche schred and seth for her lyvyng, And made hir bed ful hard, and nothing softe.	Which for a meal she fain would seethe and shred. Hard was her bed and frugal was her fare, ever, sup- ported	} And ay sche kept hir fadres lif on lofte With every obeissance and diligence, That child may do to fadres reverence.	Keeping her father with untiring care, And all obedience, and all diligence That child can give to filial reverence.
father's

On this poor hard-working Griselda, the marquis Walter had often cast his eyes when he happened to pass her while hunting. And when he looked at her it was with no foolish thoughts, but with serious admiration for her virtue. He had never seen any one so young who was so good, and he resolved that if ever he married anybody he would marry her.

So, after the people's visit, according to his promise to them, Walter began to prepare beautiful dresses and jewels, brooches and rings of gold, and everything proper for a great lady. And the wedding-day arrived, but no one had seen any bride, or could guess where she was to come from!

At last all the feast was ready, all the palace beautifully adorned, upstairs and downstairs—hall and chambers. The noble guests arrived who were bidden to the wedding—lords and ladies richly arrayed—and still there was no bride!

The marquis made them all follow him into the village, to the sound of music.

Now, Griselda, who knew nothing of all this, went that morning to fetch water from the well; and she heard say that this was to be the marquis's wedding-day.

¹ Corage is used in several senses: impulse (as in the opening lines of the Prologue), feeling, or disposition may be implied.

The word is derived from the Latin cor, the heart.

So she hastened home, and thought to herself she would get through her work as fast as she could, and try to see something of the sight.

'I will stand with the other girls at the door,' she said to herself innocently, 'and I shall see the new marchioness, if she passes by this way to the castle.'

Just as she crossed the door, the marquis came up, and called her.

Griselda set down her water-cans beside the door in an ox's stall,¹ and, dropping on her knees,² waited for the great lord to speak.

The marquis said gravely, 'Where is thy father, Griselda?' and Griselda answered humbly, 'He is all ready here,' and hurried in to fetch him.

Then the marquis took the poor man by the hand, saying, 'Janicula, I shall no longer hide the wish of my heart. If you will consent, I will take your daughter for my wife before I leave this house. I know you love me, and are my faithful liegeman. Tell me, then, whether you will have me for your son-in-law?'

This sudden offer so astonished the poor man that he grew all red, and abashed, and trembling. He could say nothing but—'My lord, it is not for me to gainsay your lordship. Whatever my lord wishes.'

GLOSSARY.

yet	'Yit wol I,' (quod this markys softly,)	'Yet,' said the marquis, softly, 'fain would I
	'That in thy chambre, I and thou and sche	That in thy chamber I and thou and she meeting, knowest thou	} Have a collacioun, and wostow why?	Confer together—dost thou wonder why?
	For I wol aske if that it hir wille be	For I would ask her whether she will be according to	To be my wyf, and reule hir after me;	My wife—and rule herself to pleasure me;
done	And al this schal be doon in thy presence,	And in thy presence all things shall be said:
hearing	I wol nought speke out of thyn audience.'	Behind thy back no contract shall be made.'

And while the three were talking in the chamber all the people came into the house without,³ and wondered among themselves how carefully and kindly she kept her father. But poor Griselda, who had never seen such a sight before, looked quite pale. She was not used to such grand visitors.

This is what the marquis said to her.

'Griselda, it pleases your father and me that I should marry you, and I suppose you will not be unwilling.⁴ But first I must ask you, since it is to be done

¹ See note ⁵ below.

² The courtesy of modern times is all that remains of the old custom of kneeling.

³ The house without. In these early times, dwelling-places were usually built within a court. The court was, among the poor, a spot enclosed by a hedge or fence of sticks, and often a dry ditch; in the middle of this enclosure or house, the hall in which they lived stood—a mere covered room. The chamber or bower, for sleeping and privacy, was a second erection within the court; but, in the case of so poor a man as Janicula, probably there was but one covered room, hall or chamber, used for any purpose of shelter. So when the guests came into the house without, the enclosure is meant, within which a single hut stood, built of planks. Janicula's ox (used for draught, as now in Italy) inhabited the hut with them, and Griselda sets down her can in the stall when she enters the hut.

⁴ On the Continent, even at the present day, the bride is expected to assent to the bridegroom chosen by her parents. Walter treated Griselda with especial consideration.

in such a hurry, will you say yes now, or will you think it over? Are you ready to obey me in all things when you are my wife, whether I am kind to you or not? and never to say no when I say yes—either by word or by frowns? Swear that, and I will swear to marry you.'

Wondering at all this, and trembling with fear, Griselda answered—

'My lord, I am quite unworthy of the great honour you offer me; but whatever my lord wishes I will consent to. And I will swear never, so far as I know, to disobey you—not even if you wish to kill me, though I don't want to die.'

'That is enough, my Griselda,' said Walter, and he went gravely out at the door, and showed her to the people. 'This is my wife, who stands here,' he said: 'honour and love her, whoever loves me.'

Then, so that she might not enter his castle in her poor gown, he bade all the gentlewomen robe her at once in beautiful clothes; and though these smart ladies did not much like touching the old clothes she had on, still they stript them all off her, and clad her all new and splendidly, from head to foot.

Then they combed and dressed her hair, which was quite loose and disarranged, and with their delicate fingers they placed a crown on her head, and covered her with jewels, great and small. They hardly knew her, so beautiful she looked when she was thus richly attired.

The marquis put a ring on her finger, which he had brought on purpose, and set her on a snow-white horse; and she was conducted, with great rejoicings, to the palace, where the day was spent in feasting and merriment till the sun set.¹

In short, heaven so favoured the new marchioness, that in a little time you would never have guessed she was of so humble birth; she might have been brought up in an emperor's hall, and not in a hut with oxen. The people who had known her from her childhood could hardly believe she was Janicle's daughter, she was so changed for the better.

Moreover, her virtue and gentle dignity made her beloved by everybody, so that her fame was spread throughout all the country, and people even took long journeys to come and look upon her.

Walter had not a fault to find with her. She made him happy by her excellence and her wifely homeliness, just as she made the people happy by her kindness and cleverness in redressing their wrongs.

PART III.

GRISELDA had a little girl at last, which was a great joy to them both, and to all the people. But Walter had a great longing to put his wife to the test—to see whether she was really as meek and patient and submissive as she seemed.

I know not why he wanted to do this, for he had often tried her in little ways before, and had found her perfect; and for my part I think it is a cruel and respect by consulting her. Skeat quotes the legal formula of refusal, Le roy s'aviserà, to show that Walter's question, 'Wol ye assent, or elles yow avyse?' gave her the chance to refuse.

¹ In the 14th century it was the custom for everybody to go to bed with the sun. They rose in the morning at four or five, had breakfast at six, dinner at ten or eleven, and supper about six.

deed to grieve and torment a wife who does not deserve it, for the sake of needless proof.

GLOSSARY. manner	For which this marquis wrought in this manere ; He com aloone a-night ther as sche lay With sterne face, and with ful trouble	Wherefore on this wise did the Mar- quis then :— He came at night, alone there as she lay, With sternest face, but with a troubled mien, manners	cheere, And sayde thus, ' Grisild,' quod he, ' that day That I yow took out of your pore array,	And said to her, ' Grisilde ' (quoth he), ' that day That I remov'd you in your poor array estate, high	And putte yow in estat of heigh noblesse, Ye have not that forgeten, as I gesse.	And plac'd you in a rank of noble- ness, You have forgotten none of it, I guess.
	' I say, Grisild, this present dignité In which that I have put yow, as I trowe, Makith yow not foryetful for to be	' I say, Grisilde, this present dignity. To which I have so rais'd you, as I trow, Should make you not forgetful now to be, any, weal	That I yow took in pore estat ful lowe, For eny wele ye moot your selve knowe. Tak heed of every word that I yow saye,	I took you in a poor estate and low, Wherein but little comfort you could know. Take heed of every word I say to you.
person	Ther is no wight that herith it but we twaye.	There is no one that heareth it, but we two.
	' Ye wot your self how that ye comen heere Into this hous, it is nought long ago ; And though to me that ye be leef and deere, Unto my gentils ¹ ye be no thing so.	' Well you remember coming to me here, Into this house, it is not long ago. But though, to me, you are most fair and dear, Unto my people round, you are not so.
subjection in	Thay seyn, to hem it is gret schame and wo For to ben subject and ben in servage To the, that born art of a smal village.	They say, it is to them great shame and woe That they be subjects, and in servitage To one who sprang from so mean lineage.
born	' And namely syn thy daughter was i-bore, These wordes han thay spoken douteles. But I desire, as I have doon byfore, To lyve my lif with hem in rest and pees ;	' And since thy daughter's birth a while agone There is no doubt the murmuring is not less : But I desire, as I have ever done, To live my life with them in rest and peace.

¹ The people living on his domain, in serfdom—he was a little king.

GLOSSARY.

case, reckless	I may not in this caas be reccheles ;	Deafness I cannot feign, or reckless- ness.
	I moot do with thy doughter for the beste,	I must do with thy daughter for the best,— desire	Not as I wolde, but as my pepul leste.	Not as I will, but as my gentles list.
	‘ And yit, God wot, this is ful loth to me.	‘ And yet, God knows, this is a grief to me.
knowledge	But natheles withoute youre wityngne Wol I not doon; but this wold I, (quod he,) ‘ That ye to me assent as in this thing.	And in the face of your prohibiting I will not do it—but I wish’ (quoth he) ‘ That you should give consent in such a thing.
working (action)	} Schew now your paciëns in your wirching, That thou me hightest and swor in yon village, That day that maked was oure mari- age.’	Show now your patience by not murmuring. As you did swear and promise in the hut Wherein my ring was on your finger put.’
moved	Whan sche had herd al this sche nought ameevyd Neyther in word, in cheer, or coun- tenaunce, (For, as it semede sche was nought aggrieved);	When she had heard all this, she never mov’d : Neither in mien, nor word, nor countenance, Seem’d she resentful, nor the deed reprov’d.
aggrieved	She sayde, ‘ Lord, al lith in your pleasaunce ;	She answered, ‘ Lord, all lieth in your pleasaunce.
pleasure (Fr. obéis- sance)	} My child and I, with hertly obeis- saunce,	My child and I with heart’s obe- dience
Be destroy act	Ben youre al, and ye may save or spille Your oughne thing; werkith after your wille.	We be all yours : and you may hurt or heal Your own thing—work then for the common weal.
	‘ Ther may no thing, so God my soule save, Likene to yow, that may displesen me ; Ne I desire no thing for to have, Ne drede for to lese, save oonly ye. This wil is in myn hert, and ay schal be, No length of tyme or deth may this deface, Nechaunge my corràge ¹ to other place.’	‘ Nothing there is (as God my soul shall save) Which you command me, that dis- pleaseth me. And there is nothing I desire to have Nor dread to lose, at all, but only ye. This will is in my heart and ay shall be. No length of time, nor death, may this efface, Nor lead my heart into another place.’
	Glad was this marquis of hir answer- yng, But yit he feyned as he were not so.	Glad was this marquis at her mild reply. But yet he feign’d as tho’ he were not so.
looking	Al dreery was his cheer and his lokyng. Whan that he schold out of the chambre go.	All dreary was his mien, as mournfully Out of her chamber he made speed to go.

¹ See note 1, p. 94.

GLOSSARY.	Soon after this, a forlong way or tuo,	Soon after this, a furlong's stretch or two
	He prively hath told al his entente Unto a man, and unto his wyf him sente.	He prively confided his intent Unto a man, whom to his wife he sent.
dreaded	A maner sergeant was this privé man, The which that faithful oft he founde hadde	A kind of sergeant was this privy man, A stern and trusty servant, whom he had
	In thinges grete, and eek such folk wel can	Found faithful in great things, and such folk can
	Don execucioun in thinges badde; The lord knew wel that he him loved and dradde.	Do execution even in things bad. He lov'd and fear'd him; for such office made!—
	And whan this sergeant wist his lordes wille, Into the chamber he stalked him ful stille.	And when the sergeant knew his master's will, Into her chamber stalk'd he, mute and still.
constrained } (obliged)	'Madame, (hesayde,) ye moste foryive it me, Though I do thing to which I am constreynit;	'Madam' (he said) 'ye must forgive it me If I perform the deed that is ordained.
	Ye ben so wys, that ful wel knowe ye, That lordes hestes mowe not ben i-feynit.	Ye are so wise, none better know than ye, That great lords' orders cannot be restrained.
may	Thay mowð wel biwayl it or com- pleyn it; But men moot neede unto her lust obeye, And so wol I, there is no more to seye.	They may well be regretted and complained About—but men must needs their rule obey, And so will I: there is no more to say.
made as though }	This child I am comaundid for to take.'	This child I am commanded now to take.'
	And spak no more, but out the child he hente	And spoke no more: but to the babe he leant
	Dispitously, and gan a chiere make,	And roughly snatch'd—and gesture now did make
	As though he wold han slayn it, er he wente.	As though he would have slain it ere he went.
till-fame	Grisild moot al suffer and al con- sente; And as a lamb sche sitteth meeke and stille, And let this cruel sergeant doon his wille.	All this Griseld must suffer, and consent. And as a lamb she sitteth meek and still And let this cruel sergeant do his will.
	Suspecious was the defame of this man,	Suspicious of repute was this stern man,
	Suspect his face, suspect his word also,	Suspicious in his look, and speech also,
	Suspect the tyme in which he this bigan.	So was the time when he the deed be- gan.
suspicious } (Fr. suspecte)	Allas! hir daughter, that she lovede so,	Alas! her baby, that she lov'd so, believed then nevertheless, sighed	Sche wende he wold han slayen it right tho ; But natheles sche neyther weep ne sikede, Conforming hir to that the marquis likede.	Would he destroy it ere he turned to go ?— And yet she did not weep, she was resign'd To all the wishes of her master's mind.

GLOSSARY.

to speak	But atte laste speke sche bigan, And mekely sche to the sergeant preyde, So as he was a worthy gentil man, That she moste kisse hir child er that it deyde.	To say a few meek words she then began, And for one boon she pitifully pray'd, That as he was a kind and worthy man She might but kiss her baby ere it died.
might	And in hir barm ¹ this litel child schey leyde, With ful sad face, and gan the child to blesse,	And in her lap the little child she laid, With mournful face, and did the baby bless, lap	And lullyd it, and after gan it kesse.	And lull'd it with how many a soft caress !
began, kisse	And thus sche sayd in hir benigne vois : 'Farwel, my child, I schal the never see ; But sith I the have marked with the cross, Of thilke fader blessed mot thou be, That for us deyde upon a cros of tre ; Thy soule, litel child, I him bytake, For this night schaltow deyen for my sake.' ²	And thus she murmur'd in her gentle tone, 'Farewell, my child, that I no more shall see— But since I mark'd thee with the cross, my own, Of that kind Father blessed mayst thou be ² That crucified died for us on a Tree. Thy soul, O little baby, He shall take. For this night thou wilt perish for my sake.'
cross (Fr. croix) }	I trowe that to a norice in this caas It hadde ben hard this rewthe for to see ; Wel might a moder than have cryed allas, But natheles so sad stedefast was sche. That sche endured al adversité,	Surely unto a nurse, in such a case, It had been hard so sad a deed to see. Well might a mother then have cried 'Alas !' Nathless, so firm and serious was she That she could bear the worst ad- versity.
commit to him	And to the sergeant mekely sche sayde, 'Have her agayn your litel yonge mayde.	And in the sergeant's dreadful arms she laid The child, and 'Take your little maid,' she said.
ruth	'Goth now,' (quod sche,) 'and doth my lordes heste, But o thyng wil I preye you of your grace, That but my lord forbade you atte leste,	'Go now,' she saith, 'and do my lord's behest ; But one thing I would pray you, of your grace, Unless my lord forbade it you at least, order except

¹ Tyrwhitt.² There is evidently here her mental com-parison between a kind father and a cruel one: though she makes no complaint.

GLOSSARY.	Burieth this litel body in some place	Bury the little body in some place birds, mangle That bestes ne no briddes it to-race.'	Where beasts of prey will harm not nor deface.'
	But he no word will to the purpose saye	But not a word in answer would he say,
	But took the child and went upon his waye.	But took the child, and went upon his way.

He took the babe to the marquis, and told him exactly all that Griselda had said. The marquis certainly showed some little feeling and regret, yet he kept to his purpose, as men will when they are determined. He then bade the sergeant wrap up the child softly and tenderly, and carry it in secret, in a box or the skirt of a garment, to Bologna, where dwelt his sister, Countess of Panik.¹ She would foster it kindly; but whom the child belonged to was to be kept from all men's knowledge.

The sergeant did as he was commanded, and the marquis watched his wife to see if there should be any rebellion in her manner. But she did not change. She was always kind, and loving, and serious, and as busy and humble as ever. Not a word she spoke of the poor baby.

PART IV.

A FEW years afterwards, Griselda had another child—a little boy. This was still more joy to the people and to Walter than the other baby, because it was the heir.

When the babe was two years old, the marquis took it into his head to tempt again his poor wife. Ah! how needless to torture her! but married men care for no limits when they find a patient wife!

'Wife,' said the marquis, 'I have told you how discontented are the people with our marriage; and since the boy's birth their anger has been greater. Their murmuring destroys all my comfort and courage. They grumble, because when I am dead the blood of Janicle shall succeed to my heritage; and I cannot disregard the words they say! So I think I will serve him as I served his sister; but do not suddenly fly out with grief. Be patient, I beg of you, and command your feelings.'

Griselda answered, sadly and calmly, when she heard this—

	'I have,' quod sche, 'sayd thus, and ever schal,	'I have,' quoth she, 'said this, and ever shall, will not	I wol no thing, ne nil no thing certayn,	I wish not, nor will wish, it is certain,
please	But as yow list: nought greveth me at al,	But as you choose: I grieve me not at all,
	Though that my doughter and my sone be slayn	Although my daughter and my son be slain say	At your comaundement: this is to sayn,	At your commandment: nor will I complain

¹ Panico, Petrarch; Panigo, Boccace. I cannot be sure of the situation of this place, but there is a certain Paganico near Urbino, which is not too far from Bologna to be possibly the place referred to. A river Panara flows between Modena and Bologna.

GLOSSARY.	I have not had no part of children twayne,	That I have had no part in children twain, sickness	But first syknes, and after wo and payne.	But sickness first, and then a bitterer pain.
he, master	‘Ye ben oure lord: doth with your owne thing	‘Thou art our lord: do, then, with what is thine
ask, advice	Right as yow list: axith no red of me; For as I left at hom al my clothing Whan I first com to yow, right so, (quod sche, ‘Left I my wille and al my liberte,	E’en as thou wilt: ask not assent of me;— For as I left at home all that was mine When I came first to thee, right so, quoth she, ‘Left I my will and all my liberty, you	And took your clothing; wherfor, I yow preye	And took new habits: wherefore, now, I pray desire	Doth your plesauce, I wil youre lust obeye.’	Do but thy pleasure, and I will obey.’

‘If I knew beforehand what your wish was,’ said poor Griselda, ‘I would do it without delay; but now that I know your will, I am ready to die if you desire it; for death is nothing compared with your love!’

When the marquis heard that, he cast down his eyes, and wondered how she could endure it all; and he went forth looking very dreary, but in reality he felt extremely pleased.

The ugly sergeant came again, and he took away the little boy: Griselda kissed it and blessed it, only asking that his little limbs might be kept from the wild beasts and birds; but the sergeant promised nothing, and secretly took him with great care to Bologna.

The marquis was amazed at her patience; for he knew that, next to himself, she loved her children best of anything in the world. What could he do more to prove her steadfastness, and faithfulness, and patience? But there are some people who, when they have once taken a thing into their head, will fasten upon it as if they were bound to a stake. So this marquis made up his mind to try his wife still further.

He watched her closely, but never could he find any change in her: the older she grew, the more faithful and industrious she was. Whatever he liked, she liked: there seemed but one will between them; and, God be thanked, all was for the best.

But all this time the slander against Walter spread far and near; and the people said he had wickedly murdered both his children, because his wife was a poor woman. For the people had no idea what had really become of them. And they began to hate Walter instead of loving him, as they had once done, for a murderer is a hateful name.

Still the marquis was so determined to test his wife, that he cared for nothing else.

When Griselda’s daughter was twelve years old, Walter sent secretly to Rome, commanding that false letters, seeming to come from the Pope, should be made according to his will. These letters, or ‘bulls,’ were to give him leave to quit his first wife, for the sake of his people, and marry another woman; but they were none of them really from the Pope: they were all counterfeit and false, made by Walter’s order, to deceive Griselda.

The common people did not know the difference between true letters and false; but when the tidings arrived, Griselda was very sorrowful; for she loved Walter best of all things, as he very well knew.

GLOSSARY.

judge, sad	I deeme that hir herte was ful wo;	Full sure am I her heart was full of wo;
alike, firm	But sche, ylike sad for evermo,	But she, as though serene for evermo, disposed	Disposid was, this humble creature,	Was ready, in her humbleness of mind, fortune, to endure	} Th'adversite of fortun al tendure.	In all adversity to be resign'd.

Then the marquis sent to the Earl of Panik, who had married his sister, begging him to bring both his children home, openly and in great honour; but no one was to know whose children they were. He was to answer no questions—should	'But saye the mayde schuld i-wedded be ¹	'But say the maiden should, ere long, be wed immediately	Unto the Markys of Saluce anoon.'	Unto the Marquis of Saluces so high.'

did	And as this eorl was prayd, so dede he;	And as this earl was pray'd to do, he did,
day-break gone many a one	} For at day-set he on his way is goon	And started on his journey speedily
	Toward Saluce, and lordes many oon,	Towards Saluces, with lordly company
	In riche array, this mayden for to guyde,	In rich array, this maiden fair to guide,
	Hir yonge brother rydyng by hir syde.	Her little brother riding by her side.
	Arrayed was toward hir mariage	And this fresh maid was robed for marriage maiden, gems	This freisshe may, al ful of gemmes clere;	Full of clear gems, in goodly raiment rare;
	Hir brother, which that seven yer was of age,	Her brother, who was seven years of age,
also	Arrayed eek ful freissh in his manere;	Was in his fashion clad all fresh and fair;
manner nobleness	And thus in gret noblesse and with glad chere,	And thus, in splendour, and with joyous air, their	Toward Saluces shaping her journey,	Towards Saluces following the way, their	Fro day to day thay ryden in her way.	The cavalcade advances day by day.

PART V.

IN order to put the last trial upon Griselda, to the uttermost proof of her courage, the marquis one day, before all the household, said to her in a boisterous way—

certainly, pleasure	'Certes, Grisildes, I had y-nough plesaunce	'Tis true, Griselda, I was once content
	To have yow to my wif, for your goodnesse,	To marry you—because you were so good, truth, obedience	And for youre trouthe, and for your obeissaunce;	And true, and faithful, and obedient—

¹ It was not uncommon in Chaucer's time for girls to be married at twelve years of age

GLOSSARY.

lineage,	Nought for your lignage, ne for	Not for your wealth, nor for your wealth	your richesse ;	noble blood ;
truth	But now know I in verray sothfast-	Still one thing must be clearly nesse,	understood,
am not mistaken	} That in gret lordschip, if I wel avyse,	That in this rank and riches men so praise
sundry wise	Ther is gret servitude in sondry wyse.	There is great servitude in many ways.
	‘I may not do, as every ploughman	‘I may not do as every ploughman may ;	may :
constrain	My poeple me constreignith for to	My poeple urge me evermore to take	take
	Another wyf, and crien day by day ;	Another wife, and clamour day by day.
	And eek the Pope, rancour for to	And now the Pope, their rancour
	slake,	swift to slake, dire	Consentith it, that dar I undertake ;	Gives glad consent to any change I make ;
much	And trewely, thus moche I wol yow	And more than that—I need not fear
	saye,	to say—
	My newe wif is comyng by the waye.	My new wife is already on her way.
heart	‘Be strong of hert, and voyde anoon	‘Be brave, give up your place to her,
	hir place,	make room,
that	And thilke dower that ye broughten	And, see, the dowry that you brought me	to me
	Tak it agayn, I graunt it of my grace.	I will restore—my grace cconfers the boon.
return	Retourneth to youre fadres hous,’	Go back unto your father’s house,’ quod he,	quoth he,
	‘No man may alway have prosperité.	‘No one can always have prosperity.
advise	With even hert I rede yow endure	With equal spirit suffer weal or woe, chance	The strok of fortune or of adventure.’	The gifts of chance or luck that come and go.’
	And sche agayn answerd in pacience :	And she replied, with perfect patience :
	‘My lord,’ quod sche, ‘I wot, and	‘My lord, I know, and knew alway,’ wist alway,	quoth she,
	Hlow that bitwixe your magnificence	‘Too well, that ’tween your own magnificence
nobody	And my poverté, no wight can ne	And my great poverty, there cannot may	be undeniable	Make comparisoun, it is no nay ;	Comparison at all, and verily worthy.	} I ne held me neuer digne in no manere	I held myself unworthy every way manner
chambermaid	To ben your wif, ne yit your cham-	To be your wife—or servant—for a berere.	day.
	‘And in this hous, ther ye me lady	‘And in this house wherein ye made made,	me great
	(The highe God take I for my wit-	(High God my witness, who shall nesse,	haply set cheer	And al-so wisly he my soule glade)	Some coming comfort in my altered state),
held myself	I never huld me lady ne maistresse,	Lady nor mistress never was I yet ;
	But humble servaunt to your	But humble servant to the grace I worthinesse,	get :

GLOSSARY.

life	And ever schal, whil that my lyf may dure,	This I shall be, with spirit ever strong,
above	Aboven every worldly creature.	More than all others, yea, my whole life long.
benignity	'That ye so longe of your benignite Han holden me in honour and nobleye,	'And for your charity in keeping me In dignity and honour day by day
nobleness
where	Wher as I was not worthy for to be,	So many years, unworthy though I be, thank	That thonk I God and yow, to whom I preye	Now thank I God and you, to whom I pray repay	For-yeld it yow, ther is no more to seye.	That He will all your graciousness repay.
go	Unto my fader gladly wil I wende, And with him duelle unto my lyves ende.	Unto my father cheerfully I wend To dwell with him from now to my life's end.
	'Ther I was fostred as a child ful smal,	'There I was fostered as an infant small,
	Till I be deed my lyf ther wil I lede,	There till I die my life I will lead through, clean	A widow clene in body, hert, and al:	Dwell as an honest widow, heart and all.
since, maidenhood }	For sith I yaf to yow my mayden-hede,	For since I gave my girlhood unto you,
	And am your trewe wyf, it is no drede,	And am your wife, most loving and most true, shield (forbid)	God schiide such a lordes wyf to take,	It were not fitting that a great lord's wife for, for mate	Another man to housbond or to make.	Should wed another husband all her life.
	'And of your newe wif, God of his grace	'And with your wife to be, God of his grace
	So graunte yow wele and prosperité,	Grant you all welfare and prosperity ;
yield	For I wol gladly yelden hir my place,	For I will yield her cheerfully my place,
	In which that I was blisful wont to be.	In which I once so happy used to be ;
	For sith it liketh yow, my lord, quod sche,	For since it pleaseth you, my lord,' quoth she,
once	That whilom were al myn hertes reste,	'Who ever were the dearest to my heart,
	That I schal gon, I wil go whan yow leste.	That I should go, content I will depart.
please
proffer	'But ther as ye profre me such dowayre	'But when you bid me take again that dower
	As I ferst brought, it is wel in my mynde ;	That I first brought, it still is in my mind :
wretched	It were my wrecchid clothes, no thing faire,	It was my wretched clothing, coarse and poor—
	The whiche to me were hard now for to fynde.	Rags that it were not easy now to find.

GLOSSARY.	O goode God! how gentil and how kynde	And, O good God! how gentle and how kind speech	Ye semede by your speche and your visage,	You then seemed, by your words and by your look, made	That day that maked was our mariage!’	That day whereon the name of wife I took!’

Griselda said no word of reproach to her cruel husband, except one touching remark, which he may have felt as one—

‘Love is not old as when that it is new.’ (Love is not the same in after years as when it first comes).

Then she appeals to him in a way that must have touched a heart of stone, for she saw no sign of relenting in his face: she does not know how far his brutality will go, and will not be surprised at the last insult.

	‘My lord, ye wot that in my fadres place	‘My lord, you know that in my father’s place strip	Ye dede me strippe out of my pore	You stript me of my poor attire, for attire	wede,	ruth:
	And richely me cladden of your grace;	Anew you richly clad me, of your grace.
else	To yow brought I nought elles, out of drede,	And I brought nothing unto you. in truth,
	But faith, and nakednesse, and	But honesty, and poverty, and youth.
maidenhood	maydenhede;
	And her agayn my clothyng I restore,	And here again your clothing I restore,
	And cek my weddyng ryng for evermore.	And ev’n your wedding-ring for evermore.
remainder	‘The remenant of your jewels redy be	‘The remnant of your jewels ready be dare	Within your chambur, dar I saufly sayn.	Within your chamber, I can safely say.
	Naked out of my fadres hous,’ quod sche,	With nothing from my father’s house,’ quoth she,
return	‘I com, and naked moot I torne agayn.	‘I came, with nothing I shall go away.
follow gladly	Al your pleisauns wold I fulfille fayn;	In all things as you bid I will obey;
intention	But yit I hope it be not youre entente,	But yet I hope you will not let me go smockless, palace	} That I smoces out of your paleys wente.’	Quite as bereft as when I came to you.’

A faint sparkle of human spirit comes into her entreaty—‘Ye could not do so dishonest (shameful) a thing:’—

own	‘Remembre yow, myn oughne lord so deere,	‘Remember yet, my lord and husband dear,
	I was your wyf, though I unworthy were.	I was your wife, though I unworthy were!
girlhood	‘Wherfor, in guerdoun of my maydenhede,	‘Thus, in requital of the youth I brought,
	Which that I brought, and not agayn I bere,	But never can take back, nor have it more, carry away

GLOSSARY.

vouchsafe, reward	As vouchethsauf as yeve me to my meede	Give me, I pray, a garment of such sort smock	But such a smok as I was wont to were.'	As in those days of poverty I wore.'
wear
smock	'The smok, ¹ ' quod he, 'that thou hast on thy bak, Let it be stille, and ber it forth with the.'	'The shift,' he said, 'thou hast upon thy back, Let it remain, and bear it forth with thee.'
scarcely, that	Butwel unnethes thilke word he spak,	But scarcely that hard word for pain he spake, compassion	But went his way for routhe and for pité.	And went his way for sorrow and pity.
herself	Byforn the folk herselven strippith sche,	Before the household all her robes stript she;
head and feet	And in hir smok, with heed and-foot al bare,	And in her shift, barefoot and bare of head, went	Toward hir fader house forth is she fare.	Toward her father's house forth is she sped.
follow her	The folk hir folwen wepyng in hir weye,	The household follow, tears in every eye, curse	And fortune ay thay cursen as thay goon ; But she fro wepyng kept hir eyen dreye,	Bewailing her ill-fortune as they go ; But she from weeping kept her own eyes dry, dry	Ne in this tyme word ne spak sche noon.	Nor spake a word to those who mur- mur'd so.
none
tidings	Hir fader, that this tyding herd anoon,	Her father heard the news awhile ago, soon	Cursed the day and time that nature	And sore laments the day that he was born, shaped, living	Schoop him to ben a lyves creature.	To be a thing so helpless and forlorn.
	For oute of doute this olde pore man	For ever without doubt the poor old man suspicion	Was ever in suspect of hir mariage ;	Distrusted heartily her altered rank ;
believed	For ever he deemede, sith that it bigan, That whan the lord fulfilled had his corrage,	Believing inly since it first began, That when my lord had wearied of his prank, impulse
disparage- ment	Him wolde think that it were dis- parage To his estate, so lowe for to lighte,	He would conceive it far beneath his rank To have a low-born wife, however good, put her away	And voyden hire as sone as ever he mighte.	And rid himself of her whene'er he could.
goth	Agayns his doughter hastily goth he (For he by noyse of folk knew hir comyng).	Unto his daughter hastily he goes, (For by the noise of crowds he knew her nigh), coat	And with hir olde cote, as it might be,	And her old garb about her form he throws,

¹ The smock, or shift, was a high garment with long sleeves, often embroidered with black stitchery.

GLOSSARY.

sorrowfully	He covered hir, ful sorwfully wepyng, But on hir body might he it nought bringe,	And covers her, with tears and many a sigh, But could not draw it round her properly, coarse, more	For rude was the cloth, and mor of age,	For coarse and shrunk the cloth was—worse for age
many (rich)	By dayes fele than at hir mariage.	By many days, than at her marriage.
	Thus with hir fader for a certeyn space	Thus with her father for a certain space flower	Dwellith this flour of wifyl pacience;	Did dwell this flower of wifely patience;
	That neyther by hir wordes, ne by hir face,	And neither by her speech nor by her face, also, their	Byforn the folk nor eek in her absence,	Before the folk, nor e'en in their absence, showed, done	Ne schewed sche that hir was doon offence;	Seem'd she to feel that she endured offence.
nor, estate	Ne of hir highe astaat no remembrance	As far as any living soul could see
	Ne hadde she, as by hir countenance.	She had of her past state no memory.

And after all it was scarce any wonder. For in her days of wealth her spirit had always been humble and meek. No dainty fare, no foolish pomp or luxury, no semblance of splendid rank, had she allowed herself; but, ever wise and humble and firm, when reverses came she was ready to bear them.

Men speak of Job's patience; but, though some praise women little enough, no man can be as patient as a woman can—no man be faithful as a woman can.

PART VI.

At last the Earl of Panik arrived, whose fame had been spreading among great and small. The people had all found out that he was bringing them a new marchioness, in such pomp and state, that never before had a like splendour been seen throughout West Lombardy.

The marquis, who had arranged all these things, sent for this poor innocent Griselda; and she came with humble mind and joyful face, and no proud notions in her heart, and knelt before him and asked his will.

'Griselda,' he said, 'my will is that the maiden whom I am to marry be received here as royally as it is possible in my house to be, and that everybody, according to his degree, shall be made thoroughly welcome and happy. I have no woman able to arrange my rooms fully to my liking, and therefore I want you to take everything in hand. You know of old my ways and my tastes; therefore, though your dress is ragged and you look very bad, you must do your duties to the very best of your power.'

Griselda answered, 'Not only, lord, am I glad to do anything for you, but I love you enough to work all my days to please you.'

And with that worde sche gan the hous to dighte,	And with that word she 'gan the house to deck,
And tables for to sette, and beddes make:	To set the tables and to make the beds:

begging all the chambermaids to hasten and hurry and shake and sweep smartly ; and she, most serviceable of them all, got every chamber and the great hall garnished and adorned.

GLOSSARY.

forenoon	Abouten undern gan this lord alighte,	Somewhat ere noonday did this carl alight, two	That with him broughte these noble children tweye ; For which the peple ran to se that sighte	Who with him brought the unknown children fair, And all the people ran to see the sight rich to be seen	Of hir array, so richely biseye ;	Of their array, resplendent as they were ;
at first	And than at erst amonges hem thay seye That Walter was no fool, though that hem leste	And soon the common thought was whispered there, That Walter was no fool for being glad he pleased	To chaunge his wyf ; for it was for the beste.	To change his wife—a good exchange he had !
deem younger	For sche is fairer, as thay demen alle, Than is Grisild, and more tendre of age.	For she is fairer, as they notice all, Than is Griselda, tenderer of age.

And the throngs of admiring serfs stood making their light remarks, forgetful of the victim of it all, and her undeserved disgrace. They watch the fair bride and the handsome boy beside her, and every moment the marquis seems to get more popular.

unsteady	O stormy poeple, unsad and ever untrew,	O stormy people, light, and ever untrue, indiscreet	And undiscret and chaunging as a fane,	And undiscerning—changing as a fane, noise	Delytyng ever in rombels that is newe, For lik the moone ay waxe ye and wane.	Delighting in new noise, because 'tis new, How like the moon do ye, too, wax and wane !
chattering	Ay ful of clappyng, dere ynough a jane, ¹	Your empty praise, like worthless coin, is vain :
judgment, evil proveth	Yours doom is fals, your constaunce yvil previth,	False is your judgment, frail your constancy, believeth	A ful gret fool is he that on yow leevith.	Who trusts to you—a full great fool is he.

That is what the graver people in the city said when the populace were gazing up and down, glad for the novelty, to have a new lady in the castle.

Meanwhile Griselda was working busily at everything that was needed for the feast. She was nothing abashed at her clothing, though it was rude and coarse, and somewhat torn besides. She went to the gate with the rest to salute the bride, and hurried back at once to her work.

She received every one cheerfully, and in such a manner that no one had a fault to find with her; but some of them wondered who this woman was, in such shabby clothes, but who behaved with so much grace and propriety; and many praised her diligence and wisdom.

¹ 'A jane is a small coin of Genoa (Janua) ; the meaning is, your praise is dear enough at a farthing.—B. Or the verse may be taken to mean, the small coin is dear enough to you when ye tired of better—for novelty's sake.

When all the great lords were about to sit down to supper, Walter called to Griselda, who was working in the hall.

GLOSSARY.	In all this menē whilē sche ne stent	Meanwhile she gazed, she ceas'd not
	This mayde and eek hir brother to comende	to commend civil	With al her herte in ful buxom entente	This girl and boy so well and heartily could	So wel that no man couthe hir pris amende,	That no praise other, could her praise amend,
	But atte laste whar that these lordes wende	So kindly meant, and urg'd so honestly :
	To sitte down to mete, he gan to calle	But at the last when all these lords went by
	Grisilde as sche was busy in the haile.	Tositat meat, the marquis turn'd to call Griselda, busy working in the hall.
	'Grisylde,' (quod he,) 'as it were in his play,	'Grisild,' he said to her, as if in play, do you like	'How likith the my wif and hir beauté ?'	'How seems my wife and her fair looks to thee ?'
faith	'Right wel, my lord,' (quod sche,) 'for in good fay	'Right well, my lord,' said she, 'for in good fay none	A fairer saugh I never noon than sche.	I never saw a fairer bride than she ;
	I pray to God yive hir prosperité ;	I pray God give her great prosperité ;
	And so hope I that he wol to yow sende	And so I hope that He will ever send pleasantness	Plesaunce ynough unto vour lyves ende.	You happiness enough to your lives' end.
beseech	'On thing biseke I yow, and warne also, ¹	'One thing I pray of you, and warn beside,
prick	That ye ne prike with no tormentyrge	That you goad not with any torturing
	This tendre mayden, as ye han doon mo ;	This tender maid—like some you have sore tried ;
more (others) fostered, nourishing }	For she is fostrid in hir norischinge	For she is nurtured in her upbringing
as I suppose	More tendrely, and to my supposynge	More tenderly—and such a gentle thing
	Sche couthe not adversité endure,	Might haply not adversity endure could, poorly	As couthe a pore fostrid creature.'	Like one whose nurture had been hard and poor.'
	And whan this Walter saugh hir pacience,	And when this Walter saw her patientness,
	Hir glade cheer, and no malice at al,	Her cheerful mien, and malice none at all ;
offended	And he so oft hadde doon to hir offence,	Though he so oft had tried her more or less,

¹ Skeat ; also second line beyond.

GLOSSARY.

steady	And sche ay sad, and constant as a wal, Continuuyng ever hir innocence over- al :	And she still firm and constant as a wall, Continuing ever her innocence over all :
bring	This sturdy marquis gan his herte dresse	This sturdy marquis 'gan his heart to chide, to pity (rue) wifely	} To rewen upon hir wyfly stedefast- nesse.	} Touch'd by her steadfast faith that never died.
	'This is ynough, Grisilde myn,' quod he,	'This is enough, Griselda mine,' said he, afraid, dis- appointed	} 'Be now no more agast, ne yvel apayed,	'Be no more ill at ease, and fear no more!
goodness	I have thy faith and thy benignité,	I have thy faith and strength and charity essayed	As wel as ever womman was, assayed	Tempted, as woman never was be- fore, poorly	In gret estate, and pourliche ¹ ar- rayed. Now knowe I, dere wyf, thy stedefast- nesse.	Both in thy wealth and in thy rags so poor. Now do I know, dear wife, thy stead- fastness :
kiss	And hir in armes took and gan hir kesse.	And clasp'd her in his arms with many a kiss.
heed	'And sche for wonder took of it no keepe, She herde not what thing he to hir sayde,	But she for wonder took no heed of him, She heard not any of the words he spoke, fared, started	Sche ferd as sche hadde stert out of a sleepe, Til sche out of hir masidnesse abrayde.	She seemed as one that starteth from a dream, Till she from her astonishment awoke.
awoke	'Grisild,' quod he, 'by God that for us deyde,	'Griselde,' cried he, 'it was a cruel joke :
died	Thou art my wyf, non other I ne ² have, Ne never had, as God my soule save.	Thou art my wife, none other one I have, Nor never had—as God my soul shall save ;
	'This is thy ³ doughter, which thou hast supposed To be my wif: that other faith- fully Shal be myn heir, as I have ay pur- posed. Thow bar hem of thy body trewely.	'This is thy daughter, whom thou hast supposed To be my wife—that other faithfully Shal be my heir, as I have long dis- posed ; For they are both thy children, verily. I kept them at Bologna privily. Take them again, thou canst not say, as once, Thou hast lost either of thy little ones.
mayest thou	At Boloynne have I kept hem prively. Tak hem agayn, for now maistow not seye lost	That thou hast lorn noon of thy chil- dren tweye.

¹ Tyrwhitt and Skeat.² Tyrwhitt.³ Skeat.

GLOSSARY.	' And folk, that other weyes han seyde of me,	' And folk, who otherwise have said of me, done	I warn hem wel, that I have doon this deede	I warn them well that I have acted thus,
to assay, womanhood }	For no malice, ne for no cruelté,	Neither in malice nor in cruelty,
	But for tassaye in theethy wommanhede ;	Solely to prove thy patience marvellous, forbid	And not to slen my children (God forbede !)	And not to slay my babes (God hinder us !)
quietly	But for to kepe hem prively and stille Til I thy purpos knewe, and al thy wille !'	But to conceal them secretly apart Until I learned thy purpose and thy heart !'

You may fancy you see Griselda at this moment, standing in her rags before the glittering company, and her brain dazed with wondering whether this were some new freak, or the truth that brought unheard-of joy. But nature had been taxed too far, and all her courage could not bear up against the shock.

in a swoon	Whan sche this herd, aswone down she fallith,	When she heard this, all senseless down she falleth, swooning	For pitous joy, and after her swownyng	For piteous joy—and half unconsciously
	Sche bothe hir yonge children to hir callith,	Both her young children unto her she calleth,
	And in hir armes, pitously wepyng,	And in her arms, weeping so piteously,
	Embraseth hem, and tendrely kysyng,	Embraceth them, with kisses tenderly, tears	Ful lik a moder, with hir salte teres	Full like a mother, and the tears she sheds their hair	Sche bathide bothe hir visage and hir heres. ¹	Bathe the fair faces and the dear loved heads.
	O such a pitous thyng it was to se Hir swownyng and hir pitous voys to here :	O what a piteous thing it was to see Her swooning, and her humble voice to hear !
	' Graund mercy, lord, God thank it you,' quod sche,	' Grand merci , lord, God thank you it' (said she),
	' That ye han saved me my children deere.	' That you have saved to me my children dear.
reck	Now rek I never to be ded right heere	Now I care nothing, tho' I die right here—
stand	Sith I stond in your love and in your grace	Since I have won your grace, and kept your heart—
	No fors of deth, ne whan my spirit pace.	What matters death ! nor when my soul shall part !
	' O tendre, O dere, O yonge children myne, ²	' O young, O dear, O tender children mine, believed	Youre woful moder wende stede-fastly	Your hapless mother thought in all her wo
wild dogs	That cruel boundes or som foul vermyne	That cruel beasts of prey and foul vermine

¹ Skent.² Skent and Tyrwhitt.

GLOSSARY.	Had eten yow: but God of his mercy, And your benigne fader tenderly	Had slain you both; but God had mercy—lo! He and your loving father will'd it so preserved you, moment	} Hath doon yow kepe. And in that same stounde	That you should be preserved: ' and said no more, sank	Al sodeinly sche swapped down to grounde.	But suddenly fell fainting on the floor.
swoon, firmly	And in hir swough so sadly holdith sche	And in her swoon so closely holdeth she to embrace them	} Hir children tuo, whan sche gan hem tembrace,	Her new-found children in a strong embrace, skill	That with gret sleight and gret difficulté	That those around unclasp not easily tear away (Fr. arracher)	} The children from her arm they gonne arace. O! many a teer on many a pitous face	The fingers which so firmly interlace: O! many a tear on many a pitying face down, stood, beside	} Down ran of hem that stooden hir bisyde,	Ran down in token of deep sympathy—hardly	Unnethe aboute hir mighte thay abyde.	Scarce could they bear to watch her agony.
cheers, sorrow	Waltier hir gladith, and hir sorwe slakith,	Walter consoleth her as she awaketh:
abashed	Sche rysith up abaissed from hir traunce,	She riseth up bewildered from her trance:
everybody	And every wight hir joy and feste makith,	Each presseth round about and merry maketh countenance comforts her	Til sche hath caught agayn hir contenance; Wauter hir doth so faithfully plesauce,	Until she hath recovered countenance. With kisses and with loving word and glance dainty	That it was daynté for to see the cheere	Walter doth cheer her—sweet it was to see together	Bitwix hem tuo, now thay be met in feere.	The joy they felt—united happily.
their saw have	These ladys, whan that thay hir tyme saye, Hau taken hir, and into chambre goon, And strippen hir out of hir rude arraye, And in a cloth of gold that brighte schon,	And when they saw their time these ladies gay Unto a chamber led her forth with them, And stript her out of all her rude array, And in apparel bright with many a gem shone crown, stone	With a coroun of many a riche stoon	Clad her, and, crown'd with a diamond
she ought to be	} Upon hir heed, they into halle hir broughte, And ther sche was honoured as hir oughte.	Upon her head, they brought her to the hall, Where she was meetly honoured of them all.
best	Thus hath this pitous day a blisful ende; For every man and womman doth his might	Thus hath this piteous day a blissful end, Till every man and woman in the rout

GLOSSARY.	This day in mirth and revel to despende,	Striveth the day in mirth and glee to spend, welkin	Til on the welken schon the sterres brighte ;	Till in the darken'd sky the stars shone out ;
stately, man's	For more solempne in every mannes sighte	For greater and more sumptuous, without doubt, greater, cost	This feste was, and gretter of costage,	This revel was—and there was more to pay—
	Than was the revel of hir mariage.	Than the rejoicings on her marriage-day.

Thus dwelt, for many years after, Walter and his wife in peace and joy ; and I hope that the suffering of that day was the last Griselda had to bear at the hands of her capricious and wilful spouse. The pretty daughter Walter married to one of the greatest lords in Italy ; and he then brought Griselda's old father to dwell in peace and comfort in his own court.

His son succeeded to his state and rank, and married happily, though he did not tempt and torment his wife as Walter did ; for the world is not so strong as it once was, and people cannot bear such treatment now !

The story is told, not that wives should imitate Griselda in humility, for it would be unbearable, even if they did ; but that every one in his degree should be constant in adversity as Griselda was. For if one woman could be so submissive to a mortal man, how much more ought we to take patiently all that God sends as our lot in life.

But one word before I stop ! It would be hard to find in a whole city three, or even two, Griseldas nowadays. The gold in their nature is now so mixed with base metal that in any great trial the coin would sooner break than bend.

also	Grisild is deed, and eek hir pacience,	Dead is Griselda, and her patience, once	And bothe at oones buried in Itayle ;	Both buried in one grave in Italy ;
	For whiche I crye in open audience	So I entreat in open audience
	No weddid man so hardy be to assayle	No wedded man be rash enough to try
	His wyves pacience, in hope to fynde	His own wife's patience, in the hope to find Grisildes, for in certeyn he schal fayle.	Griselda's, for he'll fail most certainly !

HERE ENDS THE 'CLERK'S TALE.'

NOTES BY THE WAY.

[The tender pathos in Chaucer's telling of this story (which he borrowed from Petrarch, but which is really much older than his time) cannot be excelled in any story we know of. The definite human interest running all through it points to some living Griselda ; but who she was, or where she came from, no one knows. Resignation, so steadfast and so willing, was the virtue of an early time, when the husband was really a 'lord and master ;' and such submission in a woman of the present civilisation would be rather mischievous than meritorious. If a modern wife cheerfully consented to the murder of her children by her spouse, she would probably be consigned to a maison de santé, while her husband expiated his sins on the scaffold ; and if she endured other persecutions, such as Griselda did, it is to be hoped some benevolent outsider would step in, if only to prevent cruelty to animals.

But it must be remembered that in the old world wives held a very different position in society, and the obedience of all the household to the lord of the castle was the chief secret of peace, discipline, and unity, as obedience to the captain of a vessel is now. We may also infer, from many hints in this Tale, the admiration felt for that kind of self-command in which people of a ruder time were so deficient. When almost everybody gave way habitually to violent emotions of all sorts, those who could rein in feeling were held in high esteem. Perhaps Walter himself may not have been wantonly cruel, but only so bewildered by these unaccustomed virtues that he could not trust their sincerity without experiments.

Walter's is a character as remarkable, as clearly defined, and as consistently thought out, as those of the rivals in the Knight's Tale: (see my article on 'Chaucer's Characters,' University Magazine, January, 1879). It is that of a sceptic, capricious, wilful, eccentric, the spoilt child of his serfs, but kindly at heart; obstinate enough in carrying out his resolutions, and restlessly seeking the terra firma of secure belief, like one resenting his own inability to believe, so that at times one almost pities him: vain, loving to astonish people, but at the bottom honourable and generous. This we see underlying all his actions, from his eccentric mode of marrying, to his last capricious outrage. We may suppose that he was led to far greater lengths than he projected, by Griselda's eagerness to turn the second cheek to the smiter. He may have been half irritated by her servile indifference to her position, and doglike attachment, and thus he gives up the complaisant attitudinising (which does not impose on her) after his first trial of her, and the following trials are respectively more brutal and severe. 'Asketh no rede of me,' cries Griselda, and he takes her at her word. Griselda is throughout consistent; but hers is not, like his, a complex character, and is correspondingly less interesting. Chaucer himself feels that she must have been trying, with all her virtue—'it would be unbearable,' he says, were all wives like her—but he describes warmly her finest quality, her courage in restraining herself before 'her folk,' proving that her patience sprang from strength, not weakness; and no doubt the real moral of the tale is the complete disinterestedness and tenacity of love.

There are some exquisitely neat touches in the Tale, as the crafty and flattering words in which the spokesman of his people urges him to marry—'Boweth your neck under the blissful yoke of sovereignty, not service'—and the humour of the people on his second marriage, slewing round because rien ne succède comme le succès.

Chaucer seems to me to have devoted especial pains to the Clerk's Tale, relating it in the same versification as the history of the pious Constance (Man of Law's Tale), the holy St. Cecilia (Second Nonne's Tale), and the Prioress's Tale—all religious, and undoubtedly written con amore.

The story of Griselda winds up with real artistic power, the Clerk concluding with an ironical little song addressed to ordinary wives, so as to leave his hearers laughing, instead of depressed by the inadequate reward of patient Grizel's virtues. This little song consists of six beautiful verses, of six lines only each, in which every line rhymes with the corresponding line in the five other verses. Clearly great labour has been lavished on it—but I have not included it, as the ironical directions to wives to be bad wives would be probably not understood by a child, and superfluous if they were.

It is impossible to read this Tale without observing how admirably it could be dramatised: and in 1893 it was actually produced on the stage in Paris. Patient Grizel has of course passed into a proverb.]

THE MONKS TALE.

GLOSSARY.	OUR hoste seyde, 'As I am faithful man, And by the precious corpus Madrian ¹ I hadde lever than a barel ale That goode lief my wyf hadde herd this tale!	Our Host cried out, 'As I'm a faithful man, And by the precious corpus Madrian , I'd sooner have than any barrel ale, That good old soul my wife to hear that tale!
matter	But let us passe away fro this mateere : My lord the Monk' (quod he) 'be mery of chere. For ye shal telle a tale trewely.	But let us quit that subject; now my lord The Monk,' (quoth he) 'give us a merry word ! For you shall tell a story, certainly.
stands	Lo! Rouchester stant heere faste by!	Why, Rochester is full in sight, hard by!
break	Ryd forth, myn owen lord, brek nat our game, But by my trewthe, I knowe nat your name, Wher I shal calle yow, my lord dan? John, Or dan Thomas, or elles dan Albon ?	Ride forth, my master, do not mar the game. But, by my troth, I do not know your name ; What shall I call you, now—my lord Sir John, Or else Sir Thomas, or my lord Albon ?
best	This worthy Monk took al in patience And seyde, 'I wol doon al my diligence As fer as souneth in to honestee To telle yow a tale, or two, or three.'	This worthy Monk took all in patience; And said, 'I'll gladly do my diligence As far as suiteth to propriety, To tell you all a tale—or two, or three.'
manner	I wol bywaile in maner of tregedye The harm of hem that stode in heigh degre And fallen so ther nas no remedye To bring hem out of hir adversite. For certeynly, whan Fortune lust to fle,	I will bewail in many a tragic story The griefs of those who were of high degre, And helplessly have fall'n away from glory Without a balm for their adversity. Truly, when Fortune doth think fit to flee,

¹ A common oath—'by the body of St. Madrian.'

² Dan, or Sir. 'The custom of prefixing the addition of Sir to the Christian name of clergyman was formerly usual in this country. Fuller . . . gives this reason why there were formerly more Sirs than Knights : such priests as have the addition of Sir were men not graduated in the university, being in orders, but not degrees; whilst others, entitled Masters, had commenced in the arts.'—Sir John Hawkins's History of Music.

GLOSSARY.	Ther may no man the cours of hir whiel holde.	No man the whirling of her wheel can hold.
	Let no man truste on blynde ¹ pro- sperite;	Let no man blindly trust pro- sperity!
Beware	Beth war by these ensamples trewe and olde.	Be warned by these examples, true and old.

UGOLINO, COUNT OF PISA.

languishing	Of the erl Hugelin of Pise the langour Ther may no tonge telle for pite.	Earl Ugolin of Pisa's miseries Hardly, for pity, told of tongue can be.
	But litel out of Pise stant a tour ² In whiche tour in prison yput was he And with him ben his litel children thre, The eldest scarcely fyf yere was of age.	A little out of Pisa a tower is, And in that tower's donjon cast was he: And with him were his little children three. The eldest scarcely five years was of age.
great	Alas, Fortune! it was gret cruelte Suche briddes for to put in such a cage.	Ah, Fortune! it was surely cruelty- Such little birds to pen in such a cage!
	Dampnyd was he to deye in that prisoun For Roger, ³ which that bisschop was of Pise,	Condemned he was within that tower to die, For Roger, Pisa's bishop, by his tongue made	Had on him maad a fals suggestioun,	Had harm'd him, and he kill'd him with a lie, began	Thurgh which the peple gan on him arise And putte him in prisoun in such a wisse	Thro' which there rose against him all the throng Of people, and in prison he was flung, way	As ye han herd: and mete and drynke he hadde	As you have heard: and meat and drink he had hardly	So smal, that wel unnethe it may suffise And therewithal it was ful pore and badde.	So little that it could not last them long, And therewithal the food was poor and bad.
meat	And on a day bifel that in that hour Whan that his mete wont was to be i-broughte The gayler schet the dores of that toure: He herd it wel, but here spake right noughte And in his herte anon ther fel a thoughte	And on a day, about the wonted hour When that his wretched food was daily brought, The gaoler shut the doors throughout the tower.— He heard the echoing clang, yet spake he nought, For on his heart there fell a deadly thought stands just outside the town.

¹ Fortune is represented blind.

² The Leaning Tower of Pisa is well known, where this outrage happened; it

³ Archbishop Ruggieri degli his enemy.

GLOSSARY.

do (make) as Fr. faire } made

pottage

would to God belly is no more welcome

see began, bite impute to gnawed

from

That thay for hungir wolden doon him dyen.'Alas,' (quod he), 'alas that I was wrought!'

Therwith the teres felle fro his eyen.

His yonge sone that thre yer was of ageUnto him sayde, 'Fader, why do ye wepe?Whan wil the gayler bringen oure potage?Is ther no morsel bred that ye doon kepe?I am so hongry that I may not slepe.Now wolde God that I mighte slepe ever!Than shuld not hunger in my wombe crepe.Ther nis no thyng, save bred, that me were lever.'Thus day by day this childe bigan to crieTil in his fadres barm adoun he layAnd sayde: 'Farwel, fader, I moot dye.'And kist his fader, and dyde the same day.And whan the woful fader deed it sey,

For wo his armes tuo he gan to byte

And sayde, 'Fortune, alas and wala wa!Thy false whele my wo al may I wite.'His childer wende that it for hongir wasThat he his armes gnaw and nought for wo,And sayden: 'Fader, do nought so, allas!But rather ete the fleisch upon us tuo.Oure fleisch thou yave us, oure fleisch thou take us froAnd ete ynough: 'right thus they to him seydeAnd after that, withinne a day or tuo,They layde hem in his lappe adoun deyde.That he was doom'd of hunger there to die!—'Alas!' quoth he, 'the day that I was wrought!'And tears came thick and fast unto his eye.His youngest son—a little child of three—Said unto him, 'Father, why do you weep?

Will gaoler bring our supper presently?

Is there not one wee bit of bread you keep?

I am so hungry that I cannot sleep.

If God would let me sleep for ever—moreNo more this hunger into me would creep.No thing there is—save bread—I long so for.'Thus day by day this child began to cry,

Till in his father's lap adown he lay,

And murmur'd 'Farewell, father, for I die.'And kiss'd his father, and died the selfsame day.And when the father saw how still he lay,In his own helpless arms he struck his teeth,And cried 'O Fortune! woe, and well away!O Fate that wheel'd me on to worse than death!'His children thought that it for hunger wasThat he his arms did gnaw—and not for woe—

And said, 'O father, do not so! alas!

But rather eat the flesh upon us two.

Our flesh you gave us, take our flesh us fro,And eat enough: 'thus to him did they say.

And after that, within a day or so

They laid them in his lap—and passed away.

GLOSSARY.

in despair, died	} Himself despeired eek for longer starf.	And he himself in desperate hunger died :
	Thus ended is this mighty earl of Pise ;	Thus ended is the mighty earl of Pise :
carved, cut away	} For his estate Fortune fro him carf.	So Fortune sliced away his wealth and pride !
	Of this tregede it ought ynough suffise.	And of the tragedy this may well suffice.
	Who so wil hiere it in a lenger wise	Whoso would hear it in a longer wise,
Italy	Rede the grete poet of Itaille	May learn from that great poet of Itaille
	That highte Daunte, for he can it devise	Whose name is Dante, all their miseries
	Fro poynt to poynt, nought oon word wil he sayle.	From point to point—not one word will he fail.

ZENOBIA.

write	CENOBIA, of Palmire ¹ the queene As writen Perciens of hir noblesse,	Zenobia, of Palmyra the proud queen (As Persians tell us of her nobleness),
	So worthy was in armes and so keene	In deeds of arms so great was, and so keen, surpassed	That no wight passid hir in hardynesse Ne in lynage, ne in other gentillesse.	That none exceeded her in hardiness, In lineage, and all natural worthiness.
	Of the king's blood of Pers she is descended ;	From blood of Persian kings was she descended.
beauty	I say nat that sche hadde most fairness : But of hir schap sche might not be amended.	I say not she possess'd most loveliness : But in her shape she could not be amended.
	Fro hir childhod I fynde that she fledde Office of wommen, and to woode sche wente,	From childhood upward, find I that she fled Office of women : to the woods she went :
	And many a wild hertes blood sche schedde With arwes brode that sche to hem sente :	And many a wild hart's blood therein she shed With the broad arrows from her bowstring sent ;
soon caught	Sche was so swyft, that sche anoon hem hente. And whan that sche was elder, sche wolde kille	Swift-footed, she could catch the beast half-spent ; And when she had grown older, she would kill

¹ The Greek name of a great and splendid city of Upper Syria. Its original name signified the City of Palms. Zenobia assumed the imperial diadem A.D. 266

Glossary.
Tere to pieces

	Leouns, lebardes, and beres al to- rente,	Lions and leopards, yea, the bears she rent, wield	And in hir armes weld hem at hir wille. ¹	And with her hands destroy'd them at her will.
	Sche dorste wilde bestes dennes seke,	The wild beast in his den she dare! to seek,
run	And renne in the mounteyns al the night,	And wander in the mountains all the night,
	And slepe under a busch; and sche couthe eeke	And sleep beneath a bush: and she could eek also	Wrastil by verray fors and verray might	Wrestle by very force and very might main	With eny yong man, were he never so wight.	With any young man, and conquer him outright.
sturdy	Ther mighte no thing in hir armes stonde.	Nought could the vigour of her arm defy.
young	She kept hir mayden hede from every wight,	And pure she kept her life, and her delight
deigned a slave	To no man deyned hire for to be bonde.	Was in the forest and her liberty.
	But atte last, hir frendes han hir married	But by her people she at length was married city	To Odenake, a prince of that citee; Al were it so that sche him longe taried.	To Odenathus, prince of the citee (Though for a spouse she long enough had tarried),
	And ye schul understonde how that he Hadde such fantasies as hadde sche.	And I would have you understand that he Had just such whims and fantasies as she.
knyt in one	But natheles, whan thay were knyt in fere They lyved in joye and felicité: For ech of hem had other leef and dere.	But natheless, when the two had come together They lived in joy and in felicity: For each of them did greatly love the other.
	Tuo sones by this Odenak had sche,	Two sons by her to Odenath were born,
	The which sche kept in vertu and lettrure. ²	Whom in all careful virtues she did train.
love of letters	But now unto our purpos torne we;	But thence unto our story we must turn.
	I say, so worshipful a creature, And wys, and worthy, and large with mesure,	I say so worshipful a sovereign Freehanded and yet wise in loss or gain, reasonably liberal pains-taking also	So penyble in the werre and curteys eeke, Ne more labour might in werre endure Was nowher noon in al this world to seeke.	So brave in war, and courteous beside, So long-enduring in the battle-plain, Was nowhere none, in all the world so wide.

¹ These feats must be taken cum grano salis; mediæval exaggeration, or 'gabbing,' was very popular.

² Zenobia was the friend of the philosopher Longinus, who lived in her court. He was put to death by Aurelian, A.D. 278.

GLOSSARY.	Hir riche array, if it myghte be tolde,	Her rich apparel—if it might all be told—
	As wel in vessel as in hir clothing;	Both in rare vessels and her garb ablaze,
Jewelry (Fr. } pierrerie)	Sche was al clothed in perre and gold.	She was all clad in jewel-work and gold.
	And eek sche lafte nought for hir hunting	Yet she forgot not, thro' her love of chase,
	To have of sondry tonges ful knowyng:	To understand strange tongues and foreign phrase knowledge	Whan she hadde leyser and mighte therto entende	When she had leisure, and her mind was bent learn, liking	To lerne bookes was al hir likyng,	Thereto, in books her pleasure was always,
	How sche in vertu might hir lyf spende.	To learn how nobly might her life be spent.

Many kingdoms she conquered with her doughty husband's help; eastern lands, and many a city that belonged to Rome. While Odenathus lived, no foe could get the better of them.

And when Odenathus was dead, she held her realm with strength, and fought so fiercely with her own hand that there was no prince near but was thankful if she would leave him alone. Neither Roman Emperor, nor Armenian, nor Egyptian, nor Syrian, nor Arabian foe durst come into the field with her.

attire	In kynges abytt went hir sones tuo,	In kingly habit walk'd her sons, the two
	As heires of hir fadres regnes alle;	Heirs to their father's kingdoms one and all:
	And Hermann, and Themaleo ¹	Themaleo one, the other Hermann,
Their	Here names were, as Parciens hem calle.	For thus the Persian tongue their names did call.
ever	But ay Fortune hath in hir honey galle:	But in her honey Fortune mingles gall!
no long while	This mighty queene may no while endure,	This mighty queen not long retain'd success.
kingdom	Fortune out of hir regne made hir falle	And Fortune forc'd her from her throne to fall
	To wretchednesse and to mysadventure.	Into disaster and great wretchedness.

When the government of Rome came into the hands of Aurelian he bound himself to do vengeance on the Queen Zenobia. And with his legions he attacked her, and at last put her to flight, and presently made her his captive.² So he won the land, and carried her and two sons fettered back to Rome.

	Amonges other things that he wan,	And, among other trophies that he won,
	Hir chaar, that was with gold wrought and perre,	Her car, all wrought with gold and jewelry,
Jewelry (Fr. } pierrerie)	This grete Romayn. this Aurilian,	This Roman victor, this Aurelian,
	Hath with him lad, for that men schulde se.	Hath with him brought, for all the folk to see.

¹ Heremianus and Timolaus. Boccaccio.

² Palmyra was taken by Aurelian.

GLOSSARY.	Biforē this triumphē walkith sche,	Foremost amid the triumph walketh she hauging	And gilte cheynes in hir necke hongyng: Corouned sche was, as aftir hir degre	Captive, gold chains her fallen neck array, And they have crown'd her after her degree;
jewelry (Fr. } pierrerie)	And ful of perrē chargid hir cloth-yng.	And with their precious stones her robe is gay.
once	Allas, Fortunē! sche that whilom was	Well away, Fortune! She that lately was dreadful tare	Dredful to kynges and to emperoures, Now gaureth al the pepul on hir, alas!	Terror of armies and of emperours, Suffers the stare of all the populace.
helmeted, stout battles }	And sche that helmyd was in starke stoures And wan bi force tounes strong and toures,	She who was helm'd in battle's bloody hours And won by force strong towns and haughty towers
head	Schal on hir heed now were a vitre-myte: ¹ And sche that bar the cepter ful of floures	Shall wear a shameful garb upon her head: And she that bare the sceptre full of flowers repay her expenses }	Schal bere a distaf hir coste for to quyte.	Shall hold a distaff for her daily bread.

CRÆSUS.

once	THIS riche Cresus, ² whilom kyng of Lyde, Of which Cresus Cirus him sore dradde,	The wealthy Cræsus, sometime king of Lyde (Of which Cræsus Cyrus was sore adread), feared	Yet was he caught amyddes al his pride,	Yet was he caught in spite of all his pride, amidst	And to the fuyr to brenne him men him ladde. But such a rayn doun fro the heven schadde	And to the fire to slay him, men him led. But such a rainfall did the heavens shed, burn	That slough the fuyr and made him to eschape.	It slew the fire and let the king escape:
prudent	But to be war yet grace noon he hadde,	But to be wary never grace he had,
hang open- mouthed }	Til fortune on the galwes made him gape.	Till Fortune made him on the gallows gape.
escaped give in	Whan he was eschaped, he couthe nought stente, For to bygygne a newe werre ageyn:	And being free he could not be content, Save to begin the weary war again;
believed	He wende wel, for that Fortune him sente	He judg'd, because good Fortune him had sent

¹ Vitremyte, fool's cap? (V. Skeat, 'Monk's Tale,' p. 183, ed. 1877. Thus the Canon's Yeoman, describing his poverty, says, 'Now may I were an hose upon myn heed.'

² Cræsus, last king of Lydia, reigned B.C. 560-546.

GLOSSARY.	Such hap that he eschaped thurgh the rayn, That of his foos he mighte not be slayn.	Such chance that he escap'd thro the rain, That by his foes he never could be slain.
dreamed	And eek a sweven upon a night he mette Of which he was so proud and eek	And lo! a dream upon a night he met: Of which he was so proud and eek so delighted	so fayn, That in vengeance he al his herte sette.	fain That unto vengeance all his heart was set.
increased	Upon a tree he was set as him thoughte Wher Jupiter him wisch bothe bak and syde, And Phebus eek a fair towail him broughte To drye him with, and therefore wex his pryde. And to his daughter that stood him beside, Which that he knew in heigh science abounde, And bad her telle what it signifyde, And sche his dreem right thus began expounde.	Upon a tree he rested (as he thought) While Jupiter him wash'd both back and side; And Phœbus a fair towel for him brought To dry him with—hence ever waxt his pride. He called his daughter, standing him beside (Whom in high science knew he to abound), And bade him tell her what it signified: And thus his dream to him she did expound.
astly	'The tree,' quod sche, 'the galwes is to mene, And Jupiter betokenith snow and rayn, And Phebus with his towail so clene Tho ben the sonnes stremes, soth to sayn. Thou schalt anhangen ben, fader, certayn; Rayn schal the wasch, and sonne schal the drye.' Thus warn'd sche him ful plat and eek ful playn, His daughter which that called was Phanie.	'The tree,' quoth she, 'the gallows doth it mean, And Jupiter betokeneth rain and snow; And Phœbus with his towel fair and clean Doth signify the sunbeams, as I know. Father, thou truly shalt be hanged: and lo, Rain shall thee wash and sunshine shall thee drye.' Thus warn'd of his own daughter he hath been; Had he but hearkened. She was call'd Phanie.
royal Ital. reale }	And hangen was Cresus this proude king, His real troné mighte him not avail:	And truly, hangen was Croesus the proud king: His royal throne might nought his life avail.
manner of	Tregedie is non other maner thing Ne can in singyng crien ne biwaile, But for that Fortune wil alway assayle With unwar strook the regnes that ben proude.	All tragedy doth teach no surer thing— Nor can do else, sing she, or cry, or wail— But this, that Fortune alway will assail With sudden stroke a state that is too proud.

GLOSSARY.	For whan men trusteth hir, than wil sche sayle, And cover hir brighte face as with a clowde.	For when men trust her, she will surely fail, And cover her bright face as with a cloud.
-----------	---	---

HOLOFERNES.

kingdoms	Was never capitaigne under a king That regnes mo put in subjec- cioun	Never was captain under any king Harder on realms that in his keeping came,
feld	Ne strengier was in feld of alle thing	Nor stronger in the field, in everything greater	As in his tyme, ne gretter of renoun;	Pertaining to his time: of wider fame, high	Ne more pompous in heih presump- cioun	Or more presumptuous on his mighty name ever	Than Oliphern, which that Fortune ay kist	Than Holofernes—whom dame For- tune kiss'd led	So licorously, and ladde him up and doun,	And smiled on, and did lead him up and doun knew	Til that his heed was of, er he it wist.	Until his head was off—before he wist!
losing	Nought oonly that the world had of him awe	Not only was he held in bitter awe deny	For lesyng of riches and liberte, But he made every man reneye his lawe: Nabugodonosor was lord, sayde he.	For the mere sake of wealth and liberty, But he destroyed the people's creed and law. Nebuchadnezzar was sole lord, said he,
None, should	Noon other god ne schuld honoured be.	No other god beside durst honour'd be,
dared, man	Ayeinst his heste dar no wight trespace	And no man durst rebel at his tchest city	Save in Betholia, a strong citē,	Save in Betholia, a strong citée, priest	Wher Eliachim a prest was of that place.	Wherein Eliachim ministered as priest.
take notice	But tak keep of that dethe of Oli- pherne:	But mark you all, the death of Holo- fern!
host, on	Amyd his ost he dronke lay on night	Amid his host he drunken lay one, night barn	Withinne his tente, large as is a berne;	Within his tent—as roomy as a barn—power	And yit, for al his pomp and al his might,	And yet for all his pomp and all his might stretched out	Judith, a womman, as he lay upright,	Judith—a woman—found him stretch'd outright off smote	Slepyng, his heed of smot, and fro his tente,	Sleeping, and slew him, and from out the tent secretly, stole	Ful prively sche stal from every wight, And with his heed unto hir toun sche wente.	She stole away (for none had seen the sight) And with his head, to her own town she went.

HERE ENDS THE 'MONK'S TALE.'

NOTES BY THE WAY.

[The frequent invocation of Fortune, complaints of her 'false wheel' and reference to her of various normal events, especially in moments of agony when it seems unnatural to begin moralising on the transitory nature of life, may surprise many readers of Chaucer. It seems as though some direct personality and power of interference with man was attributed to 'fortune'—by which we have come to mean chance, itself implying the natural result of causes unknown to us.

But Chaucer certainly never speaks of fortune in the sense of an unpreventable chance, else he would do so less seriously.

It appears to me that the notion of fortune had some affinity with that of Nemesis—not the power which is our poetical term for the retribution of wrongdoing—but the early Greek notion of an envious deity, which grudged to man too much honour or content. As the lightning is said to strike the highest trees, so the Greek Nemesis was held to be a cutter off of supreme things, a being of some mean, radical tendency to reduce states and qualities as much as possible to a dead level, eminently disagreeable, eminently vigilant, eminently potent. No doubt it is an idea most suggestive, and created by far-reaching melancholy observation of life.

If this be so, and if there was any mediæval real belief in such a power, derived from Greek writings, it would be no longer out of place for Ugolino's first thought to be of fortune as his foe, when his children were dying by inches: or for Chaucer to attribute to the envious deity Zenobia's fall, and Croesus's, and the development in Holofernes of a condition of mind and life extremely tempting to her to 'nip' in its blossom. Holofernes' story occurs in 'Judith,' (Apocrypha).

The Monk's Tale—or two of the stories in it at least—can be approximately dated. The De Petro Hispanie Rege could only have been written after 1369, as it describes the fall of Peter the Cruel, whose daughter Constance became Duchess of Lancaster, and the seizure of his crown by his 'bastard brother,' otherwise called the Good. Chaucer's praise of Peter was doubtless politic, as the defunct father-in-law of John of Gaunt. Another little story, De Barnabo Comite Mediolano, relates the fall of the robber-Duke of Milan, 'scourge of Lombardy, who perished in prison in 1385, the probable date of the Monk's Tale. The story of Ugolino is of course derived from Dante, and illustrates mediæval humanity—abbreviated, because (as Chaucer says in closing the Man of Law's Tale) the prolongation of a dismal story wearied him. Zenobia's history is derived from Boccaccio. The Bible stories were probably written after Wiclif's English Bible appeared.]

THE NUN'S PRIEST'S TALE.

GLOSSARY.	'Ho,' quod the Knight, 'good sir, no more of this, That ye han seyde is right ynow, ywis, And mochel more: for litel heuinesse Is right ynow to mochel folk, I gesse.	'Stop,' cried the Knight, 'good sir, no more of this. What you have said is right enough, I wis: Beside much more; for litte heaviness Is right enough for many folk, I guess.
	disagreeable I seye for me, it is a greet disease Wher as men han ben in grete welthe and ese fall To heren of here sodeyn fal, alas! And the contrarie is Loye and gret solas: As whan a man hath ben in poure estaat, rises in the world } And clymbeth up, and wexeth fortunat, And ther abydeþ in prosperitee, Such Swich thing is gladsom, as it thinketh me, And of swich thing were goodly for to telle. 'Ye' (quod our hoste) 'by seint Poules belle Ye saye ryght soth. . . . For therin is ther no disport ne game. Com neer, thou Prest, com hider, thou Sir Iohn, Tell us swich thing as may our hertes glade, Be blythe, though thou ryde upon a Iade. ¹	But for my part, it cannot greatly please When men have long enjoy'd great wealth and ease, To hear about their sudden down-falling, Though the reverse is good, and comforting. As when a man has been of poor estate And mends his lot, and waxeth fortunate, And then continues in prosperity, Such things are pleasant, as it seems to me, And of the like 'tis pleasant to hear tell. 'Yea,' cried our Host, 'and by St. Paul's big bell Ye speak the truth. . . . For in such tales is neither sport nor game. Come near, thou Priest! come hither, thou Sir Iohn, Tell us a cheerful tale, to make us glad. Be gay, although thou ridest on a jade!'

¹ Mine host is saucy enough to all the male pilgrims: he treats the Nun's Priest as considerably inferior, as he is, to the wealthy Monk. The latter he boldly rallies, the Nun's Priest he rates, with a sneer at his sorry horse. See note ², p. 116.

Then the priest good-humouredly began his tale:—

GLOSSARY.

advanced	A poure wydow somdel stope in age,	A widow, poor, and now advanc'd in age, narrow	Was whilom dwellyng in a narwe cotage,	Dwelt in a cot—full humble, I'll engage—standing	Bisyde a grove, stondyng in a dale.	Hard by a little grove that fring'd a dale.
widow	This wydwe of which I telle yow my tale, Syn thilke day that sche was last a wif,	This widow, whom I speak of in my tale, Since that sad day when she was last a wife led	In pacience ladde a ful symple lyf, For litel was hire catel and hire	Led patiently a very simple life. Though little were her goods, and small her rent, economy	By housbondrye of such as God hire sente,	She made the best of all that God her sent,
found (provided for)	Sche fond hireself, and eek hire doughtren tuo.	She kept herself, and by her industry, kine	Thre large sowes hadde sche, and no mo, Thre kyn, and eek a sheep that highte Malle. ¹	Two daughters : three fat pigs (no more) had she, Three cows, too, and a sheep she called Mall.
chamber	Ful sooty ² was hir bour, and eek hire halle, In which she eet ful many a sclender meel.	Full sooty was her chamber, and her hall In which she ate her scanty meals, and slight sharp (Fr. poignant), not a bit	Of poynant sawce hire needede never a deel.	Need hers of sauce to whet her appetite.
	No deynté morsel passede thurgh hire throte;	No dainty morsel e'er went down her throat, according	Hire dyete was accordant to hire cote.	Her diet always seem'd to match her coat.
Repletion A temperate heart's content prevented	Repleccioun ne made hire nevere sik ; Attempre dyete was al hire phiaik, And exercise, and hertes suffisaunce. The goute lette hire nothing for to daunce, Ne poplexie schente not hire heed ; No wyn ne drank sche, nother whit nor reed ; Hire bord was served most with whit and blak, Milk and broun bred, in which sche fond no lak,	Repletion never made her sick, I ween, A moderate meal was all her medicine, And exercise, contented with her lot. If she would dance, the gout forbade her not, And apoplexy never harm'd her head. She drank no wine, no, neither white nor red, Her board was mostly served with white and black, Milk and brown bread (of which she had no lack), broiled	Seynd bacoun, and somtyme an ey or tweye,	Broil'd bacon, and an egg or two, some days.
dairywoman	For she was as it were a maner deye.	—She dealt in dairy produce, in small ways.
	A yerd sche hadde, enclosed al aboute	A little yard she had, fenced all about

¹ Probably Molly.

² The widow's home consisted of a hut divided into two rooms, the yard or 'house without' like Griselda's was used as a farm-yard. The two rooms were called severally

'bower' and 'hall,' one private, the other public. Chimneys were hardly in use, and the smoke of the fire found its way through holes in the roof—can one wonder the rooms were very 'sooty'?

GLOSSARY.	With stikkes, and a drye dich with- oute,	With sticks, and there was a dry ditch without.
	In which she hadde a cok, highte Chauntecleer,	And here she had a cock, called Chanticleer.
equal	In al the lond, of crowyng nas his peer.	For crowing, in the land he had no peer.
	His vois was merier than the merye orgon,	His voice more merry than the organ's was,
	On masse dayes that in the chirche goon;	Which plays in church so merrily at the mass.
	Wel sikerer was his crowyng in his logge,	More certain was his crowing from his perch clock (Fr. horloge)	} Than is a klok, ¹ or an abbay orlogge.	Than abbey clock, or bell of any church.

He knew by instinct each ascension of the equinoctial, crowing each hour, none better or louder.

	His comb was redder than the fyn coral,	His comb it was more red than fine coral, embattled or indented bill	} And batayld, as it were a castel wal.	And all embattled like a castle wall ;
	His bile was blak, and as the geet it schon ;	His bill was black and shone like jet —and blue toes	Lik asure were his legges, and his ton ;	His legs like azure, and his strong toes too.
	His nayles whiter than the lilye flour,	His nails more white than lily buds unroll'd,
	And lik the burnischt gold was his colour.	And then his coat was like the bur- nished gold !
in rule	This gentil cok hadde in his gover- naunce	This gallant cock had at his power and will walt on him	Sevene hennes, for to don al his pleasaunce,	Seven hens, his lordly wishes to fulfil ;
lovers	Whiche were his sustres and his para- mours,	Which were his sisters and com- panions :
hued	And wonder like to him, as of coloures.	Very like him , in their complexions :
	Of whiche the faireste hewed on hire throte,	And one, the fairest-tinted on her throat,
	Was cleped fayre damoysele Pertelote.	Was named the beauteous damsel Pertilote.
well man- nered (Fr. de bon air)	} Curteys sche was, discret, and debo- naire,	Courteous she was, discreet, and sociable,
	And compainable, and bar hire self ful faire,	And debonair, and held herself so well, that	Syn thilke day that sche was seven night old,	Yea, ever since she was a fortnight old, her power	That trewely sche hath the herte in hold	That she the heart of Chanticleer doth hold locked, limb	Of Chauntecleer loken in every lith ;	Lock'd up in her thro' every limb and tint :
	He lovede hire so, that wel him was therwith.	He loved her so, that he was well con- tent.

¹ The earliest complete clock of which there is any record (certain) was made by a Saracen mechanic in the thirteenth century. A great clock was put up at Canterbury Cathedral in 1292, and a striking clock in Westminster in 1368. A perfect one was made in Paris by Vick, 1870. The first portable one, 1530. In England no clock went perfectly before that set up at Hampton Court, 1540.

GLOSSARY.	But such a joye was it to here hem synge,	But such a joy it was to hear him sing, began	Whan that the brighte sonne gan to springe, In swete accord, 'my lief is faren on londe.'	Whene'er the sunny day began to spring, Melodiously—'My love is far away!'
at that time	For thilke tyme, as I have understonde,	(For at that period, as I have heard say, beasts and birds }	Bestes and briddes cowde speke and synge.	The animals and birds could speak and sing.)
	And so byfel, that in a dawenyng,	And it befell, that once at day-dawning
	As Chauntecleer among his wyves alle	As Chanticleer among his ladies all
	Sat on his perche, that was in the halle, ¹	Sat on his perch, which spann'd across the hall,
	And next him sat this faire Pertelote, This Chauntecleer gan Gronen in his throte,	And next him sat the lovely Pertilote, This Chanticleer 'gan groan within his throat troubled	As man that in his dreem is drecched sore.	As man that in a dream is troubled sore.
	And whan that Pertelote thus herde him rore,	When Pertilote thus heard him groan and snore
	Sche was agast, and sayde, 'O herte deere,	She was aghast, and said—'My heart's delight,
	What eythe yow to grone in this manere?	What ails you, that you groan like this to-night?
	Ye ben a verray sleper, fy for schame!'	You are so good a sleeper: fie, for shame!'
	And he answerde and sayde thus, 'Madame,	And he replied and said to her— 'Madame,
be not offended }	I praye yow, that ye take it nought agrief:	I pray you, that you be not vexed with me:
dreamed	By God, me mette I was in such meschicf	Methought, I was in such a misery
	Right now, that yit myn herte is sore afright.	Just now, that still my heart is full of fright.
affrighted	Now God,' quod he, 'my swevene rede aright, And keep my body out of foul prisoun!	Interpret now (quoth he) my dream aright, Heaven keep me out of prison, and all woe!
I dreamed	Me mette, how that I romede up and doun	Methought, as I was roaming to and fro
	Withinne oure yerde, wher as I saugh a beest,	Within our yard, I saw a strange beast halt, arrest (attack)	Was lik an hound, and wolde han maad areest	Part like a hound, which would have made assault have	Upon my body, and wolde han had me deed.	Upon my body, and have laid me dead!
	His colour was bitwixe yelwe and reed;	The colour of him seem'd 'twixt yellow and red;

¹ In Italy the lower classes still, like the low Irish, share the house with their cattle and poultry. Near Naples the turkeys are inextricably mixed up with the children; and donkeys live in the common room.

GLOSSARY.	And tipped was his tail, and bothe his eeres	And tipped was his tail, and each sharp ear remnant hairs	With blak, unlik the remenaunt of his heres ;	With black, unlike the rest of all his hair :
two even now, fear, die }	His snowte smal, with glowyng eyen tweye.	His snout was small, with two eyen glowing bright.
	Yet of his look for feere almost I deye ;	Remembering him I almost die with fright !
	This causede me my gronyng douteles.	And this no doubt did cause me so to groan.
Away heartless coward }	'Avoy !' quod sche, 'fy on yow, herteles !	'Away !' quoth she, 'fie on you, timid one !
	Allas !' quod sche, 'for, by that God above !	Allas ! (quoth she) for by yon heaven above
	Now han ye lost myn herte and al my love ;	Now have you lost my heart, and all my love.
	I can nought love a coward, by my feith.	I cannot love a coward, by my faith !
	For certes, what so eny womman seith,	For sure, whatever any woman saith,
	We alle desiren, if it mighte be,	We each desire (if haply it may be) bold	To han housbondes, hardy, wise, and fre,	Our husbands to be bold, and rich and free, secret	And secré, ¹ and no nygard, ne no fool,	And secret : not a niggard, not a fool,
boaster	Ne him that is agast of every tool,	Not one to be afraid of every tool,
	Ne noon avauntour, by that God above !	And not a braggart—by the heavens above !
	How dorste ye sayn for schame unto youre love,	How dare you say, for shame, unto your love,
	That any thing mighte make yow aferd ?	That anything can make you feel afraid ?
	Han ye no mannes herte, an han a berd ? ²	Have you no man's heart, you that have a beard ?
	Allas ! and konne ye ben agast of swevenys ?	And can you be so frightened at a dream ?
	Nothing, God wot, but vanité, in swevene is.	There's only nonsense, goodness knows, in them.
	Swevenes engendren of replecciouns,	Bad dreams are caused by indigestion,
	And ofte of fume, and of complecciouns,	—By overfeeding, fume, complexion—
	Whan humours ben to abundant in a wight.	By humours too abundant in a wight.
person	Certes this dreem, which ye han met to-night,	No doubt this dream that you have had to-night
	Cometh of the grete superfluité	It cometh of a superfluity
	Of youre reede colera , pardé, ³	Of bile ; and a red humour, certainly :
	Which causeth folk to dremen in here dremes	Which causeth folk to fancy in their dreams
gleams	Of arwes, and of fyr with reede leemes,	That they see arrows—fire with flaming beams—

¹ Secret used here probably in the classical sense, meaning private, apart from others, all to one's self.

² We all know the commonplace of a scolding woman, amusingly brought in.

'Call yourself a man? You got a beard?' &c.

³ Pardé, from the French oath par Dieu. Oaths of all kinds were too common in the fourteenth century, as they were in the eighteenth.

GLOSSARY.	Of grote bestes, that thi woln hem byte,	Red beasts, ready to bite them—passionate context grecas, little }	Of kontek, and of whelpes greete and lite ;	Contentions, or grim monsters small and great—
	Right as the humour of malencolie	Right as a melancholy humour makes
	Causeth ful many a man, in sleep, to crye,	Full many a man cry out, before he wakes
	For fere of beres, or of boles blake,	For fear of bears and bulls, all black of hue, will	Or elles blake develes woln him take.	Or else black devils that are catching you.
	Of othere humours couthe I telle also,	Of other humours could I also tell
	That wirken many a man in slep ful woo ;	That make full many a sleeper miserable :
	But I wol passe as lightly as I can.	But I will pass as lightly as I can.

'Did not Cato the wise say, never mind dreams? I beg you, by all that is sacred, to take some physic, before you get some fever or ague which may kill you. For, though there is no apothecary in this town, I can find you herbs to cure you whether you suffer from exhaustion or repletion!—you shall take both, to make sure. Pick them up, right as they grow! and never fear dreams.'

Chanticleer did not however much relish the prospect of her wholesale physicking, and refutes Cato by 'many a man of more authority than ever Cato was' to prove that dreams are not idle but prophetic.

'I can tell you two stories (cries he) related by Cicero that bear upon the subject.'

'Two friends once went on a pilgrimage together,' runs one story, 'and it happened that they came into a town which was so crowded with pilgrims that they found that they could not be lodged together. There was not so much as a cottage left that could take both of them in. So they separated for the night; one found a decent lodging, the other had to sleep in a stall among the oxen.'

	And so bifel, that, long er it were day,	And so befell, that long ere it was day, dreamed	This man mette in his bed, ther as he lay,	The one dreamed, in the bed wherein he lay, fellow began	How that his felawe gan upon him calle,	That his companion did unto him call,
	And sayde, 'allas! for in an oxe stalle	Saying, 'Alas! for in an ox's stall
	This night I schal be mordred ther I lye.	This night I shall be murder'd where I lie!
	Now help me, deers brother, or I dye;	Now help me, in all haste, before I die.
	In alle haste com to me,' he sayde.	In all haste come to me, my comrade dear.'
started up	This man out of his slep for fere abrayde;	The man woke up at once, through very fear.
	But whan that he was wakned of his sleep,	But when he was awake, and thought it o'er,
	He tornede him, and took of this no heed	Turn'd in his bed, and heeded it no more,
	Him thoughte his dreem nas but a vanité.	So sure that dreams were only vanity.—
	Thus twies in his sleepyng dremede he.	And thus twice in his slumbers dreamed he.

GLOSSARY.	And atte thridde tyme yet his felawe	And a third time that night, his mate again slain	Com, as him thoughte, and sayde, 'I am now alawe ;	Came (as he thought), and said, 'I am now slain ;
arise	Bihold my bloody woundes, deepe and wyde !	Look at my bloody wounds so deep and wide !
	Aris up erly in the morwe tyde,	Rise up, thou, early in the morning tide ;
	And at the west gate of the toun,' quod he,	And at the west gate of the town' (said he),
shalt thou	' A carte ful of donge there schaltow sec,	' A cart of dung thou there shalt surely see,
that, stop	In which my body is hyd ful prively ; Do thilke carte arresten boldely.	In which my body is hidden prively : Do thou arrest that dung-cart sturdily.
	My gold causede my mordre, soth to sayn.'	My money caused my murder, it is plain.'
	And tolde him every poynt how he was slayn,	And told him every point how he was slain hue	With a ful pitous face, pale of hewe.	With a full piteous face, all pale of hue.
	And truste wel, his dreem he fond ful trewe ;	And mark you well, this vision he found true.
	For on the morwe, as sone as it was day,	For on the morrow, as soon as it was day, inn	To his felawes in he took the way ;	Towards his fellow's inn he took his way.
	And whan that he cam to this oxen's stalle,	And when he came into the oxen's stall, ostler	After his felawe he bigan to calle. The hostiler answered him anon,	Unto his fellow he began to call. The hostler replied to him anon,
	And sayde, 'Sire, youre felawe is agoon,	Saying, 'Sir, your companion is gone.
	Als soone as day he wente out of the toun.'	As soon as daylight came he left the town.'
	This man gan falle in gret suspecioun, Remembring on his dremes that he mette,	Then in his mind fell dire suspicioun ; Remembering the vision he had seen ;
delay	And forth he goth, no lenger wolde he lette,	And he went forth with speed and troubled mien found	Unto the west gate of the toun, and fond	Unto the west gate of the city—and manure	A donge carte, as it wente to donge lond,	A dung-cart, going to manure the land
	That was arrayed in that same wise	He found there—placed and shapen in such wise describe	As ye han herd the deede man devise ;	As you have heard the dead man's wraith devise.
began	And with an hardy herte he gan to crie	And with a hardy heart he'gan to cry
	Vengeaunce and justice of this felonye.	Vengeance and justice on this felony.
	'My felawe mordre is this same night,	'My fellow murder'd is this very night at full length	And in this carte he lith gapinge up-right.	And in this cart his body lies outright!

GLOSSARY.	I crye out on the ministres,' quod he,	I cry out on the officers' (quoth he), should rule	'That schulde kepe and reule this cité;	'Who ought to guard the town's security!
lieth	Harrow! ¹ alas! her lith my felawe slayn!'	Harrow! help, help! here lies my fellow dead.'
	What scholde I more unto this tale sayn?	Now what shall further in this tale be said?
	The peple outsterte, and caste the carte to grounde,	The people started forth, cast to the ground
	And in the middel of the dong thay founde	The cart, and in the midst of it they found newly	The dede man, that mordred was al newe.	The dead man, murder'd, with his wounds all new.
blessed	O blisful God, that art so just and trewe!	—O, blessed God, Thou art most just and true!
betrayest	Lo, how that thou bywreyest mordre alway!	Lo, how Thou makest clear a crime alway!
	Mordre wil out, that se we day by day.	Murder will out, infallibly, I say.
loathsome	Mordre is so wlatson and abhominable	Murder's so black and so abominable hidden	To God, that is so just and resonable, That he ne wol nought suffre it hiled be;	To God, Who is so just and reasonable, That He will never let it cover'd be:
	Though it abyde a yeer, or tuo, or thre,	Though it be hid a year, or two, or three,
	Mordre wil out, this my conclusioun	Murder will out, and that is ever shown.
	And right anoon, the mynistres of that toun	—And speedily the officers of that town arrested	Han hent the cartere, and so sore him pynded,	Caught hostler and carter, those vile men, punished	And eek the hostiler so sore him engnyed, ²	And tortured them (as was the manner then) racked	That thay biknewe here wikkednesse anoon,	Till they confessed their wickedness anon:
confessed	And were anhonged by the nekke boon.	And they were hangèd both, by the neck bone.

Thus every one may see that dreams are not for nothing. And there is another proof of it I can tell you:—

	Tuo men that wolde han passed over see	Two travellers, who would have crost the sea
	For certeyn cause into a fer contré, If that the wynd ne hadde ben contrarie.	On trading matters, to a far countree, Had not the wind a while contrary blown,
	That made hem in a cité for to tarie,	Which made them tarry in a certain town pleasantly	That stood ful merye upon an haven syde.	That lay convenient, on the haven's side.
against	But on a day, agayn the even tyde,	But on a later day, towards eventide

¹ Harrow: a cry of distress; hence our word harrowing for an event of great horror.

² Torture by some engine, such as the rack, then a legal form of exar

GLOSSARY.	The wynd gan chaunge, and blew right as hem leste.	The wind began to change, and bléw them fair.
wished	Jolyf and glad they wente unto here reste, And casten hem ful erly for to saylle ;	Gladly they went to rest, and to prepare All things in readiness, early for to sail.
one, great	But to that oon man fel a gret mer-vaylle. That oon of hem in slepyng as he lay,	But to the one of them, a marvel fell ! This one of them, asleep as there he lay, wondrous, against	Him mette a wonder drem, agayn the day ; Him thoughte a man stood by his beddes syde, And him comaundede, that he schulde abyde,	Had a most wondrous dream before the day. He thought, a man appear'd at his bed's side Who bade him in that city to abide :
remain	And sayde him thus, ' If thou to-morwe wende,	Saying to him—' If thou to-morrow wend, go	Thow schalt be dreynt ; my tale is at an ende.'	Thou shalt be surely drowned, and there's an end.'
dreamt	He wook, and tolde his felawe what he mette, And prayde him his viage for to lette ; As for that day, he prayde him to abyde. His felawe that lay by his beddes syde, Gan for to lawghe, and scornede him ful faste. ' No drem,' quod he, ' may so myn herte agaste,	He weke, and told his fellow of this warning Not to pursue this voyage in the morning ; Begg'd him to wait, were it for but one day. His comrade, who alongside of him lay, Laugh'd him to scorn, and mock'd his foolishness. ' No dream' (said he) ' shall so my heart oppress terrify delay business	That I wil lette for to do my thinges. But sith I see that thou wilt her abyde,	That I will shirk to do my business. But since I see that thou wilt here abide lose through sloth rueth	And thus forslouthe wilfully thy tyde, God wot it reweth me, and have good day.' And thus he took his leve, and wente his way.	And sacrifice the favourable tide, Why, I am sorry for you—so good-day.' And thus he took his leave and went his way.

He sailed, and the whole ship and crew were lost !

Numerous other cases came to Chanticleer's mind. The dreams of Daniel and of Joseph ; of Pharaoh of Egypt : the prophetic vision of Croesus that he was set upon a tree, which signified that he would die by hanging ; and many more, all of which he told to Pertilote, and which formed a good excuse not to accept her proffered doses.

	' And I saye forther-more, That I ne telle of laxatives no store, For thay ben venomous, I wot right wel ; I hem defeye, I love hem nevere a del.	' And I say furthermore I, for one, set by medicines no store, They are all poison, physics are, I wot. I defy physics : and I love them not.
venomous not a bit

GLOSSARY.	'Now let us speke of mirth, and	Now let us think of mirth, and leave stop	stynte al this;	all this;
one	Madame Pertelote, so have I blis,	Ah, charming Pertilote, so have I bliss!
	Of o thing God hath sent me large	Of one thing heaven hath granted me grace;	good grace!
	For whan I see the beauté of your	For when I see the beauty of your face,
	face,
eyes	Ye ben so scarlet reed aboute your	You are so sweetly scarlet round the dread, die	eyghen,	eye,
	It maketh al my drede for to deyghen.	It makes my nightly terrors wholly die.
solace	I am so ful of joye and of solas	I am so full of joy and deep content
	That I defye bothe swevene and	That I defy both vision and bad drem.	dream!
perch	And with that word he fleigh down	And with that word he sprang from hens	fro the beam,	off the beam
	For it was day, and eek his hennes	(For it was daylight) and his ladies alle;	all.
began	And with a chuk he gan hem for to	And with a chuck he 'gan them each calle,	to call,
lying	For he hadde founde a corn, lay in the	For he had found a corn-grain in the yard.	yard.
Royal (Ital. } reale)	Real he was, he was no more aferd;	Royal he stalked, no fears his plea- sure marr'd,
	He loketh as it were a grim lioun;	Like a grim lion he his glances throws,
	And on his toon he rometh up and	And roameth up and down upon his doun,	toes
	Him deyneth not to sette his foot to	Scarce deigning to set foot upon the grounde.	ground:
	He chukketh, whan he hath a corn	He chucketh when he hath a corn-
	i-founde,	grain found;
	And to him rennen than his wives	And then his hens towards him hasten
	alle.	all.
royal	Thus real, as a prince is in his halle,	Thus regal as a prince is in his hall
	Leve I this Chauntecleer.	Leave I this Chanticleer—

And I will tell you the adventure which happened to him.

	Byfel that Chauntecleer in al his	It chanc'd that Chanticleer in all his pride,	pride,
beside	His seven wyves walkyng him by	His seven wives all walking at his
	syde,	side,
	Caste up his eyghen to the brighte	Cast up his eyes under the blazing
	sonne,	sun
	That in the signe of Taurus hadde i-	Which in the sign of Taurus then had ronne	run
	Twenty degrees and oon, and som-	Twenty degrees and one and somewhat more;	what more.
nature	He knewe by kynde, and by noon	He knew by instinct and no other lore other lore, joyous cry	That it was prime, ¹ and crew with	That it was prime, and crew with all blisful stevene.	his might.

¹ Prime: the end of the first quarter of the day, counting from six o'clock; i.e. nine o'clock: at about which hour the sun attained the altitude specified, 41°. Chaucer fixes the occurrences in this story on Friday, May 3. (Sun past 21° of

GLOSSARY.	'The sonne,' he sayde, 'is clomben up on hevene	'The sun,' he said, 'has climb'd the azure height
I know	Fourty degrees and oon, and more i- wis.	Forty and one degrees, and more, I see.
	Madame Pertelote, my worldes blis,	Ab, Madame Pertilote, my pride and glee,
	Herkneth these blisful briddes how they synge,	Hark to the birds how merrily they sing,
	And seth the fresche floures how they springe ;	And see the fair fresh flowers how they spring,
	Ful is myn hert of revel and solaas.'	My heart is fill'd with joy and dalliance !'
	But sodeinly him fel a sorweful caas ; For evere the latter ende of joye is wo.	—But suddenly befell a sorry chance For ever the latter end of joy is woe.
(Ger. Gott)	Got wot that worldly joye is soone ago ;	God knows that earthly pleasure soon doth go.

Now let every wise man hearken : for this story is as true, I undertake to say, as the book of Lancelot du Lake.

	A col-fox, ful of sleigh iniquité, lived (Ger. } That in the grove hadde woned yeres wohnen)	A wicked fox, beyond all telling sly (That had for years dwelt in the grove hard by),
pre-arranged	By heigh ymaginacioun forncast,	By shrewd forethought, and by his skill accurst, hedges	The same nighte thurghout the hegges brast	Right thro the hedge that very night had burst,
	Into the yerd, ther Chauntecleer the faire	Into the yard, where Chanticleer the fair also	Was wont, and eek his wyves, to repaire ;	Was, with his wives, wont daily to repair.
cabbages afternoon	And in a bed of wortes stille he lay, Til it was passed undern ¹ of the day, Waytyng his tyme on Chauntecleer to falle ;	And in a cabbage-bed conceal'd he lay, Till it was past the middle of the day, Waiting his time on Chanticleer to fall ;
in wait, lie	As gladly doon these homicides alle, That in awayte lyggen to mordre men.	As shrewdly as those sly assassins all Who calmly lie in wait to murder men.
	O false mordre lurkyng in thy den !	O hideous murderer, lurking in thy den !
	O newe Scariot, newe Genilon ! ² False dissimulour, O Greek Sinon,	O new Iscariot, new Genilon ! Falsest dissembler, second Greek Sinon,
	That broughtest Troye al outrely to sorwe !	Who broughtest Troy-town utterly to sorrow !—
	O Chauntecleer, accursed be that morwe,	O Chanticleer, accursed be that morrow flow	That thou into that yerd floughe fro the bemes !	When for the yard thou daredst quit thy beam !

¹ Undern, the second quarter of the day, our 'forenoon,' began at nine o'clock, A.M., and ended at twelve.

² Sir Genilon, Gwennion, or Gwines, one of Charlemagne's officers, whose treachery caused the defeat of Roncevaux, the death of Roland, &c., came to be regarded as the personification of perfidy. — Vide Ellis's Specimens, The Romance of Sir Otriel.

GLOSSARY.

warned	Thou were ful wel iwarned by thy dremes, That thilke day was perilous to the.	Thou hadst a certain warning in thy dream That such a day were perilous to thee !
foreknows	But what that God forwot mot needes be.	However, what God wills, shall surely be.
	I wol not han to do of such mateere ;	I will not deal with such a matter here—
	My tale is of a cok, as ye schul heere, That took his counseil of his wyf with sorwe,	My tale is of a cock, as you shall hear, That foolishly took counsel of his wife sorrow	To walken in the yerd upon the morwe, That he hadde met the drem, that I of tolde.	To range the yard, and risk his precious life The day he dreamt his dream as I have told.
told of	Wommennes counseils ben ful ofte colde ; Wommannes counseil broughte us first to woo,	A woman's counsel is too often cold : And woman's counsel brought us first to woe comfortable	And made Adam fro paradys to go, Ther as he was ful merye, and wel at ese.	—Forced Adam out of Paradise to go Where he enjoyed himself and lived in ease.
know, abbr. } he wot }	But for I not, to whom it mighte displese, If I counseil of wommen wolde blame.	But, as I know not whom I might displease If I on woman's counselling cast blame, jest	Passe over, for I sayde it in my game.	Pass by my words—I said it but in game !
read	Red auctours, wher thay trete of such mateere, And what thay sayn of wommen ye may heere. These been the cokkes words, and not myne ;	Read authors on these matters, and you'll find All the nice things they say of womankind. These are the cock's words only, and not mine :
know	I can noon harme of no womman divine.	I know no harm in woman, all-divine !
	Faire in the sond, to bathe hire merily, Lith Pertelote, and alle hire sustres by,	Snug in the sand, to batlie her merrily Crouch'd Pertilote, with all her sisters by,
Against	Agayn the sonne ; and Chauntecleer so free Sang merier than the mermayde in the see ; ¹	Out in the sun : and Chanticleer so free Sang sweetlier than the mermaid in the sea !
	And so byfel that as he caste his eye,	And so befell that as he cast his eye herbs aware	Among the wortes on a boterflye, He was war of this fox that lay ful lowe. No thing ne liste him thanne for to crowe,	Over the cabbages, on a butterfly, He chanced to see this fox that skulk'd below. No longer had he any wish to crow !

¹ The mermaids were said to sing so ravishingly that Ulysses was forced to lash himself to the mast in order to listen to them without springing overboard for joy.

GLOSSARY.	But cryde anon, 'cock, cock,' and up he sterte, As man that was affrayed in his herte. For naturelly a beest desireth flee Fro his contrarie, if he may it see,	But cried out 'Cock, cock!' and did backward start Like one affrighted to his very heart. For animals by nature try to flee From their own opposites, when such they see.
before, seen	Though he never erst hadde seyn it with his eye. This Chauntecleer, whan he gan him espye, He wolde han fled, but that the fox anon Saide, 'Gentil sire, alas! wher wol ye goon? Be ye affrayd of me that am youre freend? Now certes, I were worse than a feend, If I to yow wolde harm or vileynye. I am nought come youre counsail for tespye.	Though on it ne'er before they have set eye. Now Chanticleer when he the thing did spy, He would have fled, but that the fox 'gan say 'Alas, dear sir! why will you go away! Are you afraid of me who am your friend? Why, truly, I were worse than any fiend If I to you meant harm or villany! I come not to disturb your privacy.
to spy	But trewely the cause of my comynge	I swear, my motive for thus entering hearken	Was only for to herkne how that ye singe. For trewely ye have als merye a stevere,	Was only just to hear how you can sing! Really, you have as beautiful a voice cry	As eny aungel hath, ¹ that is in hevene; Therwith ye han in musik morefelynge,	As any angel 'mid her skyey joys: More feeling too for music is in you Boethius	Than hadde Boece, or eny that can synge. My lord youre fader (God his soule blesse)	Than Boëce hath—or any one I know. My lord your father—heaven rest his soul!
kindness	And eek youre moder of hire gentillesse	And your dear mother (whom I must extol), been	Han in myn hous ibeen, to my gret ese; And certes, sire, ful fayn wolde I yow plesse. But for men speke of syngyng, I wol saye,	Have been my guests—to my sincere delight! And I would please you too, sir, if I might. But, talking about singing, I must say enjoy the use of	} So mot I broukewel myn eyen twaye, Save you, I herde nevere man so synge, As dede youre fader in the morwenynge.	(Though I should lose my eyes for it to-day) Except your own I never heard such singing As your late father's, thro' the morning ringing.
certainly	Certes it was of herte al that he song.	'Twas from his heart—one felt—that power of song, voice	And for to make his vois the more strong,	And then to make his vocal organs strong take such pains	} He wolde so payne him, that with bothe his eyen He moste wynke, so lowde he wolde crien,	He would make such an effort, that each eye He had to wink, so shrilly would he cry,

¹ A flatterer will go to any lengths of absurdity which his prey will suffer—can anything be more ludicrous than this simile?

GLOSSARY.	And stonden on his typtoon therewithal, And strecche forth his nekke long and smal.	And stand upon his tiptoes therewithal, And stretch out far his neck, so long and small.
also, discretion	} And eek he was of such discrecioun,	So thorough was his knowledge of his art was not	That ther nas no man in no regioun	That there was no one round, in any part, surpass	That him in song or wisdom mighte passe. I have wel rad in daun Burnel the Asse ¹	Who him, in song and wisdom, could surpass. I've read in th' author of Burnell the Ass .
	Among his vers, how that there was a cok,	Among his poems, how there was a cock because gave	} For that a prestes sone yaf him a knok	Who, when a priest's son fetch'd him a sharp knock fastidious	Upon his leg, whil he was yong and nyce, He made him for to lese his benefice.	Upon his leg, while he was young and 'nice,' Made him for vengeance lose his benefice!—
	But certeyn ther nis no comparisoun	But truly there is no comparison cunning	Bitwix the wisdom and discrecioun Of youre fader, and of his subtilté.	Between that cock and the discretiön Of your late father—ah, how sharp was he!
	Now syngeth, sire, for seinte Charité,	Now, sing, sir—for the sake of charity—
	Let se, konne ye youre fader countrefete ?	Let's see, can you your father counterfeit ?
	This Chauntecleer his wynges gan to bete,	This Chanticleer began his wings to beat could, treason	As man that couthe his tresoun nought espye,	Like men who cannot fathom treachery :
perceive	So was he ravyssht with his flaterie.	He was so ravish'd at the flattery.

Alas ! lordlings, many a flatterer and parasite is in your houses, who pleases you far more than those who tell you the truth !

	This Chauntecleer stood heighe upon his toos,	This Chanticleer stood high upon his toes
	Strecching his nekke, and held his eyghen cloos,	Stretching his neck, and shut his eyelids close,
	And gan to crowe lowde for the noones ;	And 'gan to crow full loudly, for the nonce.
	And daun Russel the fox sterte up at oones,	And my lord Russell Fox starts up at once throat caught	} And by the garget hente Chauntecleer,	And by the throat he catches Chanticleer bore	And on his bak toward the woode him beer.	And on his back towards the wood doth bear!—
purred	For yit was ther no man that hadde him sewed.	For, as it chanced, he had been seen by none.

¹ The reference is to the Latin satirical poem of Nigellus de Wireker, monk and precentor of Canterbury, written about the year 1190, and entitled Burnellus sive Speculum Stultorum.

GLOSSARY.

may'st	O destiny, that maist not ben es-	O Destiny! whom nobody can shun!
escaped	chewed!
saw	Allas, that Chauntecleer fleigh fro the bemes!	Alas, that Chanticleer did quit the beams!
oared	Allas, his wif ne roughte nought of dremes!	Alas, his wife, who had no faith in dreams!
	And on a Friday fel al this meschaunce.	On Friday, too, to fall in such a plight!
	O Venus, that art goddesse of pleasure,	Thou, Venus, that art goddess of delight,
Since	Syn that thy servant was this Chauntecleer,	Seeing a slave of thine was Chanticleer,
	And in thy service dide al his poweer,	Who did his mightiest in thy service dear, delight	More for delit, than world to multiplie,	(More for delight than increase of the race)
wouldst thou	Why woldestow suffre him on thy day to dye? ¹	Why let him perish on thy day of days?

So let us mourn for Chanticleer as for a king's death.

	Certes such cry ne lamentacioun	Sure, such a cry and lamentation
	Was nevere of ladies maad, whan Ilioun	Was never by ladies made—when Ilion drawn	Was womne, and Pirrus with his streite swerd,	Was won, and Pyrrhus with his sword appear'd,
	Whan he hadde hent kyng Priam by the berd,	And having caught King Priam by the beard
	And slayn him (as saith us Eneydos), ²	Slew him (according to Æneidos)— close (yard)	As maden alle the hennes in the clos,	As all the hens set up within the close
	Whan they hadde seyn of Chauntecleer the sighte.	On seeing Chanticleer's most mournful fall.
	But soveraignly dame Pertelote schrighte,	But Pertilote she shriek'd above them all shrieked	Ful lowder than dide Hasdrubales wyf; ³	Much louder than did Hasdrubal's stern wife,
	Whan that hire housbonde hadde lost his lyf,	Who, when her noble husband lost his life, burnt	And that the Romayns hadde i-brent Cartage,	And when the Romans had destroyed Carthage,
	Sche was so ful of torment and of rage,	Was stung with so despairing pain and rage,
	That wilfully into the fyr sche sterte,	That of her own will in the fire she darted,
	And brende herselven with a stedefast herte.	And burned herself to death, the constant-hearted.
ye cried	O woful hennes, right so criden ye,	Poor hens! so loud your woful cries did come, burned	As, whan that Nero brente the cité	Ev'n as, when Nero set the flames to Rome, ¹ Friday was sacred to Venus.

² Meaning Virgil in his Æneidos, lib. ii. 50, &c.

³ For the story of 'Hasdrubal's wife' see Livy, xlix. and l., and Eutropius.

GLOSSARY.	Of Rome, criden senatoures wyves,	The senators' wives lamented loud and cried, their	For that here housbondes losten alle here lyves;	Because their noble consorts all had died;
gult	Withouten gult this Nero hath hem slayn.	Guiltless by Nero's order were they slain.—
	Now wol I torne to my tale agayn.	Now will I turn unto my tale again simple	This sely wydwe, and eek hire dough-tres tuo,	The simple widow, and her daughters two,
	Herden these hennas crie and maken wo,	Hearing the hens cry out and make ado, at once	And out at dores sterten they anon,	Out at the door all three ran out anon
	And seyen the fox toward the grove goon,	And saw the fox who toward the wood had gone,
	And bar upon his bak the cok away;	And on his back did bear the cock away.
	They criden, 'Out! harrow and weyl-away!	Then cried they all, 'Harro, and well away.
	Ha, ha, the fox!' and after him thay ran,	Ho! ho! the fox!' and after him they ran,
	And eek with staves many another man;	And eek with staves came many another man.
	Ran Colle ¹ our dogge, and Talbot, and Garland,	Ran Colle our dog, and Talbot, and Garland, country wench	And Malkyn ² with a distaf in hire hond;	And Malkin, with the distaff in her hand;
	Ran cow and calf, and eek the verray hogges	Ran cow and calf, and e'en the very hogs, afraid	So were they fered for berkyng of the dogges	So scared were they by barking of the dogs
	And schowtyng of the men and wym-men eke,	And shouting of the men and women there—
	Thay ronne so hem thoughte here herte breke.	They ran as though their hearts would break for fear:
	Thay yelleden as feendes doon in helle;	They yelled as all the devils do in hell;
ducks	The dokes criden as men wolde hem quelle;	The ducks squeal'd as at point of death—pell-mell, kill	The gees for fere flownen over the trees;	The geese for fear flew off across the trees;
	Out of the hyves cam the swarm of bees;	Out of the hive buzz'd swarms of frightened bees,
	So hideous was the noyse, a benedicite !	So hideous was the noise— Benedicite !
that	Certes he Jakke Straw, ³ and his meyné,	Jack Straw himself and all his company
	Ne maden nevere schoutes half so schrille,	Did never utter shouts one half as shrill
	Whan that thay wolden eny Flemyng kille,	For any Flemish foe they wished to kill
	As thilke day was maad upon the fox.	As that one day was made about the fox.

¹ Colley.² Malkin, or Mawkin, the common name of a girl, afterwards degraded: may have been derived from 'mädchen.'³ The insurrection of Jack Straw is here alluded to. 'Fleming' may refer to John of Gaunt.

GLOSSARY.	Of bras thay broughten beemes, and of box,	They brought out horns of brass, and horns of box, trumpeted	Of horn, of boon, in whiche thay blewe and powpede	Of horn, of bone—in which they blew and poop'd, whooped	And therewithal thay schrykede and thay howpede ; ¹	And with it all they shrieked, and howled and whooped,
	It semede as that hevene schulde falle.	It seemed as tho' the very sky would fall.
	Now, goode men, I praye yow herkeneth alle ;	And now, good people, pray you listen all :
	Lo, how fortune torneth sodeinly The hope and pride eek of hire enemy !	How fickle Fortune turneth suddenly The hope and triumph of her enemy !
	This cok that lay upon the foxes bak, In al his drede, unto the fox he spak, And saide, 'Sire, if that I were as ye,	This cock that lay upon the fox's back, Spite of his terror, to the fox he spake, And said, 'Good sir, if I were only you, should	Yet schulde I sayn (as wis God helpe me),	Now would I laugh and halloo to the crew, again	Turneth ayein, ye proude cherles alle !	Turn back ! go to, you churls and women all !
	A verray pestilens upon yow falle ! Now am I come unto this woodes syde,	A very murrain on your folly fall Now I have got as far as this wood's side, in spite of you	Maugre youre heed, the cok schal heer abyde ;	In spite of you the cock shall here abide !
at once	I wol him ete in faith, and that anon.'	For I will eat him, and that quickly too !'
	The fox answerde, 'In faith, it schal be doon.'	The fox cried out, 'I' faith, and so I'll do !'
	And as he spak that word, al sodeinly This cok brak from his mouth de- lyverly,	And suddenly while uttering the word, Out of his jaws darted the nimble bird, nimbly high, flew	And heigh upon a tree he fleigh anon.	And flew for safety up into a tree.
	And whan the fox seigh that he was i-goon,	And when the fox perceived that he was free,
	'Allas !' quod he, 'O Chauntecleer, allas !	'Alas,' he said, 'O Chanticleer, alas !
	I have to yow,' quod he, 'y-don trespas,	I am afraid,' quoth he, 'my conduct was
	In-as-moche as I makede yow aferd, Whan I yow hente, and broughte out of the yerd ;	Offensive, since I frightened you I see, By catching you, to bring you here with me.
wicked	But, sire, I dede it in no wikke en- tente ;	But, sir, I did so with no ill intent :
	Com down, and I schal telle yow what I mente.	Come down, and I will tell you what I meant.
	I schal seye soth to yow, God help me so.'	I shall speak truth, so help me'—thus and thus.
curse	'Nay than,' quod he, 'I schrewe us bothe tuo,	'Nay then' (quoth he) 'beshrew the two of us, ¹ A far-reaching sound, hence 'whoop !' in hide-and-seek, and whooping cough.

GLOSSARY.	And first I schrewe myself, bothe blood and boones,	And first besrewe myself, both blood and bones, beguile	If thou bigile me any ofter than oones.	If thou dost cheat me oftener than once!
	Thou schalt no more, thurgh thy flaterye,	Nay, not again shalt thou with flattery
Make (Fr. faire)	} Do me to synge and wynke with myn eye	Tempt me to sing, and sing, and wink my eye.
	For he that wynketh, whan he scholde see,	For he that winketh when he ought to see, thrive	Al wilfully, God let him never the!' 'Nay,' quod the fox, 'but God yive him meschaunce,	God let him never thrive—a fool is he. 'Nay' (cried the fox), 'God give the fool mischance imprudent	That is so undiscret of governaunce, That jangleth whan he scholde holde his pees.'	Who is so lacking in self-governance He chatters when he ought to hold his tongue.'
reckless	Lo, such it is for to be reccheles,	Lo, here we see the folly and the wrong negligent	And neegligent, and truste on flaterie.	Of weak reliance on a flattering lip.
folly	But ye that holden this tale a folye, As of a fox, or of a cok and hen,	But ye who hold this tale an idle quip Of a mere fox, or a mere cock and hen,
	Taketh the moralité therof, goode men.	Take up the moral of it, prudent men!

HERE ENDS THE 'NUN'S PRIEST'S TALE.'

NOTES BY THE WAY.

[The admirable tale of Chanticleer and his successful manner of outwitting Reynard was probably a floating popular fabliau, like others used by Chaucer to sharpen his own tools of satire and delicious humour upon. Tyrwhitt supposes he derived it from the fifty-first fable in the collection translated by Marie, authoress of The Laias, from the Anglo-Saxon of King Alfred. Mr. Wright believes he took it from the fifth chapter of the Roman de Renart, entitled 'Si comme Renart Prist Chanticleer le Coc.' The handling of the story is, however, unmistakably Chaucer's. The amusing skill with which he invests the farmyard denizens with a human interest might be called Landseerian, were not Landseer so tardy a successor of Chaucer—at any rate, the gift in both artists is one, under different forms. The idea of Chanticleer singing harmoniously a popular song ('My lief is faren on londe' was probably as familiar as 'Good-bye, Sweet-heart') is an instance very comic in itself, but founded on the knowledge that cocks do greatly differ in voice, some possessing definite musical notes. And may not the description of fair Partlet's very thorough but somewhat confused system of domestic medicine, point to possible experience of woman's immortal penchant for 'dosing' and man's mortal dread of 'remedies?']

One of the subtlest touches in this story is the fact that Chanticleer in the very midst of his terror was struck by the ludicrous side of the position of himself and his pursuers. In great sorrow, or in imminent peril, how often does the mind fasten on trifles or recoil back upon inverted points of view in a degree scarcely credible! Chaucer's profound comprehension of human nature is one of his chiefest charms.]

THE MAN OF LAW'S TALE.

OUR Host saw that the time was getting on, for the shade of every tree was the same in length as the erect trunk.

GLOSSARY.	fore-word (warning)	'Sir Man of Lawe,' quod he, 'so have ye blisse,	'Sir Man of Law,' (quoth he) 'so have ye bliss,
		Telle us a tale anon, as forward is.'	Tell us a story, as the promise is.'
covenant	roughly	'Hoste,' quod he, ' de par Dieux I assente	'Host,' answered he, ' de par dieux I assent.
		To breke forward is nat myn entent. Byheste is dette. . . .	To break a promise is not my intent. A promise is a debt. . . .
them	them	. . . But natheles certayn I can right now non other tale seyn, That Chaucer, ¹ thay he can but lewedly	. . . But still, I fear, I cannot tell you any story here, But Chaucer (though but little skill has he
		On metres and on rymyng certeynly Hath seyð hem in such Englisch as he can,	In metre and in rhyming, certainly,) Has told it, in such language as he can,
one	one	Of olde tymes as knoweth many a man.	A long time since, as knoweth many a man.
		And yif he have nought sayd hem, levee brother,	And if he has not told it, my dear brother,
		In o bok, he hath seyð hem in another.'	In one book, he has told it in another.'
		And with that word, he with a sobre cheere	So saying, with a very sober air,
		Bigan his tale, as ye schal after heere.	Began his tale, as I shall let you hear.

PART I.

ONCE on a time there dwelt in Syria a company of rich chapmen or traders, steady and honest, who dealt far and wide in spicery, cloths of gold, and rich-hued satins. Their goods were so reasonable in price, and so novel in kind, that everybody desired to chaffer with them.²

¹ These personal remarks, ostensibly made in Chaucer's presence incog. bear out the old practice of introducing portraits in every branch of art. Mediæval painters constantly introduced their own portraits—it was a primitive form of advertisement.

² At a time when such establishments as drapers did not exist, and newspapers and the post-office were unknown, the only means of acquiring foreign goods was through companies of 'merchants' and travelling chapmen (sometimes a form of

It happened that the master-traders of the company went to visit Rome, where they sojourned for some time; and where the good fame of the emperor's daughter, Constance, perpetually came to their ears.

This was the common voice throughout Rome: 'Our emperor¹ (God bless him!) hath a daughter, that since the world began hath never had her like for beauty or for goodness. Pray God sustain her in honour, and would she were the queen of all Europe!'

GLOSSARY.

high greenness (inma- turity)	In hir is hey beautee, with-out pryde,	In her is noble beauty without pride,
	Yowthe, with-oute grenchede or folye;	Youth without foolishness and levity;
humility	To alle hir werkes vertu is hir gyde,	In all her doings virtue is her guide,
	Humblese hath slayn in hir al	Her humble spirit knows not tyrannye.	tyranny:
	She is mirour ² of alle curteisye;	She is the mirror of all courtesy:
very	Hir herte is verray chambre of holy- nesse,	Her heart the shrine of every holy thing;
liberality	Hir hand, ministre of fredom for almesse.	Her hand free minister in almsgiving.

The common voice spoke truth, as God is true;³ and the merchants, having seen this fairest maiden, turned their ships homeward, and returned to Syria.

These traders stood high in the esteem of their Sultan, for when they returned from any strange land, he would receive them and question them, eager for tidings of the various kingdoms they had visited, and of such wonders as they might have seen or learned.

Among other things the traders told the Sultan of Constance, her marvellous beauty and goodness, so earnestly that the Sultan conceived a rooted passion to see and to possess her.

Feradventure	Paraunture in thilke large book Which that men clepe the heuen, ⁴ ywritten was With sterres, whan that he his birthe took,	It may be that in yonder mighty Book Which men do call the heavens, there written was With stars—what time his fleshly birth he took—have	That he for loue shulde han his deth, allas! For in the sterres, clerer than is glas,	That he for love should meet his death, alas! For in the stars above, more clear than glass, could	Is writen, god wot, who so coude it rede,	Is written, God wot, whoso can spell it out, death never fear!	The deth of euery man, withouten drede. ⁵	The fate of every man, beyond a doubt.

pedlar), who, of course, were retailers of news and gossip as well as other things, and often were very well-to-do and much respected. The position of a merchant may be gathered from the order of precedence observed in John Russell's Boke of Nurture, in which the merchant sat below the knight, but above a 'gentilman.'

¹ Gower calls this emperor Tiberius Constantine, who was Emperor (not of Rome, but) of the East, A.D. 578, and was succeeded, as in the story, by Maurice, A.D.

582. His capital was Constantinople, whither merchants from Syria could easily repair; but the greater fame of Rome caused the substitution of the western for the eastern capital. [Skeat.]

² All the culture of her time was reflected in her as in a mirror.

³ This expression recalls the proverb, Vox populi, vox Dei.

⁴ V and n must be understood to be convertible letters.

⁵ Astrology, or the science of prophesying

The Sultan assembled his privy council, and, addressing them, declared his intent to make Constance his wife; for unless he succeeded in winning her he was but a dead man; and he charged them to shape some remedy for his life.

Divers men said divers things. They argued, cast up and down the difficulties; many a subtle reason was brought forward, magic and sorcery were hinted at, but in the end they saw that there could be but one remedy—marriage.

The chief obstacle was, as they all knew, that no Christian prince would be likely to wed his child under the sweet law of Allah's prophet, the gulf between the two nations in laws and habits was so great.

GLOSSARY.

lose	And he answerde, ' rather than I lese	But he made answer, ' Rather than to lose christened	Custance, I wol be cristned douteless ; I mot ben hires, I may non other cheese. I prey yow holde youre arguments in pees ;	Constance, I will be Christian like my wife : I must be hers, none other could I choose. I pray you cease the argument and strife, peace
save	Saueth my lyf, and beth nought recchelees	Be not indifferent to save my life reckless	To gotten hir that hath my lyf in cure ; For in this wo I may not longe en- dure.'	In winning her who holds it in her hand ; For longer can I scarce my wo with- stand.'
dilating	What nedeth gretter dilatacioun ? I seye, by tretys and embassadrye, And by the popes mediacioun, And al the chirche, and al the chival- rye, That, in destruccioun of Maumettrye, And in encrees of cristes lawe dere,	What needeth further explanatioun ? I say, by treaties and by embassy, And by the Pope's own mediatioun, And all the Church, and all the chivalry, For the destruction of Mahometry, And for the furtherance of Christ's law dear increase agreed	They ben accorded, so as ye shal here.	All were at one accord : as ye shall hear.

The conditions of the treaty between the nations were that the Sultan, and his baronage and lieges, should receive holy baptism, and Constance, with a certain sum of dowry, should become his wife.

Now would some men give me time, I would tell all the cost and labour spent by the Roman emperor in shaping her outfitting for this ill-assorted marriage. Many bishops, lords, ladies, knights of renown, and other folk, were commanded to attend her to Syria, and the whole city joined in praying Christ that His blessing might rest on this marriage, and on the journey thither.

When the woeful, fatal day came for her departure to her heathen home, pale Constance, overcome with sorrow, arose and robed herself to fare forth, for well she knew there was no help for it.

by the stars, was a popular study, and we find many allusions to it in Chaucer. He means here, the fate of every man is reflected in advance and legible upon the planets, as in a mirror—to whoso is clever enough to decipher it.

GLOSSARY.	The day is comen of hir departing, I sey, the woful day fatal is come, ¹ That ther may be no lenger taryng,	The day arriveth, for her journeyngs, I say, the grievous, fatal day is come, When there may be no longer tarry- ing:
prepared themselves }	But forthward they hem dressen, alle and some; Custance, that was with sorwe al ouercome, Ful pale arist, and dresseth hir to wende; For wel she seeth ther is non other ende.	Now they are pressing forward, all and some. Constance, who was with sorrow overcome, Full pale arose, and brac'd herself to wend. For well she knew there was no other end.
nation	Allas! what wonder is it though she wepte, That shal be sent to strange nacioun	Alas! what wonder is it that she wept? Sent to a strange land and a cloudy fate under	Fro frendes, that so tendrely hir kepte, And to be bounden vnder subieccioun Of oon, she knoweth not his condi- cioun. Housbondes ben alle goode, and han ben yore, That knowen wyues, I dar say yow no more.	From friends who all her tender life have kept, And bound in long subjection to a mate Unseen, unknown, save that his lot is great: Well—husbands are all good—have been of yore— Perhaps: their wives know best: I say no more.
greatest joy	'Fader,' she sayde, 'thy wrecched child Custance, Thy yonge doughter, fostred vp so softe,	'Father,' she said, 'Constance, thy mournful child, Thy little daughter foster'd up so soft—excepting	And ye, my mooder, my souerayn plesance Ouer alle thing, out-taken crist on lofte, Custance, your child, hir recomandeth ofte Vn-to your grace, for I shal to Surrye, Ne shal I neuer seen yow more with ye.	And you my mother, to me most dear and mild Above all others (saving Christ aloft)— Constance your child herself com- mendeth oft Unto your grace. To Syria go I Haply to see you never more with eye.
go	Allas! vn-to the Barbre nacioun I moste gon, sin than it is your wille;	'Alas, unto the barbarous nation I must fare forth, since it is now your will;
died	But crist, that starf for our sauacioun, So yene me grace, his hestes to fulfille;	But Christ Who died for our salvation So give me grace His mission to fulfil,
no matter if I die }	I, wrecche womman, no fors though I spille.	I, wretched woman, dead or living still!

¹ These strong expressions applied to a marriage which was not wrong, and might lead to much good, are attributable to the violence of religious prejudice first, and secondly to the reasonable belief that marriage between persons having nothing in common in any way is not likely to be very happy.

Moreover, girls then, as now on the Continent, had to marry as they were bidden, —often husbands they had never seen, and the wrench from home and all past associations would be tremendously greater 500 years ago than in these days. Hinc illa lacrymæ—Constance's.

GLOSSARY.	Wommen are born to thraldom and penance,	Women are born to pain and slavery, government	And to ben vnder mannes gouernance. ¹	And to be under man's supremacy.'

Not at Troy when Pyrrhus broke the wall, not when Theseus burned the City of Thebes, nor at Rome for the harm wrought through thrice vanquished Hannibal, was ever such weeping as for Constance's departing; but go she must, whether she weep or sing.

Was there no prophet in the town? Was there no philosopher to counsel the safest hour when this might be? Imprudent emperor! The fit precautions were not taken before this inauspicious act.

on board	To shippe is brought this woful faire mayde Solempnely with eury circumstance.	Aboard they bring this fair and mournful maid, With every fit and solemn circumstance :
	'Now Iesu crist be with yow alle,' she sayde, Ther nis no more but 'farewel! faire Custance!'	'Now Jesu Christ be with you all,' she said— There is no more but 'farewell, fair Constance!'
takes pains	She peyneth hir to make good countenance, And forth I lete hir sayle in this manere, And turne I wol agayn to my matere.	Striving to wear a cheerful countenance, Thus into Syria I let her sail: And I will turn again unto my tale.

Now the mother of the Sultan, well of vices she! perceived her son's intention to forego the ancient sacrifices,² and summoned her council, who gathered around her to learn what she meant; and being assembled, she sat her down and spoke as follows:—

everyone	'Lordes,' quod she, 'ye knowen euerichon, How that my sone in point is for to lete The holy lawes of oure Alkaron, ³ Yeuen by goddes messenger Makomete. But oon auow to grete god I hete, The lyf shal rather out of my body sterte Than Makometes lawe out of myn herte!	'Lords,' did she cry, 'ye well know, every man, How that my son is now in point to let And quit the holy laws of Alkorañ, Given by God's own prophet Mahomet: But one firm vow before high God I set, The life shall rather from my body part, Than Mahomet's law shall pass from out my heart.
----------	---	---

¹ See note, p. 164.

² The Mohammedan religion does not admit the idea of a sacrifice or atonement; but all false religions were confounded in the popular mind. [Bell.]

³ 'The Koran (Arabic, Al Koran) was translated into Latin in the twelfth century, and to the intercourse which at this period was kept up between the people of Europe and the Arabs, Mr. Hallam attributes the great, though secret, progress of scepticism which may be traced in a continually increasing stream through the literature of the middle ages.' See Hallam, Lit. of the Middle Ages, vol. i.

GLOSSARY.

us betide	What shulde vs tyden of this newe lawe	What shall betide us of this new-made law
	But thraldom to our bodies and penance?	But thraldom to our body and strange pain?
	And afterward in helle to be drawe	And afterward to deepest hell we draw denied, faith	For we reneyed Mahoun ¹ our creance?	For holding of God's prophet in disdain?—
	But, lordes, wol ye maken assurance,	Lords, will you make assurance clear and plain
	As I shal seyn, assenting to my lore,	According to any word and to my lore?
	And I shal make vs sauf for euer-more?'	And I shall make us safe for evermore.'

They swore assent, every man of them, to stand by her, and live and die with her; promised all help in her endeavour, and listened with devotion to the scheme she laid before them.

make believe	'We shul first feyne vs cristendom to take,	'We shall first feign us Christendom to take:
	Cold water shal not greue vs but a lyte; ²	Cold water will not hurt us—not mite—little	And I shal swich a feste and reuel make,	And such a feast and revel I shall make believe, requite	That, as I trowe, I shal the sowdan quyte.	As lulls the Sultan to a blind delight:
	For though his wyf be cristned neuer so whyte,	For though his wife be christened never so white,
	She shal haue nede to wasshe away the rede,	She shall have need to wash away the red,
	Though she a font-ful water with hir lede.'	Though she a fount of water with her led!'
	O sowdanesse, rote of iniquitee,	O Sultaness! root of iniquities!
	Virago, thou Semyram the secounde,	Second Semiramis, virago crown'd!
feminine shape	O serpent vnder femininitee,	O serpent under woman's tender guise,
	Lyk to the serpent ³ depe in helle ybounde,	Like to the Serpent deep in hell ibound!
	O feyned womman, al that may confounde	O thou feigned-woman, all that may confound
	Vertu and Innocence, thurgh thy malice,	Virtue and innocence, through thy malice deep,
	Is bred in thee, as nest of euery vice!	Is bred in thee—nest where all vices sleep!
since that	O Satan, enuious sin thilke day	O Satan, envious ever since the day
	That thou were chased fro our heritage, ⁴	That thou wert chased from out our heritage, knowest thou	Wel knowestow to wommen the olde way!	Well knew'st thou unto woman the old way!

¹ The name was variously spelt, Mahomet, Makomete, Mahound, &c., spelling being largely phonetic.

² To receive baptism: the cold water would not injure them as Mohammedans.

³ This is a very curious allusion: it refers to the old belief that the serpent who tempted Eve appeared to her with a woman's head: and it is not seldom so represented. For the motive of all this vituperation see 'Notes by the Way,' p. 165.

⁴ Luke x. 18; Rev. xii.

GLOSSARY.

Eve	Thou madest Eua bring vs in seruage.	Thou mad'st Eve bring us into ser- vitage;
ruin	Thou wolt fordoon this cristen mariage.	Thou wilt undo this Christian marriage;
	Thy instrument so, weylawey the whyte!	Thine instrument so (wellaway the while!)
Makest thou	Makestow of wommen, whan thou wolt begyle.	Mak'st thou of woman, when thou would'st beguile!

This Sultanees, whom I thus denounce and chide, let privily her council go their way, and rode to the Sultan, whom she told that she would withdraw her opposition to the marriage, and accept Christianity at the priest's hands; for she repented her that she had so long continued an heathen: also begging that she might receive the Christian folk at a great banquet, whereat she would do her utmost to please them. The Sultan, delighted at his mother's words, consented gladly, scarce knowing how to express his pleasure. She kissed her son and left him.

PART II.

THE Christian company arrived at last, and the Sultan and the Sultan's mother received Constance with all honour; nay, the greeting of the Sultanees was as warm as a mother's to her daughter. The assemblage was more royal and splendid than words can say; but beneath all this outward show, this scorpion of a Sultanees was for all her flattering prepared most mortally to sting. Then came the great banquet which the Sultanees had made, and to which went all the Christian folk together; yea, both young and old. Here may men feast, and behold regal magnificence, and more dainties than I can tell; but all too dear they bought it ere they rose!

	O sodeyn wo! that euer art succes- sour	O sudden woe, that ever art arriving
	To worldly blisse, spreyn ^d is ¹ with bitternesse;	On pleasure's heels! blent is with bitterness
The end	Thende of the ioye of our worldly labour;	The end of the joy of all our earthly striving!
Woe, end (Fr. fin)	Wo occupieth the fyn of our glad- nesse.	Pain bringeth up the rear of pleasantness:
security	Herke this conseil for thy sikernesse,	Hearken this warning for thy heed- fulness:
	Vp-on thy glade day haue in thy mynde	Upon thy glad day bear within thy mind unknown	The vnwar wo or harm that comth bihynde.	The unware woe of harm that cometh behind.
	For shortly for to tellen at a word, The sowdan and the cristen euerich- one	For shortly to narrate it in a word, The Sultan, with the Christians every one, stabbed	Ben al tohewe and stiked at the bord,	Are all down-hewed and slaughter'd at the board, ¹ Tyrwhitt.

GLOSSARY.

except	But it were only dame Custance alone. This olde sowdanesse, this cursed crone, Hath with her frendes doon this cursed dede, For she hir-self wolde al the contree lede.	Saving dame Constance who was spared alone. The fierce old Sultanesse, that cursed crone, Hath with her people done this cursed deed; For she herself would all the country lead.
Nor was	Ne ther was Surryen noon that was conuerted	And there was no converted Syrian knew	That of the conseil of the sowdan wot, ¹	Who of the Sultan's counsel was, or wot, was not, escaped	That he nas al tohewe er he asterted.	But was hewn down in flying, man by man;
	And Custance han they take anon, foot-hot, ²	And Constance have they caught away, foot-hot, rudderless	And in a shippe al stereless, god wot, They han hir set, and bidde hir lerne sayle	And in a ship without a steer (God wot) They have her set, and bade her learn to sail
Italy	Out of Surrye agaynward to Itayle.	Away from Syria, back into Itaille.
	A certein tresor that she thider ladde,	A certain treasure that she brought with her victual	And, soth to sayn, vitaille gret plentee	And food (to do them justice) plen- teously have, given	They han hir yeuen, and clothes eek she hadde, And forth she sayleth in the salte see.	They gave to her, clothes had she more- over, And forth she sailleth over the salt sea.
	O my Custance, ful of benignytee, O emperoures yonge doughter dere,	O royal Constance, fill'd with charity, O daughter of a king, so young, so dear, rudder	He that is lord of fortune be thy stere!	May He who ruleth fortune be thy steer!
	She blesseth hir, ³ and with ful pitous voys	She blest herself, with voice most piteous;
cross (Fr. croix)	Vn-to the croys of crist thus seyde she, 'O cleere, o welful auter, holy croys, Reed of the lambes blood full of pitee,	Unto the cross of Christ then thus spake she— 'O dear, O wealthful Altar, holy Cross Red with the Lamb's blood, full of clemency,
	That wesh the world fro the olde iniquitee,	That wash'd the world fro' the old iniquity, from	Me fro the feend, and fro his clawes kepe	From the foul fiend and from his claws me keep,
	That day that I shal drenchen in the depe.	That day when I shall drown within the deep!

¹ Who was of the Sultan's opinions, or knew them.

² This phrase 'hot-foot,' signifying the following up any pursuit instantly or quickly, is still common among the peasantry of Ireland. Tyrwhitt says the French 'haut le pied' has the same signification. Gower uses the expression 'fote-hote.'

³ To bless oneself is making the sign of the cross on the forehead and breast as an

GLOSSARY.

all that is true	Victorious tree, proteccioun of trewe,	Victorious Tree! protection of all Truth,
	That only worthy were for to bere	And Tree that only worthy wert to bear
	The king of heuen with his woundes newe,	The King of Heaven, with his wounds new ruth—
	The whyte lomb, that hurt was with the spere,	(The fair white Lamb that hurt was with a spear,
Sands	Flemer of feendes out of hym and here, ¹	Caster of devils out of him and her)
	On which thy lymes feithfully extenden,	On which Thy limbs do faithfully extend, give to amend	Me keep, and yif me myght my lyf tamenden. ²	Keep me, and give me might my life to mend. ²
floated	Yeres and dayes fleet this creature	For years and days doth float the fair Constance
	Thurghout the see of Grece vn-to the strayte	Throughout the sea of Greece, unto the strait
Morocco, adventure	} Of Marrok, as it was hir auenture;	Of far Morocco, as the ship doth chance;
	On many a sory meel now may she bayte; ³	Full many a sorry supper shall she eat.
	After her deeth ful often may she wayte,	After her death long shall her body wait
	Er that the wilde wawes wole hir dryue	Until the wild waves fitfully may drive
	Vn-to the place, ther she shal arryue.	Her to the shore whereat she shall arrive.

Men may ask,³ why was she not slain? Who saved her at the banquet?—and I answer, who saved Daniel in the horrible cave? God sheweth wondrous miracles for our instruction. Who kept her from drowning in the sea?—Who kept Jonas in the fish's maw till he was spouted up at Nineveh? The same that kept the Hebrew people from drowning when they passed dryshod through the water.

Who bade the four spirits of the tempest hurt her neither waking nor sleeping? How did the victual last through three years and more of her drifting?—Who fed Mary of Egypt⁴ in her cave? Who fed the multitude with five loaves and two fishes? no man but Christ. God sent his foison at her great need.

She dryueth forth in-to our ocean⁵
Thurgh-out our wilde see, til, atte laste,

She driveth on the ocean fierce and fell Across our own wild sea, till at the last act of faith in the atonement of Christ. Tertullian, Cyprian and others allude to the habit as usual before entering upon any new undertaking.

¹ No doubt an allusion to the devils cast out of men and women by Christ.

² To bait, to feed, to stop to feed. We still retain the word in 'baiting' horses and the 'bait' of fishes.

³ Here follow some of Chaucer's characteristic and curious objections, comments, critical explanations of the improbabilities of his own story as they occurred to his business-like mind. He had probably traced her course on the sea with map and finger, and realised all the details of such a situation.

⁴ Mary of Egypt fled from an evil life to the desert, where she was miraculously sustained during forty-seven years.

⁵ The North Sea.

GLOSSARY.

give a name to	Vnder an hold that nempnen I ne can,	Under a wood (the name I cannot tell)
	Fer in Northumberlond the wave hir caste,	Far in Northumberland, the wave her cast :
stuck	And in the sond hir ship stiked so faste,	And in the sand the ship did cleave so fast
	That thennes wolde it noght of al a tyde,	That thence it could not stir in any tide.
	The wille of crist was that she shulde abyde.	The will of Christ was that she should abide.
	The constable of the castle doun is fare	The Constable of the castle down doth fare
	To seen this wrak, and al the ship he soughte,	To see this wreck, and through the ship he sought,
	And fond this wery womman ful of care ;	And found this weary woman full of care ;
	He fond also the tresor that she broughte.	He likewise found the treasure that she brought :
	In hir langage mercy she bisoughte	And in her language mercy she be- sought release	The lyf out of hir body for to twinne,	That from her body they the life should take, deliver	Hiir to deliuere of wo that she was inne.	Rather than in her suffering her for- sake.

The Constable took pity on her, and brought her to his own house, where she waited on Hermegild, his wife, with so much diligence and tenderness that she won everybody's love. But who and what she was she would tell no man.

The Constable and his wife were pagans, like all the people in that land.

No Christian men dared assemble there, for fear of the pagans who conquered all the northern part by land and sea. To Wales had fled the Christianity of the older Britons dwelling in the island. But Hermegild loved Constance as her life ; and Constance dwelt there so long that, through her many orisons and many tears, Jesus of His grace brought Dame Hermegild to a knowledge of His truth.

were not, abbr. ne were	} But yet nere cristen Britons so exiled	Yet were not Christian Britons so exil'd,
	That ther nere somme that in hir priuitee	But some few still remain'd who privily in private	Honoured crist, and hethen folk bigiled ;	Lov'd Christ, while they the heathen folk beguil'd.
deceived such	And neigh the castel swiche ther dwelten three.	Of such, there dwelt beside the castle three :
	That oon of hem was blynd, and myghte not see	And one of them was blind, and could not see those eyes	But it were with thilke y'en of his mynde,	Save with the sharpen'd vision of the mind
	With whiche men seen, whan that they ben blynde.	With which men ofttimes see when they are blind.

Bright was the sun one day when Constance, with the Constable and his wife, wandered down to the sea-shore, and they met this said blind man, crooked and old, with eyes fast shut. 'In the name of Christ, dame Hermegild,' cried the old Briton, 'give me my sight again.' But this lady was affrighted, lest her husband, who knew not of her change of heart, should slay her for her love of Christ. Till Constance made her bold, and bade her work the miracle permitted her as daughter of Holy Church.

The Constable was abashed at what he saw, and asked them what it meant.

Then Constance declared her faith, in such wise, that ere it was eve the Constable himself believed on the Truth.

The Constable was not lord of the place. He defended it under Alla,¹ king of Northumberland, who was a wise man, and of great might against the Scots.

Now Satan, ever waiting to beguile us, saw Constance's perfection, and cast about how he might requite her for it. Therefore he raised up mischief in the person of a young knight who loved Constance, but whom she steadfastly withstood. In vain he wooed her; then, for despite, he sought to bring her to a shameful death. Thus he worked: he waited till the Constable was absent, and privily he crept by night to Hermegild's chamber.²

GLOSSARY.

tired out	Wery, for-waked in her orisouns, Slepeth Custance, and Hermengild also.	Weary with long-protracted orison Slept Constance, and slept Hermegild also:
	This knyght, thurgh Sathanas temptaciouns,	This knight, by Satan's foul temptation gone	Al softly is to the bed ygo,	All softly to the quiet bed doth go, cut	And kitte the throte of Hermengild atwo, And leyde the blody knyf by dame Custance,	And cut the throat of Hermegild in two, And laid the bloody knife by dame Constance:
where	And wente his wey, ther god yeue meschaunce!	And went his way—God bring him to mischance!

Soon after the Constable came home, and Alla the king with him. When they saw that Hermegild was slain, the Constable's grief was very great; and in the bed the bloody knife he found beside Constance. Alas! what could she say? for very woe her wits were gone.

Then they told Alla the story of Constance, how she was found in the ship; and the king's heart was touched with pity for so goodly a creature fallen in so great trouble.

	For as the lomb toward his deth is brought, So stant this Innocent before the king;	For as the lamb toward his death is brought, So stood this innocent before the king:
	This false knyght that hath this tresoun wrought	The miscreant knight, who hath the treason wrought, beareth witness	} Berth hir on hond that she hath doon this thing.	Brings evidence that she hath done this thing.
mourning	But natheles, ther was gret moorning	Nathless there was no little mur- muring

¹ Alla, i.e., Ælla, king of Northumberland, A.D. 560-588: the same whose name Pope Gregory turned by a pun into Alleluia, according to the celebrated story.

² The manners of old times are traceable in this proof that Constance shared a chamber with the Constable and his wife. Also the facility of entry in the ill-built dormitories or 'bowers' within the courtyard is very clear.

GLOSSARY.	Among the peple, and seyn, they can not gesse	Among the folk : who say they cannot guess
	That she hath doon so gret a wikked- nesse.	That she hath done so great a wicked ness !

Had they not all seen her, ever virtuous, and loving Hermegild as her own-self ? To this every one in the house bore witness, save he who slew Hermegild.
The shrewd king caught suspicion of this witness, and resolved to probe deeply the case.

	Allas ! Custance ! thou hast no champioun	Alas, Constance, thou hast no cham- pion,
	Ne fyghte canstow nought, ¹ so weyla- wey !	Nor canst thou fight thyself : so wellaway !
	But he, that starf for our redempcioun And bond Sathan ² (and yit lyth ther he lay)	But He who died for our redemption And bound the Fiend (who yet lieth where he lay),
	So be thy strong champioun this day !	So be thy mighty Champion to-day !
make known	For, but if crist open miracle kythe,	For if no miracle be shewn in thee speedily	Withouten gilt thou shalt be slayn as swythe.	Guiltless thou shalt be alain, and speedily.

Fervently did Constance pray for help from heaven.

	Haue ye not seyn som tyme a pale face,	Have ye not seen sometimes a pallid face
	Among a prees, of him that hath be lad	Among a crowd, of one who hath been led got pardon	Toward his deth, wher as him gat no grace,	Toward his death, wherast he getteth no grace,
	And swich a colour in his face hath had,	And such a colour hath his visage fed
bestead	Men myghte knowe his face, that was bistad,	That men might know him who was so bestead,
	Amonges alle the faces in that route :	Yea, amongst all the faces in the rout ?—
	So stant Custance, and looketh hir aboute.	So Constance stood, and cast her eyes about.
	O queenes, ³ lyuinge in prosperitee, Duchesses, and ladyes euerichone,	O queens that dwell in all prosperity ! O duchesses, and ladies every one !
pity (ruth)	Haueth som rewthe on hir aduersitee ; An emperoures doughter stant allone ;	Be sorry for her dire adversity : For see, an Emperor's daughter stands alone :
no one	She hath no wight to whom to make hir mone.	She hath no friend to whom to make her moan.
	O blood roial ! that stondest in this drede,	O blood-royal ! that perill'd art indee danger	Fer ben thy frendes at thy gretenede !	Far all thy friends be, in thy greatest need.

¹ Judgment by battle was common. It was a way of trusting to Heaven's interposition. Scott describes such a case in Travhoe.

² In the apocryphal Gospel of Nicodemus Christ descends into hell and (according to some versions) binds Satan with chains. See Piers Plowman, B. xviii. 401. [Skeat.]

³ This verse is a curious illustration of the old conservative feeling (decried as snobbish in these days of republican tendency) of the value and dignity of rank. The appeal to the nobly-born on account of Constance's social position is touching from the old point of view, frivolous, even absurd, from the new one.

Alla the king had such compassion on her that from his eyes the tears ran down. Now he caused a Book¹ to be fetched, and said, 'If the knight will swear to Constance's guilt, we will consider who shall act as our justice.'

The book was a copy of the Gospels in British, and on this book the knight swore; and, meanwhile, a hand smote him on the neck¹ so that he fell down like a stone, and both his eyes burst out. And a Voice was heard: 'Thou hast slandered the daughter of Holy Church in high presence: this hast thou done, and shall I hold my peace?'

At this marvel all (save Constance) stood aghast, and repented them that they had had suspicion of her; and through this miracle and her mediation, the king, and many others present, were made Christians.

Then was slain the wicked knight,—though Constance was sorry for his death. And Alla married the holy maid with all pomp. Thus Christ made fair Constance a queen.

But the queen-mother hated her. She (Donegild her name) brooked not that the royal lineage should be stained by so strange a woman, foreign and unknown, ascending the British throne.

Constance bore a son to Alla during his absence in war. The child was called Maurice, and the Constable, in whose house Constance dwelt, sent forth a messenger to King Alla, bearing a letter with the joyful news.

PART III.

Now this messenger, for his own private ends, did not go straight to the king. He went first with haste to the king's mother, Donegild, and saluted her humbly in his own language. 'Madam,' said he, 'ye may rejoice to-day. I bring news that my lady queen hath a child to the joy of the whole realm.'

GLOSSARY.	Lo, heer the lettres seled of this thing,	'Lo, here are the seal'd letters of this thing
	That I mot bere with al the haste I may;	That I must bear with all the haste I may:
	If ye wol ought vn-to your sone the king,	If ye will aught unto your son the king,
	I am your seruaut, bothe nyght and day.'	I am your servant both by night and day.'
at this time	Donegild answerde, 'as now at this tym, nay;	Donegild answer'd, 'On the instant, nay:
	But heer al nyght I wol thou take thy reste,	But rest thou here, and tarry for a night:
tell	Tomorwe wol I sey thee what me leste.'	To-morrow will I somewhat say or write.'
wish steadily	This messenger drank sadly ale and wyn,	This messenger drank deep of ale and wine,
	And stolen were his lettres priuily Out of his box, whyl he sleep as a swyn;	And stolen were his letters privily Out of his box, while he like any swine

¹ 'Swearing on the book' still lingers in our courts of law.

GLOSSARY.	And countrefeted was ful subtilly	Slept—and they counterfeited craftily
	Another lettre, wrought ful sinfully,	Another letter, wrought most sinfully straight Vn-to the king direct of this matere	As ye shall hear, purporting of this thing
	Fro his Constable, as ye shul after here.	As from the constable unto the king.

Now the false letters declared that the young queen was delivered of so horrible and fiendly a creature that no soul dared rest any longer in the castle. The mother was an elf,¹ who had come by chance, through charms or sorcery, and every one shrank from her.

The king was bitterly grieved on reading these terrible tidings; but being a wise and shrewd man, he told no man of his sorrow. He wrote back with his own hand: 'Welcome the will of God, evermore, to me that now have received His word. The Lord's will be done!' He then added his commands:

	Kepeth this child, al be it foul or fayr,	'Keep ye this child, yea be it foul or fair, home-coming	And eek my wyf, vn-to myn hoom-coming;	And keep my wife, too, unto my returning.
he wills	Crist, whan him list, may sende me an heyr	Christ, when it pleaseth him, may grant an heir
	More agreable than this to my lykinge.'	More fair and fitting to my hope and yearning.'
privily	This lettre he seleth, priuely wepinge,	And seal'd the letter (but in secret mourning),
	Which to the messenger was take sone,	Which to the messenger he gave: and so do	And forth he goth; ther is no more to done.	The man went forth—no other could he do.
	O message fulfild of dronkenesse,	O messenger! all drowned in drunkenness!
ever betrayest, secrecy	Strong is thy breeth, thy lymes faltren ay,	Strong is thy breath, thy limbs are faltering ay,
	} And thou biwreyest alle secrenesse.	And in thy hands a trust is foolishness.
	Thy mynde is lorn, thou Ianglest as a lay,	Thy mind is dull, thou janglest like a jay, distorted prevails	Thy face is turned in a newe array!	Thy face distorted in a wry array!—
	Ther dronkenesse regneth in any route,	Where drunkenness in any company doubt	Ther is no conseil hid, with-outen doute.'	Prevails, no secret can in safety be.

¹ There is reason to believe that the superstition that elves and fairies of evil kind could take human form existed long after Chaucer's day. White magic were devoutly believed in, and many cruelties resulted; and how often may not advantage have been taken of the superstition for private ends. In this story, when means of communication were so limited, education so imperfect, and evil passions rife?

Executions for witchcraft occurred even in the last century in England and Scotland, and women young and old have suffered many things on suspicion of having dealings with elves and fiends.

² Chaucer has given another description of drunkenness, Knight's Tale, p. 59.

GLOSSARY.

	O Donegild, I ne haue noon english digne	O Donegild, I have no English fit worthy	Vn-to thy malice and thy tirannye !	To speak thy malice and thy ty- ranny :
	And therfor to the fende I thee resigne,	And therefore to the foul fiend leave I it—describe	Let him endyten of thy traitorye !	Let him depict thy heartless trea- chery !
man-like (hard bearded)	} Fy, mannish, fy ! o nay, [parfay], I lye,	Unwomanly woman, fie !—O nay, I lie ;
	Fy, feendly spirit, for I dar wel telle,	Fie, fiendly spirit !—for I know full well
	Though thou heer walke, thy spirit is in helle !	Though thou walk here, thy spirit is in hell !
	This messenger comth fro the king agayn,	This messenger cometh from the king again, alighted	And at the kinges modres court al- lyghte,	At the court of the king's mother did he light ;
glad	And she was of this messenger ful fayn,	And of the messenger she was full fain,
	And plesed him in al that euer she myghte.	And pleas'd him in as much as ever she might.
stuffed	He drank, and wel his girdel vnder- pyghte.	He drank, and pack'd again his girdle tight :
	He slepeth, and he snoreth in his gyse	He slept, and fared after his common wise usual way	Al nyght, vn-til the sonne gan aryse.	All night until the sun began to rise.
Afterwards	Eft were his lettres stolen eurichon And afterfeted lettres in this wyse ;	Then were his letters stolen, every one, And others counterfeited in this wise :
	'The king comandeth his Constable anon,	'The king commands his constable anon,
Judgment	Vp peyne of hanging and of hey Iuyse,	On pain of death and other penalties,
	That he ne scholde suffren in no wyse	That he shall suffer Constance in no wise realm, to abide	} Custance in-with his regne for tabyde Thre dayes and a quarter of a tyde ;	Longer within the kingdom to abide Than three days and a quarter of a tide.
found her in	But in the same ship as he hir fond	'But in the self-same ship which brought her o'er,
property	Hir and hir yonge sone, and al hir gere,	Her and her young son, yea, and all her gear, put, shove	He sholde putte, and croude hir fro the lond,	He shall launch forth, and push her from the shore, afterward	And charge hir that she neuer eft com there.'	And charge her no more nigh it to appear.'
spirit	O my Custance, wel may thy gost haue fere	O Constance mine, well may thy spirit fear
	And sleping in thy dreem been in penance,	And tremble in thy very dreams asleep devised, preparation	} Whan Donegild caste al this ordi- hen !	While Donegild thus snares thee to the dea !

The poor Constable, when he read this piteous letter, was filled with anguish. He marvelled that God could let such misery and injustice be. 'Oh, mighty God!' he prayed, 'is it Thy will, who art a righteous Judge, to suffer innocence to be destroyed whilst the wicked flourish? Woe is me, that I should be thy torturer, poor good Constance, or die shame's death myself!'

part	beach	what thou sendest }	GLOSSARY. Wepen both yonge and olde in al that place, Whan that the king this cursed letter sente, And Custance, with a deedly pale face, The ferthe day toward hir ship she wente. But natheles she taketh in good entente	Both young and old were weeping in that place When the good king this cursed letter sent; And Constance with a deathly pallid face On the fourth day to meet the vessel went. Nathless her gentle spirit was content
			The wille of Crist, and, kneling on the stronde, She seyde, 'lord! ay wel-com be thy sonde!	With Heaven's will; and kneeling on the beach, 'Welcome, thy gifts, Lord!' was her humble speech.
amongst	also		He that me kepte fro the false blame Why! I was on the londe amonges yow, He can me kepe from harme and eek fro shame In salte see, al-though I se nat how. As strong as euer he was, he is yet now. In him triste I, and in his moder dere, That is to me myseyl and eek my stere.'	'He that preserved me from unrighteous blame Whilst I was dwelling in the land with you, He can preserve me still from harm and shame On the salt sea, although I see not how. As strong as ever He was He yet is now. In Him, and in His Mother dear, trust I, Who is my sail and rudder till I die.'
			Hir litel child lay weping in hir arm, And kneling, pitously to him she seyde, 'Pees, litel sone, I wol do thee noon harm.' With that hir kerchief of hir heed she breyde, And ouer his litel yën she it leyde; And in hir arm she lulleth it ful faste, And in-to heuen hir yën vp she caste.	Her little child lay weeping on her arm, And as she knelt, so piteously she said, 'Peace, little son, I'll do thee never harm.' With that she took the kerchief from her head, And on his little eyes the kerchief spread, And lull'd him in her arms to slumbers fast, Whilst up to Heaven her patient eyes were cast.
egging on			'Moder,' quod she, 'and mayde bright, Marye, Soth is that thurgh womannes ¹ eggement	'Mother,' she said, 'and Maiden bright, Marie! Through woman's evil instance verily

¹ Eve's urging.

GLOSSARY.	Mankynd was lorn and damned ay to dye,	Mankind was lost, and thence was doom'd to die :
(Fr. croix)	For which thy child was on a croys yrent;	Wherefore thy Son was tortur'd on the Tree.
eyes	Thy blissful yēn seye al his torment ; Than is ther no comparisoun bitwene Thy wo, and any wo man may sustene.	Thy blissful eyes beheld His Agony. There is no parallel betwixt thy pain And any woe that we on earth sustain.
	Thou sey thy child yslayn biforn thyn yēn, And yet now lyueth my litel child, parfay !	'Thou saw'st thy Child destroyed before thine eyes ; But see, my little child doth live, parfay !
all the unhappy	} Now, lady bryght, to whom alle woful cryēn,	Now, Lady bright, to whom the sad heart cries, maiden	Thou glorie of wommanhede, thou fayre may,	Thou glory of Womanhood, thou fair white May,
	Thou hauen of refut, bryghte sterre of day,	Thou haven of refuge, shining star of Day—
rue (pity)	Rewe on my child, that of thy gentillesse,	Pity my child ! thou whose great tenderness
pityest, pitiable	} Rewest on euery rewful in distresse !	Can reach to every sufferer in distress.
guilt	O litel child, alas ! what is thy guilt,	'O little child ! that never hast done or said
	That neuer wroughtest sinne as yet, pardē,	Evil as yet, what is the guilt in thee ?
destroyed	Why wil thyn harde fader han thee spilt ? O mercy, dere Constable !' quod she ;	Why would thy cruel father have thee dead ?— O, mercy, dearest Constable !' said she.
let	'As lat my litel child dwelle heer with thee ; And if thou darst not sauē him, for blame,	'Suffer my little babe to dwell with thee ! Nay—if thou dar'st not save him, for thy blame—
.	So kis him ones in his fadres name !'	Yet kiss him once now, in his father's name !'
looketh	Ther-with she loketh bakward to the londe,	With that she glanceth backward to the land, ruthless	And seyde, 'far-wel, housbond rewthelees !'	And sigh'd 'Farewell, O husband, pitiless !'
arose	And vp she rist, and walketh doun the stronde Toward the ship ; hir folweth al the prees,	And she uprose and walketh down the strand Toward the ship : the crowd about her press, husheth	And euer she preyeth hir child to holde his pees ; And taketh hir leue, and with an holy entente She blisseth hir ; ¹ and in-to ship she wente.	And ever she prayeth her child to hold his peace. Thus took her leave, and with all holy intent Crossing herself, upon the ship she went.

¹ See note ³, p. 151.

The ship was well victualled for a good space of time, and all other necessities, thank Heaven, they gave her. God send her fair wind and weather, and bring her home! So she drave on her way.

Alla the king returned soon after this, and asked for his wife and child. At that, the Constable's very heart grew cold, and, bringing forth the seal and letter which he had received, he told the king plainly what had happened. 'Lord, as ye commanded me, so have I certainly done,' he said.

Then followed shrewd and subtle inquiry. The messenger was forced by torture to recall and to confess in what places he had lain night by night. The handwriting of the false letters was recognised, and the accursed deed traced home. The result of it was, as all men know,¹ that Donegild died by Alla's hand. But the sorrow of Alla for his wife and child no tongue can tell.

Constance drifted during five years and more about the sea, in great pain and peril. At last she was thrown upon an heathen shore. Then came a rude heathen thief who climbed into the ship, and fell upon Constance to harm her; but by God's grace this weak woman had strength to overcome him, and he fell overboard and was drowned. So Christ avenged her.

Then again she drifted away, north and south, west and east, and through the narrow strait between Gibraltar and Ceuta, till it was Heaven's will to end her trouble. And meanwhile, let us speak of the Roman emperor, her father, who came to the knowledge after a time, by letters out of Syria, of the slaughter of the Christians, and the dishonour done to his daughter by the wicked Sultanness.

The emperor sent his senator with a troop of lords to take heavy vengeance on the Syrians. They burned, slew, and spoiled them during many a day before they turned back to Rome.

As they were on their homeward voyage, they met the ship wherein sat Constance, piteously driving before the wind. The senator knew her not, nor why she was in so sad a plight: nor would she say aught of her condition, though she should die for it.² However, he brought her to Rome, and gave her, with her young son, to his wife.

Now the senator's wife was the aunt of Constance, but she too knew her not. And Constance dwelt long with him, spending her time in holy works.

It came to pass that King Alla, who had slain his mother in just anger, repented of the deed: and he made a pilgrimage to Rome to receive his penance at the Pope's hand. The rumour soon spread in Rome town that King Alla was on his way, by harbingers³ who went before him. Hence the senator, as the usage was, went forth to meet him—quite as much, of course, to display his own magnificence, as to pay reverence to any king.

Great honour was shewn to King Alla by the senator, great honour by Alla to him; everybody did honour to everybody else; and in a day or two the

¹ The story runs that King Alla rushed into his mother's chamber, roused her from sleep by crying 'Traitor,' and after forcing a confession from her, cut her to pieces in her bed with his sword.

² The motive for this, in her country and within reach of her father, is by no means clear: unless the change in her appearance made her fear incredulity of her story.

³ Herberjourz, harbourers, or harbingers, probably couriers, who preceded persons of importance to secure and prepare lodging for them. We see the origin in the meaning we still attach to 'harbinger' as one announcing an arrival.

senator was received by Alla at a great banquet, and with him went (if I shall not lie) Constance's son.¹

Some say that it was at Constance's request that the senator took the child to the banquet. I cannot tell all the circumstances. Be that as it may, there at any rate he was; and this is a fact, that obedient to a command of his mother, the child came as they sat at meat before Alla, and stood looking in the king's face.

GLOSSARY.	This Alla king hath of this child greet wonder,	This Alla king hath of the child great wonder,
soon	And to the senator he seyde anon,	And to the senator he spoke anon:
	'Whos is that fayre child that stondeth yonder?'	'Whose is the beauteous child that standeth yonder?'
know not	'I noot,' quod he, '[parfay], and by seint John!	'God knows,' quoth he, 'not I, for by St. John
	A moder he hath, but fader hath he non	A mother he hath, but father hath he none
	That I of wot'—but shortly, in a stounde,	That I can learn: ' and so the time beguill'd
	He told Alla how that this child was founde.	By telling Alla how they found the child.

He spoke too of Constance's unchanging goodness and purity, so that such another woman was never known.

	Now was this child as lyk vn-to Custance	Now was this child as like unto Constance
	As possible is a creature to be.	As it is possible for child to be.
	This Alla hath the face in remembrance	King Alla hath the face in remembrance
	Of dame Custance, and ther-on mused he	Of dame Constance—and thereon marvell'd he
	If that the childes moder were aught she	If that the fair boy's mother might be she secretly sighed	That was his wyf, and priuely he syghte,	That was his wife: and sigh'd, and sad at heart hastened	And spedde him fro the table that he myghte.	Broke up the feast, and let the guests depart.
a phantom	'Parfay,' thoughte he, 'fantome is in my heed!	Then 'Nay,' he thought, 'a dream is in my head:
judge	I oughte deme, of skilful Iugement,	For common sense should make me confident
	That in the salte see my wyf is deed.'	That in the great salt sea my wife is dead:
	And afterward he made his argument—	And then came back again the argument—
	'What wot I, if that Crist haue hider ysent	'What know I, whether Christ hath hither sent
	My wyf by see, as wel as he hir sente	My wife by sea, as well as He her sent thence	To my contree fro thennes that she wente?'	By sea unto my country whence she went?'

¹ Probably as page.

In the afternoon, Alla returned with the senator to see the mother of the boy, for he was possessed by his hope. And you may be sure Constance was not very merry when she learned why she was summoned by them. She shook so that she could scarcely stand upon her feet.

When Alla saw his wife, he greeted her joyfully and with tears, for at a glance he knew that it was Constance; and she for sorrow stood dumb as a tree, so was her heart shut¹ in her distress as she remembered his unkindness, for she knew nothing of the deceit practised upon them both.

GLOSSARY.

swooned	Twyes she swowned in his owen syghte;	Twice she sank down for sorrow in his sight, wept	He weep, and him excuseth pitously:—	And the king wept and piteously did cry, saints	'Now God,' quod he, 'and alle his halwes bryghte	'Now God [quoth he] and all His saints so bright wisely	So wisely on my soule as haue mercy, That of your harm as giltelees am I	Have mercy on my soul as certainly As I am guiltless of your injury.
	As is Maurice my sone so lyk your face;	Even as Maurice my son is like your face!
fetch	Elles the feend me fecche out of this place!	Else may the foul Fiend snatch me from the place.'
	Long was the sobbing and the bitter peyne	Long was the sobbing and the bitter pain
	Er that her woful hertes myghte cesse;	Ere these two woeful hearts could rest in peace.
cease	Greet was the pite for to here hem pleyne	'Twas pitiful to hear them both complain:—
through	Thurgh whiche pleyntes gan her wo encesse.	Complaints which help'd their sorrow to increase.
	I prey yow al my labour to relese;	And of the telling give me some release!
	I may nat telle her wo vn-til tomorwe,	I cannot wait from now until to-morrow.—
wearry	I am so wery for to speke of sorwe.	I am so tired of telling of such sorrow.

But finally, when she saw that Alla had never injured her, the joy between them was such that (save the joy that lasteth to eternity), no one hath seen or shall see the like.

Then Constance resolved to make herself known to her royal father, and she desired Alla to prepare a feast at which the emperor should deign to be present, and should discover her. Some say that the message to the emperor was carried by the child Maurice; but, as I conjecture, Alla was not so foolish as to address him, who is the flower of Christ's people, through a child; it is better to suppose that he went himself.

The emperor granted Alla's request; and when the morning came, Alla, with his wife and son, rode forth to meet him.

¹ A beautiful phrase, expressing the stony pain and inability to speak or weep in violent grief, especially when caused by the unkindness of one beloved.

GLOSSARY.	And whan she sey hir fader in the strete, She lyghte down, and falleth him to fete. 'Fader,' quod she, 'your yonge child Custance Is now ful clene out of your remembrance.	And when she saw her father in the street She lighted down, and falleth at his feet. 'Father,' she cried, 'now your young child Constance Has past clean out of your remembrance!
	I am your doughter Custance,' quod she, 'That whylom ye han sent vn-to Surrye. It am I, fader, that in the salte see Was put allone and dampned for to dye. Now, gode fader, mercy I yow crye, Send me namore vn-to noon hethen-esse, But thonketh my lord heer of his kyndenesse.' ¹	'I am your daughter Constance,' then cried she, 'That once you sent to Syria—and I Am she, my father, who in the salt sea Was launch'd out all alone and doom'd to die. Good father, now for mercy I do cry. Send me no more to heathen lands (said she), But thank my lord, who has been kind to me.'

Then there was great rejoicing between them.

And when Alla saw fit he left Rome with his wife, and took her back to England, where they lived in all happiness and quiet during the short time left them to live. Joy and pleasure of this world we are not meant to have long.

After Alla's death, the holy Constance returned to end her days at Rome, where, later, Maurice was made emperor by the pope, and did great honour to the Church of Christ. And now may He, who can so send joy after woe, govern us in His grace and keep us all.—Amen.

HERE ENDS THE 'MAN OF LAW'S TALE.'

NOTES BY THE WAY.

[Carefully, and even tenderly as Chaucer has touched off the figure of the meek and holy Christian Princess, it remains somewhat thin and filmy in its spiritual beauty, like a fair visitant from another sphere indeed—save in moments, as where he pictures her hushing the fretful babe, and appealing wildly to the helpless Constable. It shows little of the Chauceresque grasp of individual character, so clear in many other tales. Indeed, the old Sultanness appears the most living figure, though her appearance on the scene is but brief: which may argue, perhaps, that to Chaucer, as to all of us, an imperfect character is often more interesting than a perfect one, on account of the infinite possibilities of good and harm belonging to the one and not to the other. Does not white light weary, while changing colour, its decomposed and imperfect expression, comforts and refreshes?

That Chaucer was a religious man cannot be doubted—that he was a strict or narrow one, may fairly be. His theological views in this tale reflect the ignorant general prejudice against foreign forms of thought, in which, of course, he had been brought up: not his own personal hatred, which only comes out against meanness and hypocrisy. It was, in fact, the educated, not the instinctive enmity.

¹ The Roman woman was successively deprived her of these natural guardians; under the legal governance of her father, hence Constance, though a matron, appeals her husband, and her son, according as death to her father, as still under his rule.

To be a Mohammedan, i.e., infidel, was to be all that was wicked and grisly in the eyes of the bitter Christians of Chaucer's days. The invective hurled at the Sultanness, 'well of vices,' is on account of her enthusiasm for her own creed and her intolerance of every other form of faith—in which her similarity to the Christians did not save her from the obloquy of a bigotry as violent and wicked as her own. It was not then understood how impossible it is for a Mohammedan to turn Christian—as much so as for a Christian to become a Jew—for the Mohammedans believed Mohammedanism to have superseded Christianity as firmly as we believe Christianity to have superseded Judaism. An advanced creed cannot give way to an obsolete one, which it has outgrown. Had Chaucer understood this he would not have put the term 'new law' in the Sultanness's mouth—which might have had some meaning if used by a Jewess.

It is quite certain that all false religions were confounded in the popular mind; that Mohammedanism and Judaism were hopelessly so is clear from Froissart's curious description of the English colloquy with the Saracens, who, on mildly inquiring why we were warring upon them, were greatly amazed at being accused of slaying Christ: though their attempted enlightenment of British stupidity by pointing out that the Jews did that, not Saracens, did not prevent the unjustifiable siege from proceeding.

In this fine tale the pathos lies in Constance's unresentful endurance of conscientious persecutions as well as malicious injuries.

Chaucer has been accused of borrowing this tale from his friend, the poet Gower, who introduced it in his Confessio Amantis, 1392-93. But it is far more probable that it is founded on a much older original which was common property in the fourteenth century, like hundreds of other romances and legends. Tyrwhitt conjectures that the friendship between Chaucer and Gower, intact when Chaucer sent his Troilus for correction (!) to 'the moral Gower,' and the 'philosophical Strode,' was interrupted in later years: a conjecture based on a passage in the Prologue to the Man of Law's Tale, beginning 'But certainly no words writeth he,' then quoting some of Gower's stories in no flattering terms: and, on the fact that in the copies of the Confessio Amantis made subsequently to Henry IV.'s accession, Gower omitted certain verses in praise of Chaucer. In this case we may further conjecture that the breach may have originated in a similar way to that between Blake and Stothard, upon Stothard's 'stealing' Blake's 'subject'—which, by the way, was the 'Procession of the Canterbury Pilgrims.'

Or did Gower 'correct, ther nede is,' with disagreeable candour?]

Both poets may have translated Nicholas Trivet's French Chronicle, written after 1334.

THE PARDONER'S TALE.

MINE Host was well satisfied with the Nun's Priest; and thanked him laughing.

GLOSSARY. 'But, sire, faire falle you for your tale.' 'But, my good sir, fair fall you for your tale.'
 And after that he with ful merry chere, And presently he, with a merry cheer, Sayd to another, as ye schulen here. Address'd another man, as you shall hear.

Then mine host turned to the Pardoner: 'Thou, pardoner, thou, my good friend,' he said—

'Tel us a tale, for thou canst many oon.' 'Tell us a tale; thou knowest many an one.'
 'It schal be doon (quod he), and that anon.' 'I will!' he said; 'it shall at once be done.'
 But first (quod he), her at this ale-stake¹ But first,' he added, 'here at this ale-stake'
 I wil bothe drynke and byten on a cake.' I'll take a drink, and have a bite of cake.'

When he had done so (for they were passing a roadside inn) he began, as you shall hear:—

There was in Flanders a company of young folk, who gave themselves up to folly and wrong-doing. They did nothing but gamble and riot, and drink wine, and dance, and swear; and their gluttony and idleness made them wicked, so that when they heard of other people committing sin, they laughed and did as much wrong as ever they could.

This kind of life degrades every one. Gluttony was the first cause of our confusion: Adam and Eve were driven from Paradise for that vice. And drunkenness leads to many other sins, as is shown in Holy Writ.

Three of these bad young men were sitting in a tavern one morning very early, drinking, when they heard the clinking of a bell² before a corpse that

¹ The ale-stake was a stake set up as a sign before the inn, generally adorned with a bush. This custom prevails in Normandy still, where you may see a goodly bunch of mistletoe hanging out wherever wine or cider is sold. The reason why mistletoe rather than any other evergreen is used, is probably because it grows on apple-trees, and is therefore typical of cider, a common drink wherever apples abound.

² 'A small bell used formerly to be rung before the corpse as it was carried to the was being carried to the grave. One of them called to his boy, 'Go out, and ask who that dead man is who passes by; and mind you bring his name back right!'

'Master,' said the boy, 'there is no need to go and ask, for I heard who the dead man was two hours before you came into this tavern. He was one of your own companions, and he was slain last night as he sat in his chair drinking, by a privy thief named Death, who kills everybody in this country. With his spear he smote his heart in two, and went away without speaking. About a thousand has he killed this pestilence.¹ And, master, it seems to me that before he comes to you too, it were as well to be prepared. Beware of him, be ready for him! my dame ever taught me that.'

GLOSSARY.

innkeeper	'By seinte Mary,' sayde this taverner,	'By holy Mary,' said the innkeeper, true	'The child saith soth, for he hath slayn this yeer,	'The child says true, for he hath slain this year,
	Hens over a myle, withinne a gret village,	Within a mile hence, in a large village,
	Bothe man and womman, child, and	Both man and woman, servant, child, labourer	hyne, and page.'	and page.'

'I should think he lived there, this Death, so many have died. It were wise to be warned before he came suddenly on a man!'

'Good lack,' cried one of the rioters with an oath, 'is it then such danger to meet him? I'll seek him out by street and stile.

hearken, be	'Herkneth, felaws, we thre ben all oones,	'Now listen, mates, for all we three are one, hand	Let ech of us hold up his hond ² to other,	Let each hold up his hand unto the other,
	And ech of us bycome others brother;	And each of us become the others' brother.
	And we wil slee this false traitour Deth;	And we will slay this sneaking traitor Death;
slain, slayeth	He shall be slayne, that so many 'sleeth.'	He shall be slain, he that so many slay'th.'

So these three men, half drunk as they were, plighted faith to live and die for each other, as though they were brothers born. And up they started, and went forth to this village, of which the innkeeper had spoken, where they thought Death lived. And much bad language they used, and many wicked things they said, resolving to catch Death before night fell.

grave, to give notice to those who were charitably disposed that they might pray for the soul of the deceased. Our "passing bell" has the same origin, though the reason for it has ceased.—Bell.

¹ An allusion to one of the great pestilences which devastated Europe during the 14th century. The great plague of 1369, called the 'Third,' probably carried off Queen Philippa and Blanche of Lancaster (see Table of Events), and this may approximately date the tale afterwards fitted into the Canterbury Tales. This pestilence means during this pestilence, as this year means during this year.

² 'This is still the ceremony used in taking an oath in courts of justice in Prussia.'—Bell. Notice the emphasis laid on their close friendship, and their constant allusion to their being all 'one,' over and above the solemnity of the profane vow they make.

GLOSSARY.

turned	Right as thay wolde han torned over a style, Whan thai han goon nought fully half a myle, An old man and a pore with hem mette.	Just as they were about to cross a stile, When they had gone not fully half a mile, A poor and aged man did meet them there.
meekly, greeted	} This olde man ful mekely hem grette, ¹	This old man greeted them with civil air,
God see you	And saide thus, 'Lordynges, God yow se!'	And said, 'Good day, my lords, God look on ye.'
rioters	The proudest of these ryotoures thre	Then the most arrogant of the noisy three churl	Answerd ayein, 'What, carle, with sory grace,	Answered him thus—'What, churl, with sorry grace, wrapped up	Why artow al for-wrapped save thi face? ² — Why lyvest thou longe in so great an age?'	Why art thou all wrapped up except thy face? Why livest thou so long, and art so grey?'
began, look	This olde man gan loke on his visage,	The old man looked him in the face straightway, because	And saide thus: 'For that I can not fynde A man—though that I walke into Inde—	And answer'd thus: 'Because I cannot find A man—e'en though I walk'd as far as Inde—
none	Neither in cité noon, ne in village, That wol change his youthe for myn age; And therefore moot I have myn age stille As longe tyme as it is Goddes wille, Ne Deth, alas! ne wil not have my lif, Thus walk I lik a resteles caytif, ³ And on the ground, which is my modres gate, I knokke with my staf, erly and late,	Neither in any city, nor village, Willing to change his youth for mine old age; And therefore must I have my old age still As long a time as it is heaven's will. Nor will e'en Death receive my life, alas! Thus like a restless wayfarer I pass, And on the ground, which is my mother's gate, Keep knocking with my staff early and late,
dear	And saye, Leeve moder, let me in. Lo, how I wane, fleisch, and blood, and skyn—	And say to her—Dear mother, let me in. Lo, how I vanish, flesh and blood and skin—shall, bones	Allas, whan schuln my boones ben at rest?	Alas, when shall my bones remain at rest?

¹ The kindly custom of greeting passers-by, now rapidly going out even in our country districts, was more common in days when passers-by were infinitely rarer. Probably half a mile from the inn the road was lonesome enough, wherefore the old man's anticipation of rough treatment from three reckless and half-tipsy ruffians was not unreasonable. His calm and fearless answer was the wisest as well as the most dignified course to pursue with such assailants, being calculated to sober them as well as to save himself.

² Making a jest of the close coverings and wraps of old age.

³ Caitif, wretch, wretched. Italian—cattivo, captive. Fr.—chétif, poor, wretched, paltry, pitiful, &c. Captive seems to give the most pathetic meaning, as though death were a looked-for freedom by a restless prisoner in the body. Fugitive is the next best for the sense, as the old man may be supposed to be flying to the gate for safety and comfort.

GLOSSARY.	Moder, with you wil I chaunge my chest, That in my chamber longe tyme hath be,	Mother, I want to change with you my chest, Which in my room solong a time hath been, enwrap	Ye, for an haire clout ¹ to wrap-in me.	Yea, for a cloth of hair to wrap me in!
favour	But, yet to me sche wol not do that grace,	But yet to me she will not do that grace, withered	For which ful pale and welkid is my face.	Wherefore so pale and wrinkled is my face.
unless, else	'But sires, to yow it is no curtesye To speke unto an old man vilonye, But he trespas in word or elles in dede.	'But, sirs, in you it is no courtesy To speak to an old man disdainfully, Unless he shall offend in word or deed.
read	In holy writ ye may yourself wel rede,	In Holy Writ ye may your own selves read, in presence of	Ayens an old man, hoor upon his hede,	Before an aged man whose hair is grey exhort	Ye schold arise: wherefor I you rede	Ye should rise up—and therefore I you pray do not	Ne doth unto an old man more harm now, Namore than ye wolde men dede to yow	Offer to an old man no mischief now More than you would that men did unto you live so long	In age, if that ye may so long abyde	In your old age, if you so long abide,
walk	And God be with you, wherso ye go or ryde;	And God be with you, whither you walk or ride!
thither	I moot go thider as I have to goo.'	I must go on, whither I have to go.'
departest, easily	'Nay, olde cherl, by God thou shalt not so, Sayde that other hasardour anon, 'Thou partist nought so lightly, by seint Johan! Thou spak right now of thilke traitour Deth, That in this contré alle our frendes sleth;	'Nay, thou old churl, thou shalt not quit us so, Cried out the other rioter anon, 'Thou partest not so lightly, by St. John! Thou hast just spoken of that traitor Death Who all our friends through all the country slay'th, here	Have her my trouth, as thou art his aspye; Tell wher he is, or elles thou schalt dye; By god and by the holy sacrament! For soothly thou art con of his assent, ³ To sleen us yonge folk, thou false theef!'	So now I warrant thee thou art his spy: Tell wher he is, this Death, or thou shalt die— We swear, no less shall be thy punishment! For truly thou art one of his assent To slay all us young folk—thou false old thief!'

¹ Hair-shroud, sackcloth, the roughest cloth.

² Tyrwhitt's edition has the less bloody threat, 'Tell wher he is, or thou shalt it abie!'

³ In league with him, consenting to his action.

GLOSSARY.	'Now, sires, than if that yow be so leef	'Now, sirs,' quoth he, 'if you so eager be
	To frynde Deth, torn up this croked way,	To seek for Death, turn up this crooked way.
	For in that grove I laft him, ¹ by my fay,	For in that grove I left him, by my fay, remain	Under a tree, and ther he will abyde.	Under a tree, and there he will abide.
beast	Ne for your bost he nyl him no thing hyde.	Nor for your noise and boasting will he hide.
	S: ye that ook ? right ther ye schuln him fynde.	See ye that oak ? close there his place you'll find.
again	God save yow, that bought agein mankynde,	God save you, sirs, that hath redeem'd mankind,
	And yow amend.' Thus sayth this olde man.	And mend you all'—thus said the aged man.
every one	And everich of these riotoures ran,	And thereupon each of the rioters ran
	Til thay come to the tre, end ther thay founde	Until they reach'd the tree, and there they found coined	Of florins ² fyn of gold ycoyned rounde,	A heap of golden florins, bright and round,
	Wel neygh a seven busschels, as hem thoughte.	Well-nigh seven bushels of them, as they thought.
	No lenger thanne after Deth thay soughte,	And then no longer after Death they sought,
	But ech of hem so glad was of that sighte,	But each of them so glad was at the sight,
	For that the florens so faire were and brighte,	The florins were so beauteous and so bright,
	That doun thai sette hem by the precious hord.	That down they sat beside the precious hoard.
	The werste ³ of hem he spake the firste word.	The worst one was the first to speak a word.
	'Bretheren,' quod he, 'take kepe what I schal saye,	'Brothers,' said he, 'take heed of what I say, wisdom, jest	My witte is gret, though that I bourde and playe;	For I am wise, although I jest and play;
given	This tresour hath fortune to us yiven,	This treasure makes our fortune, so that we jollity, live cometh	In mirth and jolyte our lyf to lyven, And lightly as it comth, so wil we spende.	May lead our lives in mirth and jollity, And lightly as it comes, we'll lightly spend.
weened (supposed)	Ey, Goddis precious dignite, who wende	By heaven ! who would have thought that luck would send
	Today, that we ⁴ schuld have so fair a grace ?	Us three good friends to-day so fair a grace ?
	But mighte this gold be carried fro this place	But could this gold be carried from this place
	Hom to myn hous, or ellis unto youres,	Home to my house, or else to one of yours

¹ The old man probably saw that the young men were scarcely responsible for their actions, and determined to wreak violence on some one, and therefore he played on their mood to avert their violence from himself to some other object.

² Florins were so named from having been first coined at Florence.

³ Tyrwhitt.

GLOSSARY.

know	(For wel I wot that this gold is nought oures),	(For all this gold I well know is not ours), high	Than were we in heyh felicité. But trewely by day it may not be, Men wolde saye that we were theves stronge,	Then were we in complete felicity. But, truly, during day it cannot be, People would call us thieves, and possibly have us hanged	} And for our tresour doon us for to honge. This tresour moste caried be by nighte	Hang us for our own treasure on a tree. This treasure should be carried off by night, wisely advise	As wysly and as slely as it mighte. Wherfore I rede, that cut among us alle We drawe, and let se wher the cut wil falle,	As cleverly and slyly as it might. I counsel then, that we among us all Draw lots, and see to whom the lot will fall, blithe heart	And he that hath the cut, with herte blithe,	And he that hath the lot shall cheerfully run, quickly	Shal renne to the toun, and that ful swithe, And bring us bred and wyn ful prively,	Go back into the town, and speedily, And bring us bread and wine full privily;
subtly	And tuo of us shal kepe subtilly	Meanwhile we two keep safe and secretly delay	This tresour wel : and if he wol not tarie, Whan it is night, we wol this tresour carie, ¹	This treasure here : and if he do not tarry, When the night comes we will the treasure carry, whither	By oon assent, ther as us liketh best.'	By one assent, where we think best or list.'
fast	That oon of hem the cut brought in his fest,	This man then held the lots within his fist, look	And bad hem drawe and loke wher it wil falle, And it fell on the yongest of hem alle, And forth toward the toun he went anon,	And bade them draw and see where it would fall : It fell upon the youngest of them all. Who therefore toward the town went forth anon.
at once	And al so soone as that he was agoon, That oon of hem spak thus unto that other : 'Thou wost wel that thou art my sworne brother, Thy profyt wol I telle the anon. Thou wost wel that our felaw is agoon, And her is gold, and that ful gret plente, That schal departed be among us thre. But natheles if I can schape it so That it departed were betwix us tuo, Hadde I not doon a frendes torn to the ?'	As soon as their companion was gone, The first one subtly spoke unto the other : 'Thou knowest well that thou art my sworn brother, I'll tell thee what thy profit is to-day Thou seest that our fellow is away, And here is gold, all heap'd up plentifulously, Which is to be divided 'mong us three. But, nevertheless, if I can shape it so That it might be divided 'twixt us two, Have I not done a friend's turn unto thee ?'
directly knowest plenty

¹ Probably in the vessels, &c., which had contained the food, thus avoiding the appearance of transporting treasure.

GLOSSARY.

know not	That other answerd, 'I not how that may be; He wot wel that the gold is with us twaye,	'I know not,' said the other, 'how that may be; He knows quite well the gold is with us two.
two	What schulde we than do? what schulde we saye?' 'Schal it be counsaill?' ¹ sayd the ferste schrewe,	What should we say to him? what should we do?' 'Shall it be counsel?' said the first agnin—
wicked person	'And I schal telle thee in wordes fewe	'And in a few words I shall tell thee plain,
do	What we schul doon, and bringe it wel aboute.' 'I graunte,' quod that other, 'without doute,	What we shall do to bring the thing about.' 'I promise,' said the other, 'without doubt betray	That by my trouthe I wil thee nought bywraye.'	That I, for one, will not be treacherous.'
knowest	'Now,' (quoth the first,) 'thou wost wel we ben twaye, And two of us schal strengre be than oon.	'Now,' said the first one, 'there are two of us, And two of us will stronger be than one.
look	Loke, whanne he is sett, thou right anon ²	Look, thou, when he is sitting down, and soon wouldst	Arys, as though thou woldest with him pleye, ³	Rise up, as if to play with him, and I rip	And I schal ryf him through the sydes tweye, Whils that thou strogelest with him as in game, And with thi dagger, loke thou do the same.	Will stab him through the two sides suddenly, While thou art struggling with him as in game, And with thy dagger, look, thou do the same.
divided	And than schal al the gold departed be,	And then shall all this gold divided be,
thee	My dere frend, bitwixe the and me :	My dearest friend, betwixt thyself and me :
might	Than may we oure lustes al fulfille,	Then all our wants and whims we can fulfil, dice	And pley at dees right at our owne wille.'	And play at dice according to our will.'
two	And thus acorded been these shrewes tweye To sleen the thridde, as ye han herd me seye.	And thus accorded are the ruffians twain To slay the third as I have told you plain.
say	This yongest, which that wente to the toun,	The youngest, who had gone into the town, who	Full fast in hert he rollith up and doun The beaute of these florins, newe and brighte.	Deep in his mind he turneth up and doun The beauty of these florins, new and bright.

¹ Shall counsel be kept between us? literally, in schoolboys' language, 'Mum's the word—eh?'

² Bell's edition.

³ Games which we now leave to children were formerly as popular with grown-up people. Hunt-the-slipper and blind-man's-buff were 200 years ago the common recreation of ladies and gentlemen, and wrestling and other romping was indulged in far more commonly than now by young men. Playing at ball was a favourite pastime.

GLOSSARY.	'O Lord,' quoth he, 'if so were that I might	'O Lord,' quoth he, 'if any-wise I might throne	Have all this gold unto myself alloone, Ther is no man that lyveth under the troone	Have all this treasure to myself alone, There is no man that dwelleth under the throne
	Of God, that schulde lyve so mery as I.'	Of God, who then should live so merry as I.'
buy	And atte last the feend, oure enemy,	And at the last the fiend, our enemy, slay	Put in his thought that he schulde poyssoun beye, With which he mighte sle his felawes tweye.	Put in his thought that he should poison buy, With which to cause his comrades both to die.
	For why? the feend fond him in such lyvyng	For why? the fiend found this man's life so foul sorrow	That he hadde leve to sorwe him to bryng:	That he had power now upon his soul:
slay	For this was outrelly ¹ his ful entente To slen hem bothe, and never to repente.	For this was utterly his fix'd intent To slay them both and never to repent.
delay	And forth he goth, no lenger wold he tarye,	And forth he goes, no longer would he tarry, apothecary	Into the toun unto a potecarye. And prayde him that he him wolde selle	Into the town to an apothecary, And begged him plausibly that he would sell rats	Som poyssoun, that he might his rattis quelle;	Him poison strong enough the rats to quell;
farmyard	And eek ther was a polkat in his hawe That, as he sayde, his capouns had i-slawe,	Also, there was a polecat in his yard Which had destroy'd his capouns, he averr'd, avenge	And said he wold him wreke, if that he mighte, Of vermy, that destroyed hem by nighte.	And he would gladly rid him if he might Of vermin, which destroy'd them in the night.
the apothecary }	Thapotecary answerd, ² 'Thou schalt have A thing that, also God my soule save, In al this world ther nys no creature	The apothecary answered, 'Thou shalt have Something so strong, as God my soul shall save, That in this world nothing that living is mixture	That ete or dronk hath of this confecture—	Who in his food doth eat or drink of this—amount	Nought but the mountaunce of a corn of whete—	Nay, but the greatness of a grain of wheat—quit	That he ne schuld his lif anon forlete;	Shall fail to die, his life shall be forfeit;
die	Ye, sterve he schal, and that in lasse while Than thou wilt goon a paas not but a myle, This poyssoun is so strong and violent.'	Yea, he shall die, and that in lesser while Than thou shalt walk a step beyond a mile, This poison is so strong and violent.'

¹ Tyrwhitt. Outrelly, utterly, beyond all things. Vide the French—outré mesure, beyond measure. The common mediæval expressions, 'out of measure,' 'out of doubt,' were probably from the same word, outré=beyond.

² Tyrwhitt.

GLOSSARY.

caught or taken	} This cursd man hath in his hond i-hent	This cursd man hath taken it and pent
then	This poysoun in a box, and sins he ran Into the nexte stret unto a man And borwed of him large boteles thre,	The poison in a box, and forthwith ran Hastily to the next street, to a man And borrow'd of him some large bottles three, third, clean	And in the two his poysoun poured he : The thrid he kepede clene for his drynke,	And into two the poison poured he : The third he kept untainted for himself, prepared, labour	} For al the night he schop him for to swynke	Meaning to toil at carrying his pelf
	In caryng of the gold out of that place.	From out that cursed place the whole night long.
rioter	And whan this riotour, with sorry grace, Hath fillid with wyn his grete botels thre,	And when this villain, bent on doing wrong Had filled his three great bottles up with wine, again	To his felaws eyein repaireth he.	Back to his mates he went, as if to dine.
sermonize	What nedith it therof to sermoun more?	What need is there of saying any more?
arranged	For right as they hadde cast ¹ his deth bifore,	For as they had devised his death before, have	Right so thay han him slayn, and that anon.	E'en so they slew him, and with brief delay.
spake, one	And whan this was i-doon, thus spak that oon : 'Now let us drynke and sitte, and make us mery,	And when the deed was done, the first did say, 'Now let us sit and drink, and make us merry, will	And afterwards ² we wil his body bery.' And with that word ³ it happed him	And afterwards we will his body bury.' And speaking thus, he chanced, upon the minute, by chance wherein	par cas To take the botel ther the poysoun was,	To take a bottle which had poison in it, gave	And drank, and yaf his felaw drink also,	And drank, and gave his fellow drink beside,
soon, died	For which anon thay stervede bothe two.	Whereby within a little space they died.
certainly wrote wondrous pangs	} But certes I suppose that Avycen ³ Wrot never in canoun , ne in non fen , Mo wonder sorwes of empoisonyng	But truly I suppose that Avicen Did ne'er describe in canon or in fen More frightful pains of deadly poisoning,
	Than hadde these wrecches tuo or here endyng.	Than these two wretches felt in perishing.
be also	Thus endid been these homicides tuo, And eek the fals empoysoner also.	Thus ended both the wicked homicides, And that false-hearted poisoner besides.

HERE ENDS THE 'PARDONER'S TALE.'

¹ Cast, as in 'cast a nativity,' means fix upon, arrange, discover.

² Tyrwhitt.

³ Avicen, Ebn Sina, an Arabian physician of the 10th century. Fen, apparently an Arabic word, is the name given to the sections of Avicenna's great work on physic, entitled Canon.—Tyrwhitt.

NOTES BY THE WAY.

[During the 12th, 13th, and 14th centuries the passion for gambling had spread from the highest to the very lowest class of the population. The practice of men drinking and playing themselves bare in the taverns, where both vices were encouraged by the taverners, was common enough to provoke numberless censures and caricatures, so much so that it is a mercy Sir Wilfrid Lawson was spared the spectacle. The Pardoner's Tale is one of the list.

The taverns were the resort of all the refuse of the people: the taverners found it suited them to act as pawnbrokers, advancing money on the clothes and property of the ne'er-do-wells who lacked cash to stake or to pay; and provided other attractions whereby men were tempted to various vices, and robbed during their drunken sleep. The language of these young rascals of both sexes is graphically condemned by the Pardoner; and gluttony is pointed out as the root of all evil, for which Adam fell.

Hazard was the game with which our rioters strove to 'drive away the day.' Mr. Wright, speaking of the use of dice, tells us, 'In its simpler form, that of the game of hazard, in which the chance of each player rested on the mere throw of the dice, it was the common game of the low frequenters of the taverns—that class which lived upon the vices of society, and which was hardly looked upon as belonging to society itself.' Men staked all they possessed, to the very clothes on their backs, on one cast.

Chaucer tells us contemptuously how the King of Parthia sent a pair of golden dice to King Demetrius in scorn, knowing he was a player, to express that he held his glory and renown at no value, being liable to disappear at any moment.

The three rioters were probably young men who had ruined themselves by folly and license, and whose besetting sin, surviving all it throve on, urged them to any and every crime for the sake of renewed gratification. Their end is beyond measure frightful. For why?—The fiend found him in such living that he had leave to bring him to grief, says the severe old moralist.

The extreme beauty of this poem, even in a technical sense alone, is such that I lament the necessity of abridging it.

The tale illustrates curiously enough the mediæval manner of conveying moral lessons from the pulpit: which was not ruled in Old England by the restrictions we are used to. The Pardoner expressly states that he learned the tale for the purpose of introducing it in his sermons. The outline of the tale is to be found in the Cento Novelle Antiche, Nov. lxxxii.]

MINOR POEMS.

GOOD COUNSEL OF CHAUCER.

GLOSSARY.

mob	FLE fro the pres, and duelle with	Fly from the crowd, and dwell with honesty	sothfastnesse,	truthfulness thee, it	Suffice the thy good, though hit be smale,	Contented with thy good, though it be small;
boards, un- certainty }	For horde hath hate, and clymyng tikelnesse,	Treasure breeds hate, and climbing dizziness, deceived everywhere }	Pres hath envye, and wele is blent over alle.	The world is envious, wealth be- guiles us all.
taste	Savour no more then the behove shalle;	Care not for loftier things than to thee fall;
	Rede ¹ well thy self, that other folke canst rede,	Counsel thyself, who counsel'st others' need, without fear	And trouthe the shall delyver, hit ys no drede.	And truth thee shall deliver, without dread.
	Peyne the not eche croked to redresse, In trust of hire that turneth as a balle, ²	Pain thee not all the crooked to redress, Trusting to her who turneth as a ball, great peace lies, meddling }	Grete rest stant in lytel besynesse.	For little meddling wins much easi- ness.
	Bewar also to spurne ayein an awle, ³	Beware lest thou do kick against an awl, awl	Stryve not as doth a croke ⁴ with a walle:	Strive not as doth a clay pot with a wall:
crook	Deme ⁵ thyselfe that demest others dede,	Judge thou thyself, who judgest others' deed,
	And trouthe the shal delyver, hit ys no drede.	And truth thee shall deliver, without dread.
thee	That the ys sent receyve in buxom- nesse, The wrasteling of this world asketh a falle; ⁶	All that is given take with cheerful- ness, To wrestle in this world is to ask a fall;
here	Her is no home, her is but wyldyr- nesse.	Here is no home, here is but wilder- ness.
beast	Forth, pilgrime!—forth, best, out of thy stalle!	Forth, pilgrim, forth!—forth, beast, out of thy stall!
	Loke up on hye, and thonke God of alle!	Look up on high, and thank thy God for all!

¹ Tyrwhitt's and Bell's editions. Morris has 'Do wel.'

² Fortune with her wheel. See Notes by the Way to the Monk's Tale, p. 125.

³ 'Kick against the pricks.'

⁴ For the clay pot is the weaker of the two.

⁵ Tyrwhitt. Morris has daunte and dauntest (Fr. dompter), meaning control.

⁶ A happy image, two ill-matched wrestlers.

A BALADE OF GENTILNESSE.

GLOSSARY.

supplier or origin	} THE firste fadir and fynder of gentil- nesse, ¹	The Father and First Cause of noble- ness . . .
of good birth	What man desirith gentil for to be, Moste folwe his trace, and alle his wittes dresse	Who truly noble hath desire to be Must follow in His steps, and strive and press
vices	Vertu to shew, and vices for to flee;	To win him Virtue and from Vice to flee.
belongeth	For unto vertu longith dignitee,	Only in Virtue lieth dignity, safely judge	And nought the revers, savely dare I deme; Al were he mitre, corone or diademe.	In dignity no virtue, as I deem,— Nay, wear he mitre, crown, or diadem!
stock	This firste stoke was ful of rightwis- nesse, Trews of his worde, soboure, pitous and free, Clene of his gooste and lovid besynesse, Ageynst the vice of slowthe in honeste; And but his heire love vertu as did he,	Lo, the First Cause was full of right- eousness. His word was Truth—pitiful, sober, free. And clean in spirit, loving helpfulness, Hating the vice of sloth perpetually. And, but His heir love Virtue as did He, though	He nis not gentille thouhe him riche seme, Al were he mitre, corone or diademe.	He is not noble, howso rich he seem,— Nay, wear he mitre, crown, or diadem!
	Vyce may welle bee heyre to olde richeesse, But there may no man, as ye may welle see,	Vice may well heir be to old Wealthi- ness; Yet no man to his son, as ye may see, bequeath	Byquethe his sone his vertuous noblesse;	Can will away his inward nobleness.
appropriated	That is appropried into noo degree, But to the firste Fadir in Magestee, Which may His heires deme hem that Him queme Al were he mitre, corone or diademe.	True honour is the right of no de- gree, But of the Father, first in majesty, Which maketh heritor who pleaseth Him,— Yea, wear he mitre, crown, or diadem!

¹ By the 'first Father and finder of gentleness' (gentle birth) the poet seems to mean Christ. There is an expression somewhat similar in the Wife of Bath's Tale, 'Crist wol we clayme of him our gentillesse.' The meaning is that the noblest birth and the proudest heritage is not that received through man's wealth and worldly honour, but that derived from a virtuous ancestry and a righteous life, i.e., our heavenly Father's gift.

TWO RONDEAUX.

GLOSSARY.

slay	YOUR two eyn will sle me sodenly,	Your fair two eyes will slay me suddenly, sustain	I may the beauté of them not sustene,	I know not how to bear their beauty's sheen, goeth	So wendeth it thorow-out my herte kene.	It pierceth all my heart athrough so keen.
	And but your wordes will helen hastely	And if your words heal not full speedily
fresh	My hertis wound, while that it is grene,	My heart's deep wound, while still the wound is green,
	Yours two eyn will sle me sodenly, &c.	Your fair two eyes will slay me suddenly,
		I know not how to bear their beauty's sheen,
		It pierceth all my heart athrough so keen.
tell	Upon my trouth I sey yow feithfully	Upon my faith I tell you faithfully are	That ye ben of my life and deth the quene,	Both of my life and death you are the queen,
	For with my deth the trouth shal be i-sene.	For in my dying shall the truth be seen.
	Yours two eyn, &c.	Your fair two eyes will slay me suddenly,
		I know not how to bear their beauty's sheen,
		It pierceth all my heart athrough so keen.
<hr/>
taken	SYN I fro Love escaped am so fat,	Since I escaped from love, I am so fat, since, free	I nere thinke to ben in his prison lene: ¹	No more I shall his captive be so lean:
	Syn I am fre, I counte him not a bene.	Since I am free, I count him not a bean!
	He may answer and seye this and that:	He may reply, and answer this and that:
I care not	I do no fors, I speak ryght as I mene:	I care not, for I speak but as I mean:
	Syn I fro Love escaped am so fat.	Since I from love escaped, I am so fat!

¹ Bell's edition reads tene, taken.

GLOSSARY.

struck	Love hath my name i-strike out of his	My name—out of his slate Love slate	sclat,	strikethe that.
books	And he is strike out of my bokes	And he is struck out of my books as clene	clean
	For evermo, there is none other	For evermore, there is no way be-means	mene.	tween !
	Syn I fro Love, &c.	Since I escaped, &c.

PROVERBS OF CHAUCER. .

shall	WHAT shul these clothes thus many- folde	What use, these clothes so manifold, hot	Loo, this hoothe somers day ? After greet hete cometh colde ; No man caste his pilch away.	Lo, this glowing summer's day ? —After great heat there cometh cold. Cast no man his cloak away.
twain	Of al this world the large compace	The mighty compass of this earth much	It wil not in myn armes tweyne ;	In my two arms I cannot fold.
little	Whoo-so mochel wol embrace Litel thereof he shal distreyne.	—Whoso will grasp too great a girth But little of it shall he hold.
unsteady	The worlde so wide, thaire so remuable,	The world so wide, the air's incessant moving, ignorant	The sely man so litel of stature ;	And lo, man's narrow mind, and little stature !
grown	The grone of grounde, ¹ and clothing so mutable,	Grown of the ground , so mutable in clothing,— hot	The fire so hoothe and subtil of nature,	The fire so hot and subtle in its nature—
still	The water never in oon—what creature	The water never at rest—alas, what creature
transient, (Ger. flehen) }	That made is of these foure thus flyt- tynge	Made of so vague and transitory four
	May stedfast be, as here, in his lyvyng ?	Can tarry steadfast in his mortal hour ?
	The more I goo the ferther I am be- hinde	The more I haste, the further I am behind, nearer	The ferther behinde the ner my wayes ende ;	The further behind, the nearer my way's end.
seek	The more I seche the worse can I fynde,	The hotlier I seek, the less I find—more un- willing, go }	The lighter leve, the lother for to wende :	Nearer to leaving life, more loth to wend !
better	The bet I serve, the more al out of mynde.	The more I serve, the less I find a friend.
I know not, misfortune }	Is thys fortune n'ot I, or infortune :	Be this good luck or ill, I know not whether :
loose, tether	Though I go lowse, tyed am I with a lune.	Though I go loose, tied am I with a tether.

¹ Sprung, as man is, from the dust.

VIRELAI.

GLOSSARY.	ALONE walkyng, mourning } In thought pleynyng And sore syghyng, Al desolate,	Alone walk I, With many a sigh In secrecy, All desolate, remembering my way of living } wishing }	Me remembryng Of my lyvyng, My deth wyshyng Bothe erly and late.	And still review My life anew : For death I sue Both early and late.
unfortunate so }	Inf fortunate Is soo my fate That, wote ye whate ? Oute of mesure	My fate doth grow So luckless now That—do you know ? Beyond all telling beyond measure }	My lyfe I hate, Thus, desperate, In suche pore estate Do I endure.	My life I hate : Thus, desperate, In woeful state I still am dwelling.
poor remain }	Of other cure Am I nat sure ; Thus to endure Ys hard, certayn !	I am not sure Of any cure ; 'Tis hard t' endure With no relief !
use as-sure }	Suche ys my ure, I yow ensure : What creature May have more payn ?	But certain 'tis, My state is this : What thing that is Could have more grief ?
truth taken }	My trouth so playn Ys take in veyn, And gret disdeyn In remembraunce ;	My story plain Is taken in vain, With great disdain In recollection ;
remembrance gladly }	Yet I ful feyn Wolde me compleyn, Me to absteyn From thys penance.	Yet I would fain Alway complain, To shun the pain Of this correction !
to avoid penance }	But, in substaunce None allegeaunce Of my grevaunce Can I nat fynd ;	For which find I, Substantially, No remedy My lot to mend ;
substance alleviation grievance not }	Ryght so my chaunce With displeaunce Doth me avaunce ; And thus an end.	So fate, I see, Still draws on me More enmity— And there's an end !
displeasure avaunce }

COMPLAINT OF CHAUCER TO HIS PURSE.

GLOSSARY.

no one else	To yow, my purse, and to noon other wight, Complayn I, for ye be my lady dere;	To you, my purse, and to no other wight, Complain I, for you are my lady dear;
if	I am so sorry now that ye been lyght, ¹ For certes, but-yf ye make me heavy cheer	I am so sorry now that you are light, For truly if you make me heavy cheer
I were	Me were as leef be layde upon my bere, For whiche unto your mercy thus I crye—	I would as lief be laid upon my bier. Therefore unto your mercy thus I cry—
be	Beeth hevvy ageyne, or elles mote I dye!	Be heavy again, or else I needs must die!
vouchsafe before	} Now voucheth sauf this day, or hyt be nyghte,	I pritheee grant this day, ere it be night, sound	That I of yow the blissful sounne may here, Or se your colour lyke the sunne bryghte, That of yelownesse hadde never pere!	That I once more your merry voice may hear, Or see your colour like the sunshine bright, Whereof the yellowness had never peer!
rival	Ye be my lyfe! ye be myn hertys stere!	You are my life, and you my heart shall steer;
rudder	Queene of comfort and goode companye, Beth hevvy ayeine, or elles moote I die!	Queen of all comfort and good company, Be heavy again, or else I needs must die!
life's	Now, purse, that ben to me my lyves lyghte,	Now, purse, who are to me my life, my light, saviour	And saveour as down in this worlde here, Oute of this tounne helpe me thurgh your myght,	And chief deliverer in this world here, Out of this city help me, by your might,
since, treasurer	} Syn that ye wole nat bene my tresorere, ²	If you no more will be my treasure dear,

¹ A play on the word: light meant also fickle or untrue.

² Tyrwhitt has treasure; Morris has treasurers, treasurer. The former seems the most appropriate to a lady-love. A similar expression is found in 'Li Congiés Adan d'Aras' (MS. de la Vallière, No. 2736 Bibl. Imp.), 'de mon cuer scés resorriere.'

GLOSSARY.

nigh

For I am shave¹ as nye as is a frere.

For I am shaved as close as any frere.

But I praye unto youre courtesye, Bethe hevye ayeyn, or elles moote I dye!

But I beseech you of your courtesye, Be heavy again, or else I needs must die!

NOTES BY THE WAY.

[Chaucer's Complaint to his Purse was written, according to Mr. Furnivall, in September, 1399, when Chaucer was in distress for money, and sent to Henry IV. as a broad hint,—which was at once attended to.

It is a very clever piece of versification, like the Good Counsel, &c., each line rhyming with the corresponding line in the other verses. He addresses his hapless purse as though it were his lady-love, and comically entreats her mercy, when he sees her inclined to be 'light.'

The two Roundels and the Virelai have been asserted and denied to be the work of Chaucer, but there is no clear evidence for either side. They may well be a portion of his many lost 'ditties and songs glad,' with which Gower said 'the land fulfilled is over all,' written 'in the floures of his youth.' The second Roundel seems, on the other hand, to belong to his later life, when he so often alluded to his corpulence. As to the Virelai, this species of lyric was very fashionable in Chaucer's time. It is skilful work, each stanza rhyming six lines together (which I have failed to follow in the translation).

Only the first two verses of the Proverbs are undoubtedly genuine; the other two, though following without any distinction in the MSS., are believed to be later work. The Proverbs appear to belong to the same period as the Good Counsel, as they suggest the pain of disappointed ambition and 'cold' following upon 'great heat' and prosperity. Perhaps Chaucer regretted not having laid up against a rainy day.]

¹ Bereft of money as a friar's tonsure is of hair.

FRAGMENTS.

THE DAISY.

GLOSSARY.	Now . . .	Now . . .
	. . . of alle the floures in the mede	. . . of all the flowerets in the mead,
	Thanne love I most thise floures white	Still love I most these flowerets white and rede	and red,
	Such as men callen daysyes in oure ¹	The same that men call daisies in our teune ²	town.
	To hem have I so gret affeccioun,	To them I bear so great affection, before	As I seyde erst, whanne comen is the	(As I have said,) when comes the
	May,	month of May,
	That in my bed ther daweth me no	That in my bed there dawns on me no day	day
am not	That I nam uppe, ³ and walkyng in	But I am up—and walking in the
	the mede,	mead—
sun	To seen this floure ayein the sonne	To see this flower against the sunrise sprede,	spread,
morning	Whan it up rysith erly by the morwe;	When it uprises early in the morrow;
	That blisful sighte softneth al my	That blissful sight, it softeneth all my sorwe.	sorrow.

Legend of Good Women.

A VISION OF A GARDEN.⁴

	A gardyn sawh I ful of blossomed	A garden saw I, full of blossomy
	bowis,	boughs,
mead	Upon a ryver, in a grenē mede,	Whereby a river had its greenest bed.
enough	Ther as swetnes evermor ynowh is,	Sweetness enough it hath, for in it grows
	With flourēs whitē, blew, yelow and	Full many a flower, white, blue,
	rede,	yellow, red:
	And colde wellē stremēs, nothing	And coldest wells are streaming,
	dede,	nothing dead,
swim	That swommen ¹ ful of smale fisshes	All swimming full of fishes small and
	lyghte,	light,
	With fynnēs rede, and scalēs sylver	With fins of red, and scales like silver bryghte.	bright.

¹ Tyrwhitt's edition.

² Our town—London.

³ Chaucer often refers to his daily early walk from London to the fields. Everybody rose at dawn then.

⁴ A mediæval garden was wholly unlike

GLOSSARY.	On every bowgh the briddes herde I	On every bough the glad birds heard synges,	I sing,
voice	With voys of aungel in her	Voiced like the angels in their har-
	armony,	mony—
themselves	That besyed hem hir briddes forthe to	Busying them, the young birds forth brynge :	to bring :
	The lytel pretty ¹ conyes to hir play	The little pretty conies to their play began to	gunnen hye :	did hie, began to	And further al aboute I gan espye.	And further all about I seem'd to spy,
timid	The dredful roo, the buk, the hert and	The dread-full roe, the buck, the hart
	hynde,	and hind,
beasts	Squerels, and bestis smale, of gentil	Squirrels, and all wild things of gentle kynde	kind.
	On instrumentes ² of strynges in acord	On instruments of strings in full accord
	Herde I so play a ravishsynge swet-	Heard I so play, a ravishing sweetnesse,	ness,
	That God, that Maker ys of al and	That God, that Maker is of all, and
	Lorde,	Lord,
	Ne herd8 never bettir, as I gesse :	Never heard any better, as I guess.
hardly	Therewith a wynde, unnethe hyt	Therewith a wind—could scarcely mighte ³ be lesse,	wind be less—
	Made in the lev8 grene a noyse softe,	Made in the leaflets green its noises soft,
birds'	Accordant to the foulys songe on	Tun'd to the tender voice of birds
	lofte.	aloft.

The Parliament of Birds.

our own over-cultivated and quite artificial gardens; it was more nearly like a shrubbery or park-land, the trees and plants growing as their nature bade, and dying in their proper seasons. There were 'beds' of guarded plants, surrounded with fences several feet high, to keep off dogs and equally destructive human beings, around which the turf grew, full of daisies and dandelions. See my illustration to the Franklin's Tale, in Chaucer for Children. The flowers of the garden were only the indigenous wild things now called 'weeds,' for the immense catalogue of importations from America and elsewhere were of course unknown. Many that have 'had their day and ceased to be' in fashion, were as yet unknown too, such as the sunflower. The red and white May, the dogrose, primrose, and the other flowers which we banish to the kitchen garden or admire only in the fields, formed the chief ornaments. We find nettles and nightshade reckoned among garden plants; so that the coloured flowers above-named may have been snow-drops, bluebells, buttercups, and May—or wild-rose, nightshade, dandelions, and meadow-sweet—according to the season. A fountain was a common ornament, built of stone rudely carved, and filled with fish; the fountain would of course be placed at the pressure of a natural spring.

¹ This line should scan thus :

The lit|tle pretty co|nies to|their play|'gan hie, or thus :

The lit|tle pret|ty co|nies to hir play|'gan hie.

The superfluous syllables run through quickly, like semi-quavers in a phrase of quavers. This forms a pretty break in the monotony of even lines, though the rhythm is not lost : Chaucer presents frequent examples of this.

² Mediaeval music was of a simple, rather mournful, description, like old Church chants, and this 'sweetness' of 'strings in accord' was in harmony with the soft wind-sounds; whilst the simile to the music in Heaven is not unseemly, since secular and Church music were similar. The instruments indicated were doubtless the rotta, a primitive guitar, shawms, and the crouth, a primitive fiddle.

³ Tyrwhitt's edition.

THE SEA-FIGHT.—ANTONY AND CLEOPATRA.

GLOSSARY.

aware	ANTONIUS, that was war, and wol nat fayle	Antony was prepar'd, and would not fail
	To meten with thise Romaynes . . .	To meet the Romans. . . .
they happened	And in the see hit happed hem to mete.	It chanc'd, at sea the meeting came about.
shoot	Up gooth the trumpe, and for to shoute and shete	Up goes the trumpet! now they shoot and shout, take pains	And paynen hem to sette on with the sonne ;	And struggle to put forward with the sun!
	With grisly sounne out gooth the grete gonne,	With grisly sound out goeth the great gun, heartily, push, at once	} And hertely they hurtelen al attones	And with good heart they push in all at once!
	And fro the toppe doune cometh the grete stones.	Now from the top down come the rattling stones—
grappling iron	} In gooth the grapnel so ful of crokes,	In goes the grappling-iron full of crooks—
	Among the ropes, and the sheryng hokes ;	Among the rigging run the shearing-hooks—
	In with the polax preseth he and he :	In with the pole-axe presseth he, and he—
	Byhynde the maste begynneth he to fle,	Behind the mast another tries to flee—
	And out agayn, and dryveth hym overborde ;	And out again, and drives him over-board—point	He styngeth hym upon his speres orde :	Now he is stuck on his spear-point—
tears	He rente the sayle with hokes lyke a sithe ;	He rends the sail with hooks, as with a scythe—
	He bryngeth the cuppe, ¹ and biddeth hem be blithe ;	He brings the cup and bids the men be blithe—
	He poureth pesen upon the hacches alidre ;	He poureth peas upon the slippery hatches—
go together	With pottes ful of lyme, ² they goon to-gedre.	With pots of lime men hurry by in batches—
	And thus the longe day in fight they spende,	And thus all day in bloody fight they spend,
	Til at the last, as every thing hath ende,	Till at the last, as all things have an end,
	Antony is shent, and put hym to the flyghte,	Antony's ruin'd, and put to shameful flight, gone	And al hys folke to-goo, that best goo myghte.	And all his men are gone, that best go might.
(Fr. pourpre)	Fleeth ek the queene, with al hir purple sayle,	The queen fled frighted, with her purple sail,
	For strokes which that went as thik as hayle :	Before the strokes which fell as thick as hail—
	No wonder was.	No wonder was!

Legend of Good Women.

¹ Drink to refresh and hearten up the men. ship. See the woodcut of a fourteenth century ship, Chaucer for Children, page 8.

² Probably quicklime to set fire to the At the top of the mast was a car in which

NOTES BY THE WAY.

[I have ventured to set these stolen fragments as single gems for the convenience of many who are prejudiced against Chaucer as a dry and wordy writer. Young scholars, hardly ready to plunge into the whole sweet depth of Chaucer's main, may enjoy these little palmfuls brought from the sea.

Nothing can be more picturesque and pretty than Chaucer's miniatures by the way. The Daisy is one of his reiterated praises of that simple flower. The 'Garden-vision' is brimful of bright and pleasant images, and I have found it for that reason a favourite piece with young children. The mildest modern poetaster could have written nothing simpler, the greatest singer could sing no sweetlier, for the scene of the garden with its sweet habitats of all fresh, free, wild things, happy in their natural order, has all the fragrance and movement of nature carried into it, and the details of scampering rabbits, and peeping eyes of timid hart and hind, and strong running streams, down to the live tints upon the fishes, are most quaint and charming. The rest of the poem is full of such miniatures. The description of the numerous birds choosing their mates on Valentine's Day shows a large knowledge of wild things' habits and the legends concerning them, from the first scene of the noisy feathered folk crowding so that Chaucer has hardly room to stand, to the last naturalistic touch when the birds tire of speechifying:—

The noyse of fowles for to be delivered
So lowde rang, 'Have done, and let us wend.'

The brief picture of a sea-fight is one of the few which Chaucer has left us, and is interesting for its details of the ancient manner of attack. It has been said of Chaucer that he scarcely alludes to contemporary events, and makes no mention of the ceaseless wars, in one of which he himself was certainly present. Chaucer was less a soldier than an artist, and his scenes of fierce combat, when they occur, have tempted him through their picturesqueness, not his ferocity. Indeed, Chaucer repeatedly expresses his dislike to painful images and dismal tales, and his experience of his one battle (of which we may trace hints in the early part of the Knight's Tale, when the 'pillours' of the dead are referred to) may have been too disagreeable for his pen. Chaucer's character was genial, kindly, warm with human passions, but not the fiercest; his love of beautiful woodland scenes where passes merry hunt or silent river, of beautiful women, with their 'clear hair' and 'assured manner,' of rich architecture and decoration, that he may have sauntered through with William of Wykeham, all point to a pacific temper and an artist's heart.]

men could stand and hurl stones or other missiles. Pens, which formed the main nourishment of sailors, were thrown to	prevent the enemy setting foot on the hatches.
---	--

AN ALPHABETICAL CATALOGUE OF BOOKS IN FICTION AND GENERAL LITERATURE PUBLISHED BY CHATTO & WINDUS
111 ST. MARTIN'S LANE
CHARING CROSS
LONDON, W.C.

[SEPT. 1898.]

About (Edmond).—The Fellah: An Egyptian Novel. Translated by Sir RANDAL ROBERTS. Post 8vo, illustrated boards, 2s.

Adams (W. Davenport), Works by.

A Dictionary of the Drama: being a comprehensive Guide to the Plays, Playwrights, Players, and Playhouses of the United Kingdom and America, from the Earliest Times to the Present Day. Crown 8vo, half-bound, 2s. 6d. [Preparing.]

Guips and Quiddities. Selected by W. DAVENPORT ADAMS. Post 8vo, cloth limp, 2s. 6d.

Agony Column (The) of 'The Times,' from 1800 to 1870. Edited with an Introduction, by ALICE CLAY. Post 8vo, cloth limp, 2s. 6d.

Aidé (Hamilton), Novels by. Post 8vo, illustrated boards, 2s. each.
Carr of Carrlyon. | Confidences.

Alden (W. L.).—A Lost Soul: Being the Confession and Defence of Charles Lindsay. Fcap. 8vo, cloth boards, 1s. 6d.

Alexander (Mrs.), Novels by. Post 8vo, illustrated boards, 2s. each.
Maid, Wife, or Widow? | Valerie's Fate. | Blind Fate.

Crown 8vo, cloth, 3s. 6d. each; post 8vo, picture boards, 2s. each.

A Life Interest. | Mona's Choice. | By Woman's Wit.

Allen (F. M.).—Green as Grass. Crown 8vo, cloth, 3s. 6d.

Allen (Grant), Works by. Crown 8vo, cloth, 6s. each.

The Evolutionist at Large. | Moorland Idylls.

Post-Prandial Philosophy. Crown 8vo, art. linen, 3s. 6d.

Crown 8vo, cloth extra, 3s. 6d. each; post 8vo, illustrated boards, 2s. each.

Babylon. 22 Illustrations. Strange Stories. Frontis. The Beckoning Hand. For Maimie's Sake. Philistia. In all Shades.	The Devil's Die. This Mortal Coil. The Tante of Shem. Frontis. The Great Taboo. Dumaresq's Daughter. Under Sealed Orders.	The Duchess of Powysland. Blood Royal. Ivan Greet's Masterpiece. The Scallywag. 24 Illusts. At Market Value.
--	--	---

Dr. Falliser's Patient. Fcap. 8vo, cloth boards, 1s. 6d.

Anderson (Mary).—Othello's Occupation. Crown 8vo, cloth, 3s. 6d.

Antipodean (The): An Australasian Annual. Edited by A. B. PATERSON and G. ESSEX EVANS. Medium 8vo, with Illustrations, 1s.

Arnold (Edwin Lester), Stories by.

The Wonderful Adventures of Phra the Phœnician. Crown 8vo, cloth extra, with 22 Illustrations by H. M. PAGET, 3s. 6d.; post 8vo, illustrated boards, 2s.

The Constable of St. Nicholas. With Frontispiece by S. L. WOOD. Crown 8vo, cloth, 3s. 6d.

Artemus Ward's Works. With Portrait and Facsimile. Crown 8vo, cloth extra, 3s. 6d.—Also a POPULAR EDITION post 8vo, picture boards, 2s.

Ashton (John), Works by. Crown 8vo, cloth extra, 7s. 6d. each.

History of the Chap-Books of the 18th Century. With 334 Illustrations Humour, Wit, and Satire of the Seventeenth Century. With 82 Illustrations.
English Caricature and Satire on Napoleon the First. With 125 Illustrations.
Modern Street Ballads. With 57 Illustrations.
Social Life in the Reign of Queen Anne. With 85 Illustrations. Crown 8vo, cloth, 3s. 6d.

2 CHATTO & WINDUS, Publishers, 111 St. Martin's Lane, London, W.C.

Bacteria, Yeast Fungi, and Allied Species, A Synopsis of. By W. B. GROVE, B.A. With 87 Illustrations. Crown 8vo, cloth extra, 3s. 6d.

Bardsley (Rev. C. Wareing, M.A.), Works by.

English Surnames: Their Sources and Significations. Crown 8vo, cloth, 7s. 6d.

Curiosities of Puritan Nomenclature. Crown 8vo, cloth, 3s. 6d.

Baring Gould (Sabine, Author of 'John Herring,' &c.), Novels by.

Crown 8vo, cloth extra, 3s. 6d. each; post 8vo, illustrated boards, 2s. each.

Red Spider.

Eve.

Barr (Robert: Luke Sharp), Stories by. Cr. 8vo, cl., 3s. 6d. each.

In a Steamer Chair. With Frontispiece and Vignette by DEMAIN HAMMOND.

From Whose Bourne, &c. With 47 Illustrations by HAL HURST and others.

A Woman Intervenes. With 8 Illustrations by HAL HURST.

Revenge! With 12 Illustrations by LANCILOT SPEED and others.

Barrett (Frank), Novels by.

Post 8vo, illustrated boards, 2s. each; cloth, 2s. 6d. each.

Battered for Life.

The Sin of Olga Kassonich.

Between Life and Death.

Folly Morrison. | Honest Davie.

Little Lady Linton.

A Prodigal's Progress.

John Ford; and His Helpmate.

A Recalling Vengeance.

Lieut. Barnabas. | Found Guilty.

For Love and Honour.

Crown 8vo, cloth, 3s. 6d. each; post 8vo, picture boards, 2s. each; cloth limp, 2s. 6d. each.

The Woman of the Iron Bracelets. | The Harding Scandal.

A Missing Witness. With 8 Illustrations by W. H. MARGETSON. Crown 8vo, cloth, 3s. 6d.

Was She Justified? Crown 8vo, cloth, gilt top, 6s.

Barrett (Joan).—Monte Carlo Stories. Fcap. 8vo, cloth, 1s. 6d.

Beaconsfield, Lord. By T. P. O'CONNOR, M.P. Cr. 8vo, cloth, 5s.

Beauchamp (Shelsley).—Grantley Grange. Post 8vo, boards, 2s.

Besant (Sir Walter) and James Rice, Novels by.

Crown 8vo, cloth extra, 3s. 6d. each; post 8vo, illustrated boards, 2s. each; cloth limp, 2s. 6d. each.

Ready-Money Workboy.

My Little Girl.

With Harp and Crown.

This Son of Vulcan.

The Golden Buttery.

The Menks of Theleme.

By Celia's Arbour.

The Chaplain of the Fleet.

The Seamy Side.

The Case of Mr. Luccraft, &c.

Traffic in Trafalgar's Bay, &c.

The Ten Years' Pinnant, &c.

*. There is also a LIBRARY EDITION of the above Twelve Volumes, handsomely set in new type on a large crown 8vo page, and bound in cloth extra, 6s. each; and a POPULAR EDITION of The Golden Buttery, medium 8vo, 6d.; cloth, 1s.

Besant (Sir Walter), Novels by.

Crown 8vo, cloth extra, 3s. 6d. each; post 8vo, illustrated boards, 2s. each; cloth limp, 2s. 6d. each.

All Sorts and Conditions of Men. With 12 Illustrations by FRED. BARNARD.

The Captains' Room, &c. With Frontispiece by E. J. WHEELER.

All in a Garden Fair. With 6 Illustrations by HARRY FURNISS.

Dorothy Forester. With Frontispiece by CHARLES GREEN.

Uncle Jack, and other Stories. | Children of Gibson.

The World Went Very Well Then. With 12 Illustrations by A. FORESTIER.

Herr Paulus: His Rise, his Greatness, and his Fall. | The Bell of St. Paul's.

For Faith and Freedom. With Illustrations by A. FORESTIER and F. WADDY.

To Call Her Mine, &c. With 9 Illustrations by A. FORESTIER.

The Holy Rose, &c. With Frontispiece by F. BARNARD.

Armour of Lyonesse: A Romance of To-day. With 12 Illustrations by F. BARNARD.

St. Katherine's by the Tower. With 12 Illustrations by C. GREEN.

Verbena Camellia Stephanotis, &c. With a Frontispiece by GORDON BROWNE.

The Ivory Gate. | The Rebel Queen.

Beyond the Dreams of Avarice. With 12 Illustrations by W. H. HYDE.

In Deacon's Orders, &c. With Frontispiece by A. FORESTIER. | The Revolt of Man.

Crown 8vo, cloth extra, 3s. 6d. each.

The Master Craftsman. | The City of Refuge. With a Frontispiece by F. S. WILSON.

A Fountain Sealed. With Frontispiece by H. G. BURGESS.

All Sorts and Conditions of Men. CHEAP POPULAR EDITION, medium 8vo, 6d.; cloth, 1s.; or bound with the POPULAR EDITION of The Golden Buttery, cloth, 2s.

The Charm, and other Drawing-room Plays. By Sir WALTER BESANT and WALTER H. POLLOCK. With 50 Illustrations by CHRIS HAMMOND and JULE GOODMAN. Crown 8vo, cloth, gilt edges, 6s.; or blue cloth, to range with the Uniform Edition of Sir WALTER BESANT'S Novels, 3s. 6d.

Fifty Years Ago. With 144 Plates and Woodcuts. Crown 8vo, cloth extra, 5s.

The Biology of Richard Jefferies. With Portrait. Crown 8vo, cloth extra, 6s.

London. With 123 Illustrations. Demy 8vo, cloth, 7s. 6d.

Westminster. With Etched Frontispiece by F. S. WALKER, R.E., and 130 Illustrations by WILLIAM PATTEN and others. Demy 8vo, cloth, 7s. 6d.

South London. With Etched Frontispiece by F. S. WALKER, R.E., and over 300 Illus. [Shortly.]

Sir Richard Whittington. With Frontispiece. Crown 8vo, art linen, 3s. 6d.

Gaspard de Colligny. With a Portrait. Crown 8vo, art linen, 3s. 6d.

Bechstein (Ludwig).—As Pretty as Seven, and other German Stories. With Additional Tales by the Brothers GRIMM, and 98 Illustrations by RICHTER. Square 8vo, cloth extra, 6s. 6d.; gilt edges, 7s. 6d.

Bellew (Frank).—The Art of Amusing: A Collection of Graceful Arts, Games, Tricks, Puzzles, and Charades. With 300 Illustrations. Crown 8vo, cloth extra, 4s. 6d.

Bennett (W. C., LL.D.).—Songs for Sailors. Post 8vo, cl. limp, 2s.

Bewick (Thomas) and his Pupils. By AUSTIN DOBSON. With 95 Illustrations. Square 8vo, cloth extra, 6s.

Bierce (Ambrose).—In the Midst of Life: Tales of Soldiers and Civilians. Crown 8vo, cloth extra, 3s. 6d.; post 8vo, illustrated boards, 2s.

Bill Nye's Comic History of the United States. With 146 Illustrations by F. OPPER. Crown 8vo, cloth extra, 3s. 6d.

Biré (Edmond).—Diary of a Citizen of Paris during 'The Terror.' Translated and Edited by JOHN DE VILLIERS. With 2 Photogravure Portraits. Two Vols., demy 8vo, cloth, 21s.

Blackburn's (Henry) Art Handbooks.

Academy Notes, 1898.

Academy Notes, 1875-79. Complete in One Vol., with 600 Illustrations. Cloth, 6s.

Academy Notes, 1880-84. Complete in One Vol., with 700 Illustrations. Cloth, 6s.

Academy Notes, 1890-94. Complete in One Vol., with 800 Illustrations. Cloth, 7s. 6d.

Grosvenor Notes, Vol. I., 1877-82. With 300 Illustrations. Demy 8vo, cloth 6s.

Grosvenor Notes, Vol. II., 1883-87. With 300 Illustrations. Demy 8vo, cloth, 6s.

Grosvenor Notes, Vol. III., 1888-90. With 230 Illustrations. Demy 8vo cloth, 3s. 6d.

The New Gallery, 1888-1892. With 250 Illustrations. Demy 8vo, cloth, 6s.

English Pictures at the National Gallery. With 114 Illustrations. 12.

Old Masters at the National Gallery. With 128 Illustrations. 12. 6d.

Illustrated Catalogue to the National Gallery. With 242 Illusts. Demy 8vo, cloth, 3s.

The Illustrated Catalogue of the Paris Salon, 1898. With 300 Sketches. 3s.

Blind (Mathilde), Poems by.

The Ascent of Man. Crown 8vo, cloth, 5s.

Dramas in Miniature. With a Frontispiece by F. MADOX BROWN. Crown 8vo, cloth, 5s.

Songs and Sonnets. Fcap. 8vo vellum and gold, 5s.

Birds of Passage: Songs of the Orient and Occident. Second Edition. Crown 8vo, linen, 6s. net.

Bourget (Paul).—A Living Lie. Translated by JOHN DE VILLIERS. With special Preface for the English Edition. Crown 8vo, cloth, 3s. 6d.

Bourne (H. R. Fox), Books by.

English Merchants: Memoirs in Illustration of the Progress of British Commerce. With 32 Illustrations. Crown 8vo, cloth, 3s. 6d.

English Newspapers: Chapters in the History of Journalism. Two Vols., demy 8vo, cloth, 25s.

The Other Side of the Emin Pasha Relief Expedition. Crown 8vo, cloth, 6s.

Boyle (Frederick), Works by. Post 8vo, illustrated bds., 2s. each.
Chronicles of No-Man's Land. | Camp Notes. | Savage Life.

Brand (John).—Observations on Popular Antiquities; chiefly illustrating the Origin of our Vulgar Customs, Ceremonies, and Superstitions. With the Additions of SIR HENRY ELLIS, and numerous Illustrations. Crown 8vo, cloth extra, 7s. 6d.

Brewer (Rev. Dr.), Works by.

The Reader's Handbook of Famous Names in Fiction, Allusions, References, Proverbs, Plots, Stories, and Poems. Together with an ENGLISH AND AMERICAN BIBLIOGRAPHY, and a LIST OF THE AUTHORS AND DATES OF DRAMAS AND OPERAS. A New Edition, Revised throughout, and Reset in New Type. Crown 8vo, cloth, 7s. 6d. (October 13).

Authors and their Works, with the Dates: being the Appendices to the Second Edition of The Reader's Handbook, separately printed. Crown 8vo, cloth limp, 2s.

A Dictionary of Miracles: Imitative, Realistic, and Dogmatic. Crown 8vo, cloth, 3s. 6d.

Brewster (Sir David), Works by. Post 8vo, cloth, 4s. 6d. each.

More Worlds than One: Creed of the Philosopher and Hope of the Christian. With Plates.

The Martyrs of Science: GALILEO, TYCHO BRAHE, and KEPLER. With Portraits.

Letters on Natural Magic. With numerous Illustrations.

Brillat-Savarin.—Gastronomy as a Fine Art. Translated by R. E. ANDERSON, M.A. Post 8vo, half-bound, 2s.

Brydges (Harold).—Uncle Sam at Home. With 91 Illustrations. Post 8vo, illustrated boards, 2s.; cloth limp, 2s. 6d.

4 CHATTO & WINDUS, Publishers, 111 St. Martin's Lane, London, W.C.

Buchanan (Robert), Novels, &c., by.

Crown 8vo, cloth extra, 3s. 6d. each; post 8vo, illustrated boards, 2s. each.
The Shadow of the Sword. With Frontispiece.
A Child of Nature. With Frontispiece.
God and the Man. With 12 Illustrations by Lady Kilpatrick. [FRED. BARNARD.]
The Martyrdom of Madeline. With Frontispiece by A. W. COOPER.
Love Me for Ever. With Frontispiece.
Annan Water. Foxglove Manor.
The New Abelard. Rachel Dene.
Matt: A Story of a Caravan. With Frontispiece.
The Master of the Mine. With Frontispiece.
The Heir of Linne. Woman and the Man.

Red and White Heather. Crown 8vo, cloth extra, 3s. 6d.

The Wandering Jew: a Christmas Carol. Crown 8vo, cloth, 6s.

The Charlatan. By ROBERT BUCHANAN and HENRY MURRAY. Crown 8vo, cloth, with a Frontispiece by T. H. ROBINSON, 3s. 6d.; post 8vo, picture boards, 2s.

Burton (Robert).—The Anatomy of Melancholy. With Translations of the Quotations. Demy 8vo, cloth extra, 7s. 6d.

Melancholy Anatomised: An Abridgment of BURTON'S ANATOMY. Post 8vo, half-bd., 2s. 6d.

Caine (Hall), Novels by. Crown 8vo, cloth extra, 3s. 6d. each.; post 8vo, illustrated boards, 2s. each; cloth limp, 2s. 6d. each.

The Shadow of a Crime. | A Son of Hagar. | The Deemster.

Also LIBRARY EDITIONS of The Deemster and The Shadow of a Crime, set in new type, crown 8vo, and bound uniform with The Christian, 6s. each; and the CHEAP POPULAR EDITION of The Deemster, medium 8vo, portrait-cover, 6d.; cloth, 1s.

Cameron (Commander V. Lovett).—The Cruise of the 'Black Prince' Privateer. Post 8vo, picture boards, 2s.

Captain Colinet, Soldier of the Empire: An Autobiography. Edited by LOREDAN LARCHEY. Translated by Mrs. CAREY. With 100 Illustrations. Crown 8vo, cloth, 3s. 6d.

Carlyle (Jane Welsh), Life of. By Mrs. ALEXANDER IRELAND. With Portrait and Facsimile Letter. Small demy 8vo, cloth extra, 7s. 6d.

Carlyle (Thomas).—On the Choice of Books. Post 8vo, cl., 1s. 6d.
Correspondence of Thomas Carlyle and R. W. Emerson, 1834-1872. Edited by C. E. NORTON. With Portraits. Two Vols., crown 8vo, cloth, 24s.

Carruth (Hayden).—The Adventures of Jones. With 17 Illustrations. Fcap. 8vo, cloth, 2s.

Chambers (Robert W.), Stories of Paris Life by. Long fcap. 8vo, cloth, 2s. 6d. each.

The King in Yellow. | In the Quarter.

Chapman's (George), Works. Vol. I., Plays Complete, including the Doubtful Ones.—Vol. II., Poems and Minor Translations, with Essay by A. C. SWINBURNE.—Vol. III., Translations of the Iliad and Odyssey. Three Vols., crown 8vo, cloth, 3s. 6d. each.

Chapple (J. Mitchell).—The Minor Chord: The Story of a Prima Donna. Crown 8vo, cloth, 3s. 6d.

Chatto (W. A.) and J. Jackson.—A Treatise on Wood Engraving, Historical and Practical. With Chapter by H. G. BOHN, and 450 fine Illusts. Large 4to, half-leather, 62s.

Chaucer for Children: A Golden Key. By Mrs. H. R. HAWEIS. With 8 Coloured Plates and 30 Woodcuts. Crown 4to, cloth extra, 3s. 6d.

Chaucer for Schools. By Mrs. H. R. HAWEIS. Demy 8vo, cloth limp, 2s. 6d.

Chess, The Laws and Practice of. With an Analysis of the Opening. By HOWARD STAUNTON. Edited by R. B. WORMALD. Crown 8vo, cloth, 5s.

The Minor Tactics of Chess: A Treatise on the Deployment of the Forces in obedience to Strategic Principle. By F. K. YOUNG and E. C. HOWELL. Long fcap. 8vo, cloth, 2s. 6d.

The Hastings Chess Tournament. Containing the Authorised Account of the 30 Games played Aug.-Sept., 1895. With Annotations by PILLSBURY, LASKER, TARRASCH, STEINITZ, SCHIFFERS, TEICHMANN, BARDELBEN, BLACKBURN, GUNSBURG, TINSLEY, MASON, and ALBIN; Biographical Sketches of the Chess Masters, and 22 Portraits. Edited by H. F. CHESHIRE. Cheaper Edition. Crown 8vo, cloth, 5s.

Clare (Austin), Stories by.

For the Love of a Lass. Post 8vo, illustrated boards, 2s.; cloth, 2s. 6d.

By the Rise of the River: Tales and Sketches in South Tynedale. Crown 8vo, buckram, gilt top, 6s.

CHATTO & WINDUS, Publishers, 111 St. Martin's Lane, London, W.C. 5

Clive (Mrs. Archer), Novels by. Post 8vo, illust. boards, 2s. each.
Paul Farroll. | Why Paul Farroll Killed his Wife.

Clodd (Edward, F.R.A.S.).—Myths and Dreams. Cr. 8vo, 3s. 6d.

Coates (Annë).—Rie's Diary. Crown 8vo, cloth, 3s. 6d.

Cobban (J. Maclaren), Novels by.

The Cure of Souls. Post 8vo, Illustrated boards, 2s.

The Red Sultan. Crown 8vo, cloth extra, 3s. 6d.; post 8vo, Illustrated boards, 2s.

The Burden of Isabel. Crown 8vo, cloth extra, 3s. 6d.

Coleman (John).—Curly: An Actor's Story. With 21 Illustrations
 by J. C. DOLLMAN. Crown 8vo, picture cover, 1s.

Coleridge (M. E.).—The Seven Sleepers of Ephesus. Fcap 8vo, cloth, 1s. 6d.; leatherette, 1s.

Collins (C. Allston).—The Bar Sinister. Post 8vo, boards, 2s.

Collins (John Churton, M.A.), Books by.

Illustrations of Tennyson. Crown 8vo, cloth extra, 6s.

Jonathan Swift. A Biographical and Critical Study. Crown 8vo, cloth extra, 8s.

Collins (Mortimer and Frances), Novels by.

Crown 8vo, cloth extra, 3s. 6d. each; post 8vo, Illustrated boards, 2s. each.

From Midnight to Midnight.

Blacksmith and Scholar.

Transmigration.

You Play me False.

The Village Comedy.

Post 8vo, Illustrated boards, 2s. each.

Sweet Anne Page. | A Fight with Fortune. | Sweet and Twenty. | Frances.

Collins (Wilkie), Novels by.

Crown 8vo, cloth extra, many Illustrated, 3s. 6d. each; post 8vo, picture boards, 2s. each; cloth limp, 2s. 6d. each.

Antonina.

Basil.

Hide and Seek.

The Woman in White.

The Moonstone.

Man and Wife.

After Dark.

The Dead Secret.

The Queen of Hearts.

No Name.

My Miscellanies.

Armsdale.

Poor Miss Finch.

Miss or Mrs.?

The New Magdalen.

The Frozen Deep.

The Law and the Lady.

The Two Destinies.

The Haunted Hotel.

The Fallen Leaves.

Jezabel's Daughter.

The Black Robe.

Heart and Science.

'I Say No.'

A Rogue's Life.

The Evil Genius.

Little Noreln.

The Legacy of Cain.

Blind Love.

POPULAR EDITIONS. Medium 8vo, 6d. each; cloth, 1s. each

The Woman in White.

The Moonstone.

Antonina.

The Woman in White and The Moonstone, POPULAR EDITION, in One Volume, medium 8vo, cloth, 2s.

Colman's (George) Humorous Works: 'Broad Grins,' 'My Nightgown and Slippers,' &c. With Life and Frontispiece. Crown 8vo, cloth extra, 3s. 6d.

Colquhoun (M. J.).—Every Inch a Soldier. Crown 8vo, cloth, 3s. 6d.; post 8vo, illustrated boards, 2s.

Colt-breaking, Hints on. By W. M. HUTCHISON. Cr. 8vo, cl., 3s. 6d.

Convalescent Cookery. By CATHERINE RYAN. Cr. 8vo, 1s.; cl., 1s. 6d.

Conway (Moncure D.).—George Washington's Rules of Civility Traced to their Sources and Restored. Fcap. 8vo, Japanese vellum, 2s. 6d.

Cook (Dutton), Novels by.

Post 8vo, Illustrated boards, 2s. each.

Leo.

Paul Foster's Daughter.

Cooper (Edward H.).—Geoffroy Hamilton. Cr. 8vo, cloth, 3s. 6d.

Cornwall.—Popular Romances of the West of England; or, The Drolls, Traditions, and Superstitions of Old Cornwall. Collected by ROBERT HUNT, F.R.S. With two Steel Plates by GEORGE CRUIKSHANK. Crown 8vo, cloth, 7s. 6d.

Cotes (V. Cecil).—Two Girls on a Barge. With 44 Illustrations by F. H. TOWNSEND. Crown 8vo, cloth extra, 3s. 6d.; post 8vo, cloth, 2s. 6d.

Cradock (C. Egbert), Stories by.

The Prophet of the Great Smoky Mountains. Post 8vo, illustrated boards, 2s.

His Vanished Star. Crown 8vo, cloth extra, 3s. 6d.

Cram (Ralph Adams).—Black Spirits and White. Fcap. 8vo, cloth, 1s. 6d.

6 CHATTO & WINDUS, Publishers, 111 St. Martin's Lane, London, W.C.

Crellin (H. N.), Books by.

Romances of the Old Saragillo. With 28 Illustrations by S. L. WOOD. Crown 8vo, cloth, 3s. 6d.
Tales of the Galiph. Crown 8vo, cloth, 2s.
The Nasaranes: A Drama. Crown 8vo, 1s.

Crim (Matt.).—Adventures of a Fair Rebel. Crown 8vo, cloth extra, with a Frontispiece by DAN. BEARD, 3s. 6d.; post 8vo, illustrated boards, 2s.

Crockett (S. R.) and others.—Tales of Our Coast. By S. R. CROCKETT, GILBERT PARKER, HAROLD FREDERIC, 'Q.', and W. CLARK RUSSELL. With 8 Illustrations by FRANK BRANGWYN. Crown 8vo, cloth, 3s. 6d.

Croker (Mrs. B. M.), Novels by. Crown 8vo, cloth extra, 3s. 6d. each; post 8vo, illustrated boards, 2s. each; cloth limp, 2s. 6d. each.

Pretty Miss Neville.	Diana Barrington.	A Family Likeness.
A Bird of Passage.	Proper Pride.	'To Let.'
Village Tales and Jungle Tragedies.	Two Masters.	Mr. Jervis.
Married or Single?	The Real Lady Hilda.

Crown 8vo, cloth extra, 3s. 6d. each.

In the Kingdom of Kerry. Interference. A Third Person.
Beyond the Pale.

Miss Balmaine's Past. Crown 8vo, buckram, gilt top, 6s.
'F. P. C.' (A New 'TIMES' NOVEL.) Crown 8vo, buckram, 6s.

[Shortly.]

Cruikshank's Comic Almanack. Complete in Two SERIES: The FIRST, from 1835 to 1843; the SECOND, from 1844 to 1852. A Gathering of the Best Humour of THACKERAY, HOOD, MAYHEW, ALBERT SMITH, A'BECKETT, ROBERT BROUGH, &c. With numerous Steel Engravings and Woodcuts by GEORGE CRUIKSHANK, HINE, LANDELLS, &c. Two Vols., crown 8vo, cloth gilt, 7s. 6d. each.
The Life of George Cruikshank. By BLANCHARD JERROLD. With 84 Illustrations and a Bibliography. Crown 8vo, cloth extra, 3s. 6d.

Cumming (C. F. Gordon), Works by. Demy 8vo, cl. ex., 8s. 6d. ea.

In the Hebrides. With an Autotype Frontispiece and 23 Illustrations.
In the Himalayas and on the Indian Plains. With 42 Illustrations.
Two Happy Years in Ceylon. With 28 Illustrations.

Via Cornwall to Egypt. With a Photogravure Frontispiece. Demy 8vo, cloth, 7s. 6d.

Cussans (John E.).—A Handbook of Heraldry; with Instructions for Tracing Pedigrees and Deciphering Ancient MSS., &c. Fourth Edition, revised, with 408 Woodcuts and 2 Coloured Plates. Crown 8vo, cloth extra, 6s.

Cyyles (W.).—Hearts of Gold. Cr. 8vo, cl., 3s. 6d.; post 8vo, bds., 2s.

Daudet (Alphonse).—The Evangelist; or, Port Salvation. Crown 8vo, cloth extra, 3s. 6d.; post 8vo, illustrated boards, 2s.

Davenant (Francis, M.A.).—Hints for Parents on the Choice of a Profession for their Sons when Starting in Life. Crown 8vo, cloth, 1s. 6d.

Davidson (Hugh Coleman).—Mr. Sadler's Daughters. With a Frontispiece by STANLEY WOOD. Crown 8vo, cloth extra, 3s. 6d.

Davies (Dr. N. E. Yorke-), Works by. Cr. 8vo, 1s. ea.; cl., 1s. 6d. ea.

One Thousand Medical Maxims and Surgical Hints.
Nursery Hints: A Mother's Guide in Health and Disease.
Foods for the Fat: The Dietetic Cure of Corpulency and of Gout.

Aids to Long Life. Crown 8vo, 2s.; cloth limp, 2s. 6d.

Davies' (Sir John) Complete Poetical Works. Collected and Edited, with Introduction and Notes, by Rev. A. B. GROSART, D.D. Two Vols., crown 8vo, cloth, 3s. 6d. each.

Dawson (Erasmus, M.B.).—The Fountain of Youth. Crown 8vo, cloth extra, with Two Illustrations by HUME NISBET, 3s. 6d.; post 8vo, illustrated boards, 2s.

De Guerin (Maurice), The Journal of. Edited by G. S. TREBUTIEN. With a Memoir by SAINT-BEUVE. Translated from the 20th French Edition by JESSIE P. FROTHINGHAM. Fcap. 8vo, half-bound, 2s. 6d.

De Maistre (Xavier).—A Journey Round my Room. Translated by HENRY ATTWELL. Post 8vo, cloth limp, 2s. 6d.

De Mille (James).—A Castle in Spain. Crown 8vo, cloth extra, with a Frontispiece, 3s. 6d.; post 8vo, illustrated boards, 2s.

Derby (The): The Blue Ribbon of the Turf. With Brief Accounts of THE OAKS. By LOUIS HENRY CURZON. Crown 8vo, cloth limp, 2s. 6d.

CHATTO & WINDUS, Publishers, 111 St. Martin's Lane, London, W.C. 7

Derwent (Leith), Novels by. Cr. 8vo, cl., 3s. 6d. ea.; post 8vo, 2s. ea.
Our Lady of Tears. | Circé's Lovers.

Dewar (T. R.).—A Ramble Round the Globe. With 220 Illustrations. Crown 8vo, cloth extra, 7s. 6d.

De Windt (Harry), Books by.

Through the Gold-Fields of Alaska to Bering Straits. With Map and 33 full-page Illustrations. Demy 8vo, cloth extra, 16s.

Stories of Travel and Adventure. Crown 8vo, cloth, 3s. 6d. [Shortly.]

Dickens (Charles), About England with. By ALFRED RIMMER.
With 57 Illustrations by C. A. VANDERHOOF and the AUTHOR. Square 8vo, cloth, 3s. 6d.

Dictionaries.

The Reader's Handbook of Famous Names in Fiction, Allusions, References, Proverbs, Plots, Stories, and Poems. Together with an ENGLISH AND AMERICAN BIBLIOGRAPHY, and a LIST OF THE AUTHORS AND DATES OF DRAMAS AND OPERAS, By Rev. E. C. BREWER, LL.D. A New Edition, Revised throughout. Cr. 8vo, cloth, 7s. 6d. [Oct. 13.]

Authors and their Works, with the Dates. Crown 8vo, cloth limp, 2s.

A Dictionary of Miracles: Imitative, Realistic, and Dogmatic. By the Rev. E. C. BREWER, LL.D. Crown 8vo, cloth, 3s. 6d.

Familiar Short Sayings of Great Men. With Historical and Explanatory Notes by SAMUEL A. BENT, A.M. Crown 8vo, cloth extra, 7s. 6d.

The Slang Dictionary: Etymological, Historical, and Anecdotal. Crown 8vo, cloth, 5s. 6d.

Words, Facts, and Phrases: A Dictionary of Curious, Quaint, and Out-of-the-Way Matters. By ELIHER EDWARDS. Crown 8vo, cloth extra, 3s. 6d.

Diderot.—The Paradox of Acting. Translated, with Notes, by WALTER HERRIES POLLOCK. With Preface by SIR HENRY IRVING. Crown 8vo, parchment, 4s. 6d.

Dobson (Austin), Works by.

Thomas Sewick and his Pupils. With 95 Illustrations. Square 8vo, cloth, 6s.

Four Frenchwomen. With Four Portraits. Crown 8vo, buckram, gilt top, 6s.

Eighteenth Century Vignettes. IN THREE SERIES. Crown 8vo, buckram, 6s. each.

Dobson (W. T.).—Poetical Ingenuities and Eccentricities. Post 8vo, cloth limp, 2s. 6d.

Donovan (Dick), Detective Stories by.

Post 8vo, illustrated boards, 2s. each; cloth limp, 2s. 6d. each.

The Man-Hunter. | Wanted!

Caught at Last.

Tracked and Taken.

Who Poisoned Hetty Duncan?

Suspicion Aroused.

A Detective's Triumphs.

In the Grip of the Law.

From Information Received.

Link by Link. | Dark Deeds.

Riddles Read.

Crown 8vo, cloth extra, 3s. 6d. each; post 8vo, illustrated boards, 2s. each; cloth, 2s. 6d. each.

The Man from Manchester. With 23 Illustrations.

Tracked to Doom. With Six full-page Illustrations by GORDON BROWNE.

The Mystery of Jamaica Terrace. | The Chronicles of Michael Danavitch.

Dowling (Richard).—Old Corcoran's Money. Crown 8vo, cl., 3s. 6d.

Doyle (A. Conan).—The Firm of Girdlestone. Cr. 8vo, cl., 3s. 6d.

Dramatists, The Old. Cr. 8vo, cl. ex., with Portraits, 3s. 6d. per Vol.

Ben Jonson's Works. With Notes, Critical and Explanatory, and a Biographical Memoir by WILLIAM GIFFORD. Edited by Colonel CUNNINGHAM. Three Vols.

Chapman's Works. Three Vols. Vol. I. contains the Plays complete; Vol. II., Poems and Minor

Translations, with an Essay by A. C. SWINBURNE; Vol. III., Translations of the Iliad and Odyssey.

Marlowe's Works. Edited, with Notes, by Colonel CUNNINGHAM. One Vol.

Massinger's Plays. From GIFFORD'S Text. Edited by Colonel CUNNINGHAM. One Vol.

Duncan (Sara Jeannette: Mrs. EVERARD COTES), Works by.

A Social Departure. With 111 Illustrations by F. H. TOWNSEND.

An American Girl in London. With 80 Illustrations by F. H. TOWNSEND.

The Simple Adventures of a Memsahib. With 37 Illustrations by F. H. TOWNSEND.

Crown 8vo, cloth extra, 3s. 6d. each.

A Daughter of To-Day. | Vernon's Aunt. With 47 Illustrations by HAL HURST.

Dutt (Ramesh C.).—England and India: A Record of Progress during One Hundred Years. Crown 8vo, cloth, 2s.

Dyer (T. F. Threlton).—The Folk-Lore of Plants. Cr. 8vo, cl., 6s.

Early English Poets. Edited, with Introductions and Annotations by Rev. A. B. GROSART, D.D. Crown 8vo, cloth boards, 3s. 6d. per Volume.

Fletcher's (Giles) Complete Poems. One Vol.

Davies' (Sir John) Complete Poetical Works. Two Vols.

Harriek's (Robert) Complete Collected Poems. Three Vols.

Sidney's (Sir Philip) Complete Poetical Works. Three Vols.

Edgumbe (Sir E. R. Pearce).—Zephyrus: A Holiday in Brazil and on the River Plate. With 41 Illustrations. Crown 8vo, cloth extra, 5s.

8 CHATTO & WINDUS, Publishers, 111 St. Martin's Lane, London, W.C.

Edwardes (Mrs. Annie), Novels by. Post 8vo, illust. bds., 2s. each.
Achie Lovell. | A Point of Honour.

A Plaster Saint. Crown 8vo, cloth, 3s. 6d. [Shortly.]

Edwardes (Ellezer).—Words, Facts, and Phrases: A Dictionary of Curious, Quaint, and Out-of-the-Way Matters. Cheaper Edition. Crown 8vo, cloth, 3s. 6d.

Edwards (M. Betham-), Novels by.

Kitty. Post 8vo, boards, 2s.; cloth, 2s. 6d. | Falleia. Post 8vo, illustrated boards, 2s.

Egerton (Rev. J. C., M.A.).—Sussex Folk and Sussex Ways.
With Introduction by Rev. Dr. H. WACE, and Four Illustrations. Crown 8vo, cloth extra, 5s.

Eggleston (Edward).—Roxy: A Novel. Post 8vo, illust. boards, 2s.

Englishman's House, The: A Practical Guide for Selecting or Building a House. By C. J. RICHARDSON. Coloured Frontispiece and 334 Illusts. Cr. 8vo, cloth, 3s. 6d.

Ewald (Alex. Charles, F.S.A.), Works by.

The Life and Times of Prince Charles Stuart, Count of Albany (THE YOUNG PERTH-DR). With a Portrait. Crown 8vo, cloth extra, 7s. 6d.

Stories from the State Papers. With Autotype Frontispiece. Crown 8vo, cloth, 6s.

Eyes, Our: How to Preserve Them. By JOHN BROWNING. Cr. 8vo, 1s.

Familiar Short Sayings of Great Men. By SAMUEL ARTHUR BENT,
A.M. Fifth Edition, Revised and Enlarged. Crown 8vo, cloth extra, 7s. 6d.

Faraday (Michael), Works by. Post 8vo, cloth extra, 4s. 6d. each.

The Chemical History of a Candle: Lectures delivered before a Juvenile Audience. Edited by WILLIAM CROOKES, F.C.S. With numerous Illustrations.

On the Various Forces of Nature, and their Relations to each other. Edited by WILLIAM CROOKES, F.C.S. With Illustrations.

Farrer (J. Anson), Works by.

Military Manners and Customs. Crown 8vo, cloth extra, 6s.

War: Three Essays, reprinted from 'Military Manners and Customs.' Crown 8vo, 1s.; cloth, 2s. 6d.

Fenn (G. Manville), Novels by.

Crown 8vo, cloth extra, 3s. 6d. each; post 8vo, illustrated boards, 2s. each.

The New Mistress. | Witness to the Dead. | The Tiger Lily. | The White Virgin.

A Woman Worth Winning. Crown 8vo, cloth, gilt top, 6s.

Fin-Bec.—The Cupboard Papers: Observations on the Art of Living and Dining. Post 8vo, cloth limp, 2s. 6d.

Fireworks, The Complete Art of Making; or, The Pyrotechnist's Treasury. By THOMAS KENTISH. With 267 Illustrations. Crown 8vo, cloth, 5s.

First Book, My. By WALTER BESANT, JAMES PAYN, W. CLARK RUSSELL, GRANT ALLEN, HALL CAINE, GEORGE R. SIMS, RUDYARD KIPLING, A. CONAN DOYLE, M. E. BRADDON, F. W. ROBINSON, H. RIDER HAGGARD, R. M. BALLANTYNE, I. ZANGWILL, MORLEY ROBERTS, D. CHRISTIE MURRAY, MARY CORELLI, J. K. JEROME, JOHN STRANGE WINTER, BRETT HARTIE, 'Q,' ROBERT BUCHANAN, and R. L. STEVENSON. With a Prefatory Story by JEROME K. JEROME, and 125 Illustrations. A New Edition. Small demy 8vo, art. linen, 3s. 6d.

Fitzgerald (Percy), Works by.

Little Essays: Passages from the Letters of CHARLES LAMB. Post 8vo, cloth, 2s. 6d.

Fatal Zero. Crown 8vo, cloth extra, 3s. 6d.; post 8vo, illustrated boards, 2s.

Post 8vo, illustrated boards, 2s. each.

Bella Donna.
Folly.

The Lady of Brantome.
Never Forgotten.

The Second Mrs. Tillotson.
Seventy-five Brooke Street.

The Life of James Boswell (of Auchinleck). With Illusts. Two Vols., demy 8vo, cloth, 24s.

The Savoy Opera. With 60 Illustrations and Portraits. Crown 8vo, cloth, 3s. 6d.

Sir Henry Irving: Twenty Years at the Lyceum. With Portrait. Crown 8vo, 1s.; cloth, 1s. 6d.

Flammarion (Camille), Works by.

Popular Astronomy: A General Description of the Heavens. Translated by J. ELLARD GORE, F.R.A.S. With Three Plates and 288 Illustrations. Medium 8vo, cloth, 10s. 6d.

Urania: A Romance. With 87 Illustrations. Crown 8vo, cloth extra, 5s.

Fletcher's (Giles, B.D.) Complete Poems: Christ's Victorie in Heaven, Christ's Victorie on Earth, Christ's Triumph over Death, and Minor Poems. With Notes by Rev. A. B. GROSART, D.D. Crown 8vo, cloth boards, 3s. 6d.

Fonblanque (Albany).—Filthy Lucre. Post 8vo, illust. boards, 2s.

CHATTO & WINDUS, Publishers, 111 St. Martin's Lane, London, W.C. 9

Forbes (Archibald).—The Life of Napoleon III. With Photogravure Frontispiece and Thirty-six full-page Illustrations. Demy 8vo, cloth, gilt top, 22s.

Fowler (J. Kersley).—Records of Old Times: Historical, Social, Political, Sporting, and Agricultural. With Eight full-page Illustrations. Demy 8vo, cloth, 10s. 6d.

Francillon (R. E.), Novels by.

Crown 8vo, cloth extra, 3s. 6d. each; post 8vo, illustrated boards, 2s. each.
One by One. | A Real Queen. | A Dog and his Shadow.
Ropes of Sand. Illustrated

Post 8vo, illustrated boards, 2s. each.
Queen Cophetua. | Olympia. | Romances of the Law. | King or Knave?
Jack Doyle's Daughter. Crown 8vo, cloth, 3s. 6d.

Frederic (Harold), Novels by. Post 8vo, cloth extra, 3s. 6d. each; illustrated boards, 2s. each.
Seth's Brother's Wife. | The Lawton Girl.

French Literature, A History of. By HENRY VAN LAUN. Three Vols., demy 8vo, cloth boards, 7s. 6d. each.

Fry's (Herbert) Royal Guide to the London Charities. Edited by JOHN LANE. Published Annually. Crown 8vo, cloth, 1s. 6d.

Gardening Books. Post 8vo, 1s. each; cloth limp. 1s. 6d. each.

A Year's Work in Garden and Greenhouse. By GEORGE GLENNY.

Household Horticulture. By TOM and JANE JERROLD. Illustrated.

The Garden that Paid the Rent. By TOM JERROLD.

My Garden Wild. By FRANCIS G. HEATH. Crown 8vo, cloth, gilt edges, 6s.

Gardner (Mrs. Alan).—Rifle and Spear with the Rajpoots: Being the Narrative of a Winter's Travel and Sport in Northern India. With numerous Illustrations by the Author and F. H. TOWNSEND. Demy 4to, half-bound, 21s.

Garrett (Edward).—The Capel Girls: A Novel. Post 8vo, illustrated boards, 2s.

Gaulot (Paul).—The Red Shirts: A Story of the Revolution. Translated by JOHN DE VILLIERS. With a Frontispiece by STANLEY WOOD. Crown 8vo, cloth, 3s. 6d.

Gentleman's Magazine, The. 1s. Monthly. Contains Stories, Articles upon Literature, Science, Biography, and Art, and 'Table Talk' by SYLVANUS URBAN.
8 Bound Volumes for recent years kept in stock, 8s. 6d. each. Cases for binding, 2s. each.*

Gentleman's Annual, The. Published Annually in November. 1s.

German Popular Stories. Collected by the Brothers GRIMM and Translated by EDGAR TAYLOR. With Introduction by JOHN RUSKIN, and 22 Steel Plates after GEORGE CRUIKSHANK. Square 8vo, cloth, 6s. 6d.; gilt edges, 7s. 6d.

Gibbon (Chas.), Novels by. Cr. 8vo, cl., 3s. 6d. ea.; post 8vo, bds., 2s. ea.

Robin Gray. With Frontispiece.

The Golden Shaft. With Frontispiece.

Loving a Dream.
Of High Degree.

Post 8vo, illustrated boards, 2s. each.

The Flower of the Forest.
The Dead Heart.
For Lack of Gold.
What Will the World Say?
For the King. A Hard Knot.
Queen of the Meadow.
In Pastures Green.

In Love and War.
A Heart's Problem.
By Head and Stream.
The Brass of Yarrow.
Fancy Free.
In Honour Bound.
Heart's Delight. | Blood-Money.

Gibney (Somerville).—Sentenced! Crown 8vo, cloth, 1s. 6d.

Gilbert (W. S.), Original Plays by. In Three Series, 2s. 6d. each.

The FIRST SERIES contains: The Wicked World—Pygmalion and Galatea—Charity—The Princess—The Palace of Truth—Trial by Jury.

The SECOND SERIES contains: Broken Hearts—Engaged—Sweethearts—Gretchen—Dan'l Druce—Tom Cobb—H.M.S. 'Pinafore'—The Sorcerer—The Pirates of Penzance.

The THIRD SERIES contains: Comedy and Tragedy—Fogarty's Fairy—Rosencrantz and Guildenstern—Patience—Princess Ida—The Mikado—Ruddigore—The Yeomen of the Guard—The Gondoliers—The Mountebanks—Utopia.

Night Original Comic Operas written by W. S. GILBERT. In Two Series. Demy 8vo, cloth, 3s. 6d. each. The FIRST containing: The Sorcerer—H.M.S. 'Pinafore'—The Pirates of Penzance—Patience—Princess Ida—The Mikado—Trial by Jury.

The SECOND SERIES containing: The Gondoliers—The Grand Duke—The Yeomen of the Guard—His Excellency—Utopia, Limited—Ruddigore—The Mountebanks—Haste to the Wedding.

The Gilbert and Sullivan Birthday Book: Quotations for Every Day in the Year, selected from Plays by W. S. GILBERT set to Music by Sir A. SULLIVAN. Compiled by ALEX. WATSON. Royal 16mo, Japanese leather, 2s. 6d.

10 CHATTO & WINDUS, Publishers, 111 St. Martin's Lane, London, W.C.

Gilbert (William), Novels by. Post 8vo, illustrated bds., 2s. each.

Dr. Austin's Guests.

The Wizard of the Mountain.

James Duke, Costermonger.

Glanville (Ernest), Novels by.

Crown 8vo, cloth extra, 3s. 6d. each; post 8vo, illustrated boards, 2s. each.

The Lost Hairdresser: A Tale of Love, Battle, and Adventure. With Two Illustrations by H. NISBET.

The Fossicker: A Romance of Mashonaland. With Two Illustrations by HUME NISBET.

A Fair Colonist. With a Frontispiece by STANLEY WOOD.

The Golden Rock. With a Frontispiece by STANLEY WOOD. Crown 8vo, cloth extra, 3s. 6d.

Kloof Yarna. Crown 8vo, picture cover, 1s.; cloth, 1s. 6d.

Tales from the Veld. With Twelve Illustrations by M. NISBET. Crown 8vo, cloth, 3s. 6d.

Glenny (George).—A Year's Work in Garden and Greenhouse:

Practical Advice as to the Management of the Flower, Fruit, and Frame Garden. Post 8vo, 1s.; cloth, 1s. 6d.

Godwin (William).—Lives of the Necromancers. Post 8vo, cl., 2s.

Golden Treasury of Thought, The: An Encyclopædia of QUOTATIONS. Edited by THEODORE TAYLOR. Crown 8vo, cloth gilt, 7s. 6d.

Gontaut, Memoirs of the Duchesse de (Gouvernante to the Children of France), 1773-1836. With Two Photogravures. Two Vols., demy 8vo, cloth extra, 21s.

Goodman (E. J.).—The Fate of Herbert Wayne. Cr. 8vo, 3s. 6d.

Greeks and Romans, The Life of the, described from Antique Monuments. By ERNST GUHL and W. KONER. Edited by Dr. F. HUEFFER. With 545 Illustrations. Large crown 8vo, cloth extra, 7s. 6d.

Greville (Henry), Novels by.

Post 8vo, illustrated boards, 2s. each.

Nikanor. Translated by ELIZA E. CHASE.

A Noble Woman. Translated by ALBERT D. VANDAM.

Griffith (Cecil).—Corinthia Marazion: A Novel. Crown 8vo, cloth extra, 3s. 6d.; post 8vo, illustrated boards, 2s.

Grundy (Sydney).—The Days of his Vanity: A Passage in the Life of a Young Man. Crown 8vo, cloth extra, 3s. 6d.; post 8vo, illustrated boards, 2s.

Habberton (John, Author of 'Helen's Babies'), Novels by.

Post 8vo, illustrated boards, 2s. each; cloth limp, 2s. 6d. each.

Bruston's Bayou.

Country Luck.

Hair, The: Its Treatment in Health, Weakness, and Disease. Translated from the German of Dr. J. PINCUS. Crown 8vo, 1s.; cloth, 1s. 6d.

Hake (Dr. Thomas Gordon), Poems by. Cr. 8vo, cl. ex., 6s. each.

New Symbols.

Legends of the Morrow.

The Serpent Play.

Maiden Ecstasy. Small 4to, cloth extra, 8s.

Halifax (C.).—Dr. Rumsey's Patient. By Mrs. L. T. MEADE and CLIFFORD HALIFAX, M.D. Crown 8vo, cloth, 3s. 6d.

Hall (Mrs. S. C.).—Sketches of Irish Character. With numerous Illustrations on Steel and Wood by MAGLISE, GILBERT, HARVEY, and GEORGE CRUIKSHANK. Small demy 8vo, cloth extra, 7s. 6d.

Hall (Owen), Novels by.

The Track of a Storm. Cheaper Edition. Crown 8vo, cloth, 3s. 6d.

Jetsam. Crown 8vo, cloth, 3s. 6d.

Halliday (Andrew).—Every-day Papers. Post 8vo, boards, 2s.

Handwriting, The Philosophy of. With over 100 Facsimiles and Explanatory Text. By DON FELIX DE SALAMANCA. Post 8vo, cloth limp, 2s. 6d.

Hanky-Panky: Easy and Difficult Tricks, White Magic, Sleight of Hand, &c. Edited by W. H. CREAMER. With 200 Illustrations. Crown 8vo, cloth extra, 4s. 6d.

Hardy (Thomas).—Under the Greenwood Tree. Crown 8vo, cloth extra, with Portrait and 15 Illustrations, 3s. 6d.; post 8vo, illustrated boards, 2s.; cloth limp, 2s. 6d.

Harte's (Bret) Collected Works. Revised by the Author. LIBRARY

- EDITION. 12 Nine Volumes, crown 8vo, cloth extra, 6s. each.
 Vol. I. COMPLETE POETICAL AND DRAMATIC WORKS. With Steel-plate Portrait.
 " II. THE LUCK OF ROARING CAMP—BOHEMIAN PAPERS—AMERICAN LEGEND.
 " III. TALES OF THE ARGONAUTS—EASTERN SKETCHES.
 " IV. GABRIEL CONROY. | Vol. V. STORIES—CONDENSED NOVELS, &c.
 " VI. TALES OF THE PACIFIC SLOPE.
 " VII. TALES OF THE PACIFIC SLOPE—II. With Portrait by JOHN PETTIE, R.A.
 " VIII. TALES OF THE PINE AND THE CYPRESS.
 " IX. BUCKEYE AND CHAPPAREL.

Bret Harte's Choice Works. In Prose and Verse. With Portrait of the Author and 40 Illustrations. Crown 8vo, cloth, 3s. 6d.

Bret Harte's Poetical Works. Printed on hand-made paper. Crown 8vo, buckram, 4s. 6d.

Some Later Verses. Crown 8vo, linen gilt, 5s.

The Queen of the Pirate Isle. With 20 Original Drawings by KATE GREENAWAY, reproduced in Colours by EDMUND EVANS. Small 4to, cloth, 5s.

Crown 8vo, cloth extra, 3s. 6d. each; post 8vo, picture boards, 2s. each.

A Wolf of the Plains. With 60 Illustrations by STANLEY L. WOOD.

A Ward of the Golden Gate. With 59 Illustrations by STANLEY L. WOOD.

Crown 8vo, cloth extra, 3s. 6d. each.

A Sappho of Green Springs, &c. With Two Illustrations by HUME NISBET.

Colonel Stantle's Client, and Some Other People. With a Frontispiece.

Susy: A Novel. With Frontispiece and Vignette by J. A. CHRISTIE.

Sally Dows, &c. With 47 Illustrations by W. D. ALMOND and others.

A Protegee of Jack Hamlin's, &c. With 26 Illustrations by W. SMALL and others.

The Bell-Ringer of Angel's, &c. With 39 Illustrations by DUDLEY HARDY and others.

Clarence: A Story of the American War. With Eight Illustrations by A. JULE GOODMAN.

Barker's Luck, &c. With 39 Illustrations by A. FORESTIER, PAUL HARDY, &c.

Devil's Ford, &c. With a Frontispiece by W. H. OREND.

The Crusade of the "Excelsior." With a Frontispiece by J. BERNARD PARTRIDGE.

Three Partners; or, The Big Strike on Heavy Tree Hill. With 8 Illustrations by J. GULICH.

Tales of Trail and Town. With Frontispiece by G. F. JACOMB-HOOD.

Post 8vo, illustrated boards, 2s. each.

Gabriel Conroy.

An Heiress of Red Dog, &c.

The Luck of Roaring Camp, & Californian Stories.

Post 8vo, illustrated boards, 2s. each; cloth, 2s. 6d. each.

Flip.

Maraja.

A Phyllis of the Sierras.

Hawes (Mrs. H. R.), Books by.

The Art of Beauty. With Coloured Frontispiece and 92 Illustrations. Square 8vo, cloth bds., 6s.

The Art of Decoration. With Coloured Frontispiece and 74 Illustrations. Sq. 8vo, cloth bds., 6s.

The Art of Dress. With 32 Illustrations. Post 8vo, 1s.; cloth, 1s. 6d.

Chaucer for Schools. Demy 8vo, cloth limp, 2s. 6d.

Chaucer for Children. With 36 Illustrations (8 Coloured). Crown 4to, cloth extra, 3s. 6d.

Hawes (Rev. H. R., M.A.), Books by.

American Humorists: WASHINGTON IRVING, OLIVER WENDELL HOLMES, JAMES RUSSELL LOWELL, ARTEMUS WARD, MARK TWAIN, and BRET HARTE. Third Edition. Crown 8vo, cloth extra, 6s.

Travel and Talk, 1885-92-95: My Hundred Thousand Miles of Travel through America—Canada—New Zealand—Tasmania—Australia—Ceylon—The Paradise of the Pacific. With Photogravure Frontispieces. A New Edition. Two Vols., crown 8vo, cloth, 12s.

Hawthorne (Julian), Novels by.

Crown 8vo, cloth extra, 3s. 6d. each; post 8vo, illustrated boards, 2s. each.

Garth. | Ellice Quantin.

Sebastian Strome. | Beatrice Randolph. With Four Illus.

Fortune's Fool. | Dust. Four Illus.

David Poindeux's Disappearance.

The Spectra of the Camera.

Post 8vo, illustrated boards, 2s. each.

Miss Cadogna.

Love—or a Name.

Hawthorne (Nathaniel).—Our Old Home. Annotated with Passages from the Author's Note-books, and Illustrated with 31 Photogravures. Two Vols., cr. 8vo, 15s.

Helps (Sir Arthur), Works by. Post 8vo, cloth limp, 2s. 6d. each.

Animals and their Masters. | Social Pressure.

Ivan de Biron: A Novel. Crown 8vo, cloth extra, 3s. 6d.; post 8vo, illustrated boards, 2s.

Henderson (Isaac).—Agatha Page: A Novel. Cr. 8vo, cl., 3s. 6d.

Henty (G. A.), Novels by.

Rajub the Juggler. With Eight Illustrations by STANLEY L. WOOD. Crown 8vo, cloth, 3s. 6d.; post 8vo, illustrated boards, 2s.

Crown 8vo, cloth, 3s. 6d. each.

Dorothy's Double.

The Queen's Cup.

Colonel Thorndyke's Secret. Crown 8vo, cloth, gilt top, 6s.

Herman (Henry).—A Leading Lady. Post 8vo, bds., 2s.; cl., 2s. 6d.

Herrick's (Robert) Hesperides, Noble Numbers, and Complete

Collected Poems. With Memorial-Introduction and Notes by the Rev. A. B. GROSART, D.D., Steel Portrait, &c. Three Vols., crown 8vo, cloth boards, 3s. 6d. each.

12 CHATTO & WINDUS, Publishers, 111 St. Martin's Lane, London, W.C.

Hertzka (Dr. Theodor).—Freeland: A Social Anticipation. Translated by ARTHUR RANSON. Crown 8vo, cloth extra, 6s.

Hesse-Wartegg (Chevalier Ernst von).—Tunis: The Land and the People. With 22 Illustrations. Crown 8vo, cloth extra, 3s. 6d.

Hill (Headon).—Zambra the Detective. Crown 8vo, cloth, 3s. 6d.; post 8vo, picture boards, 2s.; cloth, 2s. 6d.

Hill (John), Works by.
Treason-Felony. Post 8vo, boards, 2s. | The Common Ancestor. Cr. 8vo, cloth, 3s. 6d.

Hoey (Mrs. Cashel).—The Lover's Creed. Post 8vo, boards, 2s.

Holiday, Where to go for a. By E. P. SHOLL, Sir H. MAXWELL, Bart., M.P., JOHN WATSON, JANE BARLOW, MARY LOVETT CAMERON, JUSTIN H. MCCARTHY, PAUL LAMBE, J. W. GRAHAM, J. H. SALTER, PHEBE ALLEN, S. J. BECKETT, L. RIVERS VINE, and C. F. GORDON CUMMING. Crown 8vo, 12s.; cloth, 12s. 6d.

Hollingshead (John).—Niagara Spray. Crown 8vo, 1s.

Holmes (Gordon, M.D.).—The Science of Voice Production and Voice Preservation. Crown 8vo, 12s.; cloth, 12s. 6d.

Holmes (Oliver Wendell), Works by.
The Autocrat of the Breakfast-Table. Illustrated by J. GORDON THOMSON. Post 8vo, cloth limp, 2s. 6d.—Another Edition, post 8vo, cloth, 2s.
The Autocrat of the Breakfast-Table and The Professor at the Breakfast-Table. In One Vol. Post 8vo, half-bound, 2s.

Hood's (Thomas) Choice Works in Prose and Verse. With Life of the Author, Portrait, and 200 Illustrations. Crown 8vo, cloth, 3s. 6d.
Hood's Whims and Oddities. With 85 Illustrations. Post 8vo, half-bound, 2s.

Hood (Tom).—From Nowhere to the North Pole: A Noah's Arkæological Narrative. With 25 Illustrations by W. BRUNTON and E. C. BARNES. Cr. 8vo, cloth, 6s.

Hook's (Theodore) Choice Humorous Works; including his Ludicrous Adventures, Bone Mots, Puns, and Hoaxes. With Life of the Author, Portraits, Facsimiles and Illustrations. Crown 8vo, cloth extra, 7s. 6d.

Hooper (Mrs. Geo.).—The House of Raby. Post 8vo, boards, 2s.

Hopkins (Tighe).—'Twixt Love and Duty.' With a Frontispiece. Crown 8vo, cloth, 3s. 6d.

Horne (R. Hengist).—Orion: An Epic Poem. With Photograph Portrait by SUMMERS. Tenth Edition. Crown 8vo, cloth extra, 7s.

Hungerford (Mrs., Author of 'Molly Bawn'), Novels by.

A Maiden All Forlorn.	A Modern Circle.	An Unsatisfactory Lover.
Marvel.	A Mental Struggle.	Lady Patty.
In Durand's Villa.
Crown 8vo, cloth extra, 3s. 6d. each; post 8vo, illustrated boards, 2s. each; cloth limp, 2s. 6d. each.
Lady Verner's Flight.	The Professor's Experiment.
The Red-House Mystery.	Mora Grains.
The Three Graces.

Crown 8vo, cloth extra, 3s. 6d. each.

An Anxious Moment.	A Point of Conscience.
April's Lady.	Peter's Wife. Loisie.

Hunt's (Leigh) Essays: A Tale for a Chimney Corner, &c. Edited by EDMUND OLLIER. Post 8vo, half-bound, 2s.

Hunt (Mrs. Alfred), Novels by.

Crown 8vo, cloth extra, 3s. 6d. each; post 8vo, illustrated boards, 2s. each.

The Leadon Casket.	Self-Condemed.	That Other Person.
Thornicroft's Model. Post 8vo, boards, 2s.	Mrs. Juliet. Crown 8vo, cloth extra, 3s. 6d.

Hutchinson (W. M.).—Hints on Colt-breaking. With 25 Illustrations. Crown 8vo, cloth extra, 3s. 6d.

Hydrophobia: An Account of M. PASTEUR'S System; The Technique of the Method, and Statistics. By RENAUD SUZOR, M.B. Crown 8vo, cloth extra, 6s.

Hyne (C. J. Cutcliffe).—Honour of Thieves. Cr. 8vo, cloth, 3s. 6d.

CHATTO & WINDUS, Publishers, 111 St. Martin's Lane, London, W.C. 13

Impressions (The) of Aureole. Cheaper Edition, with a New Preface. Post 8vo, bluish-rose paper and cloth, 2s. 6d.

Indoor Paupers. By ONE OF THEM. Crown 8vo, cloth, 1s. 6d.

Innkeeper's Handbook (The) and Licensed Victualler's Manual. By J. TREVOR-DAVIES. Crown 8vo, 1s.; cloth, 1s. 6d.

Irish Wit and Humour, Songs of. Collected and Edited by A. PERCEVAL GRAVES. Post 8vo, cloth limp, 2s. 6d.

Irving (Sir Henry) : A Record of over Twenty Years at the Lyceum. By PERCY FITZGERALD. With Portrait. Crown 8vo, 1s.; cloth, 1s. 6d.

James (C. T. C.). — A Romance of the Queen's Hounds. Post 8vo, cloth limp, 1s. 6d.

Jameson (William). — My Dead Self. Post 8vo, bds., 2s.; cl., 2s. 6d.

Japp (Alex. H., LL.D.). — Dramatic Pictures, &c. Cr. 8vo, cloth, 5s.

Jay (Harriett), Novels by. Post 8vo, illustrated boards, 2s. each.
The Dark Colleen. | The Queen of Connaught.

Jefferies (Richard), Books by. Post 8vo, cloth limp, 2s. 6d. each.
Nature near London. | The Life of the Fields. | The Open Air.
* Also the HAND-MADE PAPER EDITION, crown 8vo, buckram, gilt top, 6s. each.

The Eulogy of Richard Jefferies. By Sir WALTER BESANT. With a Photograph Portrait. Crown 8vo, cloth extra, 6s.

Jennings (Henry J.), Works by.

Curiosities of Criticism. Post 8vo, cloth limp, 2s. 6d.
Lord Tennyson : A Biographical Sketch. With Portrait. Post 8vo, 1s.; cloth, 1s. 6d.

Jerome (Jerome K.), Books by.

Stageland. With 64 Illustrations by J. BERNARD PARTRIDGE. Fcap. 4to, picture cover, 1s.
John Ingerfield, &c. With 9 Illusts. by A. S. BOYD and JOHN GULICH. Fcap. 8vo, pic. cov. 1s. 6d.
The Frude's Progress : A Comedy by J. K. JEROME and EDEN PHILLIPPS. Cr. 8vo, 1s. 6d.

Jerrold (Douglas). — The Barber's Chair; and The Hedgehog Letters. Post 8vo, printed on laid paper and half-bound, 2s.

Jerrold (Tom), Works by. Post 8vo, 1s. ea.; cloth limp, 1s. 6d. each.
The Garden that Paid the Rent.

Household Horticulture : A Gossip about Flowers. Illustrated.

Jesse (Edward). — Scenes and Occupations of a Country Life. Post 8vo, cloth limp, 2s.

Jones (William, F.S.A.), Works by. Cr. 8vo, cl. extra, 3s. 6d. each.
Finger-Ring Lore : Historical, Legendary, and Anecdotal. With Hundreds of Illustrations.

Credulities, Fasts and Presents. Including the Sea and Seamen, Miners, Tailsmans, Word and Letter Divination, Exorcising and Blessing of Animals, Birds, Eggs, Luck, &c. With Frontispiece.
Crowns and Coronations : A History of Regalia. With 91 Illustrations.

Jonson's (Ben) Works. With Notes Critical and Explanatory, and a Biographical Memoir by WILLIAM GIFFORD. Edited by Colonel CUNNINGHAM. Three Vols. crown 8vo, cloth extra, 3s. 6d. each.

Josephus, The Complete Works of. Translated by WHISTON. Containing 'The Antiquities of the Jews' and 'The Wars of the Jews.' With 52 Illustrations and Maps. Two Vols., demy 8vo, half-bound, 12s. 6d.

Kempt (Robert). — Pencil and Palette : Chapters on Art and Artists. Post 8vo, cloth limp, 2s. 6d.

Kershaw (Mark). — Colonial Facts and Fictions : Humorous Sketches. Post 8vo, illustrated boards, 2s.; cloth, 2s. 6d.

King (R. Ashe), Novels by.

Post 8vo, illustrated boards, 2s. each.

'The Wearing of the Green.' | Passion's Slave. | Ball Barry.

A Drawn Game. Crown 8vo, cloth, 3s. 6d.; post 8vo, illustrated boards, 2s.

14 CHATTO & WINDUS, Publishers, 111 St. Martin's Lane, London, W.C.

Knight (William, M.R.C.S., and Edward, L.R.C.P.). — The Patient's Vade Mecum: How to Get Most Benefit from Medical Advice. Cr. 8vo, 12. ; cl., 12. 6d.

Knights (The) of the Lion: A Romance of the Thirteenth Century. Edited, with an Introduction, by the MARQUESS OF LORNE, K.T. Crown 8vo, cloth extra, 6s.

Lamb's (Charles) Complete Works in Prose and Verse, including Poetry for Children, and 'Prince Dornus.' Edited, with Notes and Introduction, by R. H. SHEPHERD. With Two Portraits and Facsimile of the 'Essay on Roast Pig.' Crown 8vo, cloth, 3s. 6d.

The Essays of Elia. Post 8vo, printed on laid paper and half-bound, 2s.

Little Essays: Sketches and Characters by CHARLES LAMB, selected from his Letters by PERCY FITZGERALD. Post 8vo, cloth limp, 2s. 6d.

The Dramatic Essays of Charles Lamb. With Introduction and Notes by BRANDER MATTHEWS, and Steel-plate Portrait. Fcap. 8vo, half-bound, 2s. 6d.

Landor (Walter Savage).—Citation and Examination of William Shakspeare, &c., before Sir Thomas Lucy, touching Deer-stealing, 19th September, 1592. To which is added, A Conference of Master Edmund Spenser with the Earl of Essex, touching the State of Ireland, 1595. Fcap. 8vo, half-Roxburgh, 2s. 6d.

Lane (Edward William).—The Thousand and One Nights, commonly called in England The Arabian Nights' Entertainments. Translated from the Arabic, with Notes. Illustrated with many hundred Engravings from Designs by HARVEY. Edited by EDWARD STANLEY POOLB. With Preface by STANLEY LANE-POOLB. Three Vols., demy 8vo, cloth, 7s. 6d. ea.

Larwood (Jacob), Works by.

Anecdotes of the Clergy. Post 8vo, laid paper, half-bound, 2s.

Post 8vo, cloth limp, 2s. 6d. each.

Forensic Anecdotes.

Theatrical Anecdotes.

Lehmann (R. C.), Works by. Post 8vo, 1s. each; cloth, 1s. 6d. each.

Harry Fludyar at Cambridge.

Conversational Hints for Young Shooters: A Guide to Polite Talk.

Leigh (Henry S.).—Carols of Cockayne. Printed on hand-made paper, bound in buckram, 5s.

Leland (C. Godfrey). — A Manual of Mending and Repairing. With Diagrams. Crown 8vo, cloth, 5s.

Lepelletier (Edmond). — Madame Sans-Gêne. Translated from the French by JOHN DE VILLIERS. Crown 8vo, cloth, 3s. 6d. ; post 8vo, picture boards, 2s.

Leys (John).—The Lindsays: A Romance. Post 8vo, illust. bds., 2s.

Lilburn (Adam).—A Tragedy in Marble. Cr. 8vo, cloth, 3s. 6d.

Lindsay (Harry, Author of 'Methodist Idylls'), Novels by.

Rhoda Roberts. Crown 8vo, cloth, 3s. 6d.

The Jacobite: A Romance of the Conspiracy of 'The Forty.' Crown 8vo, cloth, gilt top, 6s.

Linton (E. Lynn), Works by.

Crown 8vo, cloth extra, 3s. 6d. each ; post 8vo, illustrated boards, 2s. each.

Patricia Kemball. 10s.

The Atonement of Leam Dundas.

The World Well Lost. With 12 Illusts.

The One Too Many.

Under which Lord ? With 12 Illustrations.

'My Love!' | Sowing the Wind.

Paston Caraw, Millionaire and Miser.

Dulcie Everton.

Post 8vo, illustrated boards, 2s. each.

The Rebel of the Family.

With a Silken Thread.

Post 8vo, cloth limp, 2s. 6d. each.

Witch Stories.

Ourselves: Essays on Women.

Freeshooting: Extracts from the Works of Mrs. LYNN LINTON.

Lucy (Henry W.).—Gideon Fleyce: A Novel. Crown 8vo, cloth extra, 3s. 6d. ; post 8vo, illustrated boards, 2s.

Macaipine (Avery), Novels by.

Terena Itasca. Crown 8vo, cloth extra, 1s.

Broken Wings. With Six Illustrations by W. J. HENNESSY. Crown 8vo, cloth extra, 6s.

MacColl (Hugh), Novels by.

Mr. Stranger's Sealed Packet. Post 8vo, illustrated boards, 2s.

Ednor Whitlock. Crown 8vo, cloth extra, 6s.

Macdonell (Agnes).—Quaker Cousins. Post 8vo, boards, 2s.

MacGregor (Robert).—Pastimes and Players: Notes on Popular Games. Post 8vo, cloth limp, 2s. 6d.

MacKay (Charles, LL.D.). — Interludes and Undertones; or, Music at Twilight. Crown 8vo, cloth extra, 6s.

McCarthy (Justin, M.P.), Works by.

A History of Our Own Times, from the Accession of Queen Victoria to the General Election of 1880. LIBRARY EDITION. Four Vols., demy 8vo, cloth extra, 12s. each.—Also a POPULAR EDITION, in Four Vols., crown 8vo, cloth extra, 6s. each.—And the JUBILEE EDITION, with an Appendix of Events to the end of 1886, in Two Vols., large crown 8vo, cloth extra, 7s. 6d. each.
A History of Our Own Times, from 1880 to the Diamond Jubilee. Demy 8vo, cloth extra, 12s. Uniform with the LIBRARY EDITION of the first Four Volumes.
A Short History of Our Own Times. One Vol., crown 8vo, cloth extra, 6s.—Also a CHEAP POPULAR EDITION, post 8vo, cloth limp, 6d.
A History of the Four Georges. Four Vols., demy 8vo, cl. ex., 12s. each. [Vols. I. & II. ready. (Shortly).]
My Reminiscences. Two Vols., demy 8vo, cloth, 24s.

Crown 8vo, cloth extra, 3s. 6d. each; post 8vo, illustrated boards, 2s. each; cloth limp, 2s. 6d. each.

The Waterdale Neighbours.

My Enemy's Daughter.

A Fair Sakon.

Linley Rochford.

Dear Lady Diadain.

Miss Misanthrope. With 12 Illustrations.

Donna Quixote. With 12 Illustrations.

The Comet of a Season.

Maid of Athens. With 12 Illustrations.

Camelia: A Girl with a Fortune.

The Dictator.

Red Diamonds. | The Riddle Ring.

The Three Disgraces, and other Stories. Crown 8vo, cloth, 3s. 6d.

'The Right Honourable.' By JUSTIN MCCARTHY, M.P., and Mrs. CAMPBELL PRARD. Crown 8vo, cloth extra, 6s.

McCarthy (Justin Huntly), Works by.

The French Revolution. (Constituent Assembly, 1789-91). Four Vols., demy 8vo, cloth, 12s. each.

An Outline of the History of Ireland. Crown 8vo, 1s.; cloth, 1s. 6d.

Ireland Since the Union: Sketches of Irish History, 1798-1886. Crown 8vo, cloth, 6s.

Rads in London: Poems. Small 8vo, gold cloth, 3s. 6d.

Our Sensation Novel. Crown 8vo, picture cover, 1s.; cloth limp, 1s. 6d.

Doom: An Atlantic Episode. Crown 8vo, picture cover, 1s.

Dolly: A Sketch. Crown 8vo, picture cover, 1s.; cloth limp, 1s. 6d.

Lilly Lass: A Romance. Crown 8vo, picture cover, 1s.; cloth limp, 1s. 6d.

The Thousand and One Days. With Two Photogravures. Two Vols., crown 8vo, half-bd., 12s.

A London Legend. Crown 8vo, cloth, 3s. 6d.

The Royal Christopher. Crown 8vo, cloth, 3s. 6d.

MacDonald (George, LL.D.), Books by.

Works of Fancy and Imagination. Ten Vols., 16mo, cloth, gilt edges, in cloth case, 12s.; or the Volumes may be had separately, in Grolier cloth, at 2s. 6d. each.

Vol. I. WITHIN AND WITHOUT.—THE HIDDEN LIFE.

" II. THE DISCIPLE.—THE GOSPEL WOMEN.—BOOK OF SONNETS.—ORGAN SONGS.

" III. VIOLET SONGS.—SONGS OF THE DAYS AND NIGHTS.—A BOOK OF DREAMS.—ROADSIDE POEMS.—POEMS FOR CHILDREN.

" IV. PARABLES.—BALLADS.—SCOTCH SONGS.

" V. & VI. PHANTASIES: A Faerie Romance. | Vol. VII. THE PORTENT.

" VIII. THE LIGHT PRINCESS.—THE GIANT'S HEART.—SHADOWS.

" IX. CROSS PURPOSES.—THE GOLDEN KEY.—THE CARASOYN.—LITTLE DAYLIGHT.

" X. THE CRUEL PAINTER.—THE WOV O' RIVVEN.—THE CASTLE.—THE BROKEN SWORDS.—THE GRAY WOLF.—UNCLE CORNELIUS.

Poetical Works of George MacDonald. Collected and Arranged by the Author. Two Vols., crown 8vo, buckram, 12s.

A Threefold Cord. Edited by GEORGE MACDONALD. Post 8vo, cloth, 5s.

Phantasies: A Faerie Romance. With 25 Illustrations by J. BULL. Crown 8vo, cloth extra, 3s. 6d.

Feather and Snow: A Novel. Crown 8vo, cloth extra, 3s. 6d.; post 8vo, illustrated boards, 2s.

Edith: A Romance. SECOND EDITION. Crown 8vo, cloth extra, 6s.

MacLise Portrait Gallery (The) of Illustrious Literary Characters: 85 Portraits by DANIEL MACLISE; with Memoirs—Biographical, Critical, Bibliographical, and Anecdotal—Illustrative of the Literature of the former half of the Present Century, by WILLIAM BATES, B.A. Crown 8vo, cloth extra, 3s. 6d.

Macquoid (Mrs.), Works by. Square 8vo, cloth extra, 6s. each.

In the Ardennes. With 50 Illustrations by THOMAS R. MACQUOID.

Pictures and Legends from Normandy and Brittany. 34 Illust. by T. R. MACQUOID.

Through Normandy. With 52 Illustrations by T. R. MACQUOID, and a Map.

Through Brittany. With 35 Illustrations by T. R. MACQUOID, and a Map.

About Yorkshire. With 67 Illustrations by T. R. MACQUOID.

Post 8vo, illustrated boards, 2s. each.

The Evil Eye, and other Stories.

Lost Rose, and other Stories.

Magician's Own Book, The: Performances with Eggs, Hats, &c.

Edited by W. H. CREMER. With 200 Illustrations. Crown 8vo, cloth extra, 4s. 6d.

Magic Lantern, The, and its Management: Including full Practical

Directions. By T. C. HEPPWORTH. With 10 Illustrations. Crown 8vo, 1s.; cloth, 1s. 6d.

Magna Charta: An Exact Facsimile of the Original in the British Museum, 3 feet by 2 feet, with Arms and Seals emblazoned in Gold and Colours, 5s.

Malloy (Sir Thomas).—Mort d'Arthur: The Stories of King

Arthur and of the Knights of the Round Table. (A Selection.) Edited by B. MONTGOMERIE RAMKING. Post 8vo, cloth limp, 2s.

16 CHATTO & WINDUS, Publishers, 111 St. Martin's Lane, London, W.C.

Mallock (W. H.), Works by.

The New Republic. Post 8vo, picture cover, 2s.; cloth limp, 2s. 6d.
The New Paul & Virginia; Positivism on an Island. Post 8vo, cloth, 2s. 6d.
A Romance of the Nineteenth Century. Crown 8vo, cloth 6s.; post 8vo, illust. boards, 2s.

Poems. Small 4to, parchment, 8s.
Is Life Worth Living? Crown 8vo, cloth extra, 6s.

Margueritte (Paul and Victor).—The Disaster. Translated by FREDERIC LEES. Crown 8vo, cloth, 3s. 6d.

Marlowe's Works. Including his Translations. Edited, with Notes and Introductions, by Colonel CUNNINGHAM. Crown 8vo, cloth extra, 3s. 6d.

Massinger's Plays. From the Text of WILLIAM GIFFORD. Edited by Col. CUNNINGHAM. Crown 8vo, cloth extra, 3s. 6d.

Masterman (J.).—Half-a-Dozen Daughters. Post 8vo, boards, 2s.

Matthews (Brander).—A Secret of the Sea, &c. Post 8vo, illustrated boards, 2s.; cloth limp, 2s. 6d.

Meade (L. T.), Novels by.

A Soldier of Fortune. Crown 8vo, cloth, 3s. 6d.; post 8vo, illustrated boards, 2s.

In an Iron Grip. Crown 8vo, cloth, 3s. 6d. each.
The Voice of the Charming. With 8 Illustrations.
Dr. Rumsey's Patient. By L. T. MEADE and CLIFFORD HALIFAX, M.D.
On the Brink of a Chasm. Crown 8vo, cloth, gilt top, 6s.

Merrick (Leonard), Novels by.

The Man who was Good. Post 8vo, picture boards, 2s.

This Stage of Fools. Crown 8vo, cloth, 3s. 6d. each.
Cynthia: A Daughter of the Philistines.

Mexican Mustang (On a), through Texas to the Rio Grande. By A. E. SWERT and J. ARMOY KNOX. With 265 Illustrations. Crown 8vo, cloth extra, 7s. 6d.

Middlemass (Jean), Novels by. Post 8vo, illust. boards, 2s. each.
Touch and Go. Mr. Dorrillon.

Miller (Mrs. F. Fenwick).—Physiology for the Young; or, The House of Life. With numerous Illustrations. Post 8vo, cloth limp, 2s. 6d.

Milton (J. L.), Works by. Post 8vo, 1s. each; cloth, 1s. 6d. each.

The Hygiene of the Skin. With Directions for Diet, Soaps, Baths, Wines, &c.
The Bath in Diseases of the Skin.
The Laws of Life, and their Relation to Diseases of the Skin.

Minto (Wm.).—Was She Good or Bad? Cr. 8vo, 1s.; cloth, 1s. 6d.

Mitford (Bertram), Novels by. Crown 8vo, cloth extra, 3s. 6d. each.

The Gun-Runner: A Romance of Zululand. With a Frontispiece by STANLEY L. WOOD.
The Luck of Gerard Bridgeley. With a Frontispiece by STANLEY L. WOOD.
The King's Assagai. With Six full-page Illustrations by STANLEY L. WOOD.
Renshaw Fanning's Quest. With a Frontispiece by STANLEY L. WOOD.

Molesworth (Mrs.).—Hathercourt Rectory. Post 8vo, illustrated boards, 2s.

Moncrieff (W. D. Scott).—The Abdication: An Historical Drama.
With Seven Etchings by JOHN PETTIE, W. Q. ORCHARDSON, J. MACWHIRTER, COLIN HUNTER, R. MACBETH and TOM GRAHAM. Imperial 4to, buckram, 21s.

Moore (Thomas), Works by.

The Epicurean; and Aicaphron. Post 8vo, half-bound, 2s.
Prose and Verse: including Suppressed Passages from the MEMOIRS OF LORD BYRON. Edited by R. H. SHEPHERD. With Portrait. Crown 8vo, cloth extra, 7s. 6d.

Muddock (J. E.) Stories by.

Wald Marian and Robin Hood. Crown 8vo, cloth extra, 3s. 6d. each.
Basile the Jester. With Frontispiece by STANLEY WOOD.
Young Loobinwar. Post 8vo, illustrated boards, 2s. each.
The Dead Man's Secret. From the Bosom of the Deep.
Stories Weird and Wonderful. Post 8vo, illustrated boards, 2s.; cloth, 2s. 6d.

Murray (D. Christie), Novels by.

Crown 8vo, cloth extra, 3s. 6d. each; post 8vo, illustrated boards, 2s. each.
A Life's Atonement. A Model Father. Bob Martin's Little Girl.
Joseph's Coat. 12 Illusts. Old Blazer's Hero. Time's Revenges.
Coals of Fire. 3 Illusts. Cynic Fortune. Frontisp. A Wasted Crime.
Yal Strange. By the Gate of the Sea. In Direct Paril.
Hearst. A Bit of Human Nature. Mount Despair.
The Way of the World. First Person Singular. A Capful o' Nails.
The Making of a Novelist: An Experiment in Autobiography. With a Colotype Portrait. Cr. 8vo, buckram, 3s. 6d.
My Contemporaries in Fiction. Crown 8vo, buckram, 3s. 6d.
This Little World. Crown 8vo, cloth, gilt top, 6s.
Tales in Prose and Verse. With Frontispiece by ARTHUR HOPKINS. Cr. 8vo, cloth, 3s. 6d.
A Race for Millions. Crown 8vo, cloth, 3s. 6d.
The Church of Humanity. Crown 8vo, cloth, gilt top, 6s. [Preparing.]

Murray (D. Christie) and Henry Herman, Novels by.

Crown 8vo, cloth extra, 3s. 6d. each; post 8vo, illustrated boards, 2s. each.
One Traveller Returns. The Bishops' Bible.
Paul Jones's Alias, &c. With Illustrations by A. FORESTIER and G. NICOLET.

Murray (Henry), Novels by.

Post 8vo, illustrated boards, 2s. each; cloth, 2s. 6d. each.
A Game of Bluff. A Song of Sixpence.

Newbolt (Henry).—Taken from the Enemy. Fcp. 8vo, cloth, 1s. 6d.; leatherette, 1s.

Nisbet (Hume), Books by.

'Ball Up.' Crown 8vo, cloth extra, 3s. 6d.; post 8vo, illustrated boards, 2s.
Dr. Bernard St. Vincent. Post 8vo, illustrated boards, 2s.
Lessons in Art. With 21 Illustrations. Crown 8vo, cloth extra, 2s. 6d.

Norris (W. E.), Novels by.

Saint Ann's. Crown 8vo, cloth, 3s. 6d.; post 8vo, picture boards, 2s.
Billy Ballew. With a Frontispiece by F. H. TOWNSEND. Crown 8vo, cloth, 3s. 6d.

O'Hanlon (Alice), Novels by. Post 8vo, illustrated boards, 2s. each.

The Unforeseen. Chance? or Fate?

Ohnet (Georges), Novels by. Post 8vo, illustrated boards, 2s. each.

Doctor Rameau. A Last Love.
A Weird Gift. Crown 8vo, cloth, 3s. 6d.; post 8vo, picture boards, 2s.

Oliphant (Mrs.), Novels by. Post 8vo, illustrated boards, 2s. each.

The Primrose Path. Whiteladies.
The Greatest Heiress in England.
The Sorceress. Crown 8vo, cloth, 3s. 6d.

O'Reilly (Mrs.).—Phoebe's Fortunes. Post 8vo, illust. boards, 2s.

O'Shaughnessy (Arthur), Poems by:

Musie and Moonlight. Fcap. 8vo, cloth extra, 7s. 6d. each.
Lays of France. Crown 8vo, cloth extra, 10s. 6d. Songs of a Worker.

Ouida, Novels by. Cr. 8vo, cl., 3s. 6d. ea.; post 8vo, illust. bds., 2s. ea.

Held in Bondage.	A Dog off Fianders.	In Maramma.	Wanda.
Tricotrin.	Pascarel.	Bimbi.	Syrin.
Strathmore.	Two Wooden Shoes.	Francesca.	Othmar.
Cecil Castelmagne's Gage.	In a Winter City.	Princess Napraxine.
Under Two Flags.	Ariadne.	Guideroy.	Rufino.
Puck.	A Village Commune.	Two Offenders.
Folle-Farine.	Moths.	Santa Barbara.
	Pipistrello.

POPULAR EDITIONS. Medium 8vo, 6d. each; cloth, 1s. each.
Under Two Flags. Moths.

Under Two Flags and Moths. POPULAR EDITION, in One Volume, medium 8vo, cloth, 2s.
Wisdom, Wit, and Fables, Selected from the Works of OUIDA by F. SYDNEY MORRIS. Post 8vo, cloth extra, 5s.—CHEAP EDITION, illustrated boards, 2s.

Page (H. A.).—Thoreau's His Life and Aims. With Portrait. Post 8vo, cloth, 2s. 6d.

Pandurang Hari; or, Memoirs of a Hindoo. With Preface by Sir BARTLE FRERE. Post 8vo, illustrated boards, 2s.

Parker (Rev. Joseph, D.D.).—Might Have Been: some Life Notes. Crown 8vo, cloth, 6s.

Pascal's Provincial Letters. A New Translation, with Historical Introduction and Notes by T. M'CRIB, D.D. Post 8vo, cloth limp, 2s.

Paul (Margaret A.).—Gentle and Simple. Crown 8vo, cloth, with Frontispiece by HELEN PATTERSON, 3s. 6d.; post 8vo, illustrated boards, 2s.

Payn (James), Novels by.

Crown 8vo, cloth extra, 3s. 6d. each; post 8vo, illustrated boards, 2s. each.

Lost Sir Mashingford.
Walter's Word. | A County Family.
Less Black than We're Painted.
By Proxy. | For Cash Only.
High Spirits.
Under One Roof.
A Confidential Agent. With 12 Illusts.
A Grape from a Thorn. With 12 Illusts.

Holiday Tasks.
The Canon's Ward. With Portrait.
The Talk of the Town. With 12 Illusts.
Glow-Worm Tales.
The Mystery of Mirbridge.
The Word and the Will.
The Burnt Million.
Sunny Stories. | A Trying Patient.

Post 8vo illustrated boards, 2s. each.

Humorous Stories. | From Exile.
The Foster Brothers.
The Family Scapgrace.
Married Beneath Him.
Bentinck's Tutor.
A Perfect Treasure.
Like Father, Like Son.
A Woman's Vengeance.
Carlton's Year. | Cecil's Tryst.
Murphy's Master. | At Her Mercy.

The Clyffards of Clyffe.
Found Dead. | Gwendoline's Harvest.
Mirk Abbey. | A Marine Residence.
Some Private Views.
Not Wooded, But Won.
Two Hundred Pounds Reward.
The Best of Husbands.
Halves. | What He Cost Her.
Fallen Fortunes. | A Memory.
A Prince of the Blood.

A Modern Dick Whittington; or, A Patron of Letters. With a Portrait of the Author. Crown 8vo, cloth, 3s. 6d.

In Peril and Privation. With 17 Illustrations. Crown 8vo, cloth, 3s. 6d.

Notes from the 'News.' Crown 8vo, portrait cover, 1s.; cloth, 1s. 6d.

By Proxy. POPULAR EDITION, medium 8vo, 6d.; cloth, 1s.

Payne (Will).—Jerry the Dreamer. Crown 8vo, cloth, 3s. 6d.

Pennell (H. Chomondeley), Works by. Post 8vo, cloth, 2s. 6d. ea.

Fuck on Pegasus. With Illustrations.

Pegasus Re-Saddled. With Ten full-page Illustrations by G. DU MAURIER.

The Muses of Mayfair: Vers de Société. Selected by H. C. PENNELL.

Phelps (E. Stuart), Works by. Post 8vo, 1s. ea.; cloth, 1s. 6d. ea.

Beyond the Gates. | An Old Maid's Paradise. | Burglars in Paradise.

Jack the Fisherman. Illustrated by C. W. REED. Crown 8vo, cloth, 1s. 6d.

Phil May's Sketch-Book. Containing 54 Humorous Cartoons. A New Edition. Crown folio, cloth, 2s. 6d.

Phipson (Dr. T. L.).—Famous Violinists and Fine Violins:
Historical Notes, Anecdotes, and Reminiscences. Crown 8vo, cloth, 5s.

Planche (J. R.), Works by.

The Pursuivant of Arms. With Six Plates and 200 Illustrations. Crown 8vo, cloth, 7s. 6d.

Songs and Poems, 1819-1879. With Introduction by Mrs. MACKARNES. Crown 8vo, cloth, 6s.

Plutarch's Lives of Illustrious Men. With Notes and a Life of Plutarch by JOHN and WM. LANGHORNE, and Portraits. Two Vols., demy 8vo, half-bound 10s. 6d.

Poe's (Edgar Allan) Choice Works in Prose and Poetry. With Introduction by CHARLES BAUDELAIRE. Portrait and Facsimiles. Crown 8vo, cloth, 7s. 6d.
The Mystery of Marie Roget, &c. Post 8vo, illustrated boards, 2s.

Pollock (W. H.).—The Charm, and other Drawing-room Plays. By Sir WALTER BESANT and WALTER H. POLLOCK. With 50 Illustrations. Crown 8vo, cloth gilt, 6s.

Pollock (Wilfred).—War and a Wheel: The Græco-Turkish War as Seen from a Bicycle. With a Map. Crown 8vo, picture cover, 1s.

Pope's Poetical Works. Post 8vo, cloth limp, 2s.

Porter (John).—Kingsclere. Edited by BYRON WEBBER. With 19 full-page and many smaller Illustrations. Cheaper Edition. Demy 8vo, cloth, 7s. 6d.

Praed (Mrs. Campbell), Novels by. Post 8vo, illust. bds., 2s. each.
The Romance of a Station. | The Soul of Countess Adrian.

Crown 8vo, cloth, 3s. 6d. each; post 8vo, boards, 2s. each.

Outlaw and Lawbreaker. | Christina Chard. With Frontispiece by W. PAGET.

Mrs. Tregaskiss. With 8 Illustrations by ROBERT SAUBER.

Wulma: An Anglo-Australian Romance. Crown 8vo, cloth, 3s. 6d.

Price (E. C.), Novels by.

Crown 8vo, cloth extra, 3s. 6d. each; post 8vo, illustrated boards, 2s. each.

Valentina.

The Foreigners.

Mrs. Lancaster's Rival.

Gerald. Post 8vo, illustrated boards, 2s.

Princess Olga.—Radna: A Novel. Crown 8vo, cloth extra, 6s.

Proctor (Richard A.), Works by.

- Flowers of the Sky.* With 55 Illustrations. Small crown 8vo, cloth extra, 3s. 6d.
Many Star Lessons. With Star Maps for every Night in the Year. Crown 8vo, cloth, 6s.
Familiar Science Studies. Crown 8vo, cloth extra, 6s.
Saturn and its System. With 13 Steel Plates. Demy 8vo, cloth extra, 10s. 6d.
Mysteries of Time and Space. With numerous Illustrations. Crown 8vo, cloth extra, 6s.
The Universe of Suns, &c. With numerous Illustrations. Crown 8vo, cloth extra, 6s.
Wages and Wants of Science Workers. Crown 8vo, 1s. 6d.

Pryce (Richard).—Miss Maxwell's Affections. Crown 8vo, cloth, with Frontispiece by HAL LUDLOW, 3s. 6d.; post 8vo, illustrated boards, 2s.

Rambosson (J.).—Popular Astronomy. Translated by C. B. FITZMAN. With 10 Coloured Plates and 63 Woodcut Illustrations. Crown 8vo, cloth, 3s. 6d.

Randolph (Col. G.).—Aunt Abigail Dykes. Crown 8vo, cloth, 7s. 6d.

Read (General Meredith).—Historic Studies in Vaud, Berne, and Savoy. With 32 full-page Illustrations. Two Vols., demy 8vo, cloth, 28s.

Reade's (Charles) Novels.

The New Collected LIBRARY EDITION, complete in Seventeen Volumes, set in new long primes type, printed on laid paper, and elegantly bound in cloth, price 3s. 6d. each.

1. Peg Woffington; and Christie Johnstone.
2. Hard Cash.
3. The Cloister and the Hearth. With a Preface by Sir WALTER BESANT.
4. 'It is Never Too Late to Mend.'
5. The Course of True Love Never Did Run Smooth; and Singleheart and Doubleface.
6. The Autobiography of a Thief; Jack of all Trades; A Hero and a Martyr; and The Wandering Hair.

7. Love Me Little, Love Me Long.
8. The Double Marriage.
9. Griffith Gaunt.
10. Foul Play.
11. Put Yourself in His Place.
12. A Terrible Temptation.
13. A Simpleton.
14. A Woman-Hater.
15. The Jilt, and other Stories; and Good Stories of Man and other Animals.
16. A Perilous Secret.
17. Readiana; and Bible Characters.

In Twenty-one Volumes, post 8vo, illustrated boards, 2s. each.

- Peg Woffington.* | Christie Johnstone.
'It is Never Too Late to Mend.'
The Course of True Love Never Did Run Smooth.
The Autobiography of a Thief; Jack of all Trades; and James Lambert.
Love Me Little, Love Me Long.
The Double Marriage.
The Cloister and the Hearth.

- Hard Cash.* | Griffith Gaunt.
Foul Play. | Put Yourself in His Place.
A Terrible Temptation.
A Simpleton. | The Wandering Hair.
A Woman-Hater.
Singleheart and Doubleface.
Good Stories of Man and other Animals.
The Jilt, and other Stories.
A Perilous Secret. | Readiana.

POPULAR EDITIONS, medium 8vo, 6d. each; cloth, 1s. each.

- 'It is Never Too Late to Mend.'* | The Cloister and the Hearth.
Peg Woffington; and Christie Johnstone. | Hard Cash.

'It is Never Too Late to Mend' and The Cloister and the Hearth in One Volume, medium 8vo, cloth, 2s.

Christie Johnstone. With Frontispiece. Choicely printed in Elzevir style. Fcap. 8vo, half-Roxb. 2s. 6d.
Peg Woffington. Choicely printed in Elzevir style. Fcap. 8vo, half-Roxburgh, 2s. 6d.
The Cloister and the Hearth. In Four Vols., post 8vo, with an Introduction by Sir WALTER BESANT, and a Frontispiece to each Vol., buckram, gilt top, 6s. the set.

Bible Characters. Fcap. 8vo, leatherette, 1s.

Selections from the Works of Charles Reade. With an Introduction by Mrs. ALEX. IRELAND. Crown 8vo, buckram, with Portrait, 6s.; CHEAP EDITION, post 8vo, cloth limp, 2s. 6d.

Riddell (Mrs. J. H.), Novels by.

Weird Stories. Crown 8vo, cloth extra, 3s. 6d.; post 8vo, illustrated boards, 2s.

Post 8vo, illustrated boards, 2s. each.

- The Uninhabited House.* | Fairy Water.
The Prince of Wales's Garden Party. | Her Mother's Darling.
The Mystery in Palace Gardens. | The Nun's Curse. | Idle Tales.

Rimmer (Alfred), Works by. Large crown 8vo, cloth, 3s. 6d. each.

Our Old Country Towns. With 54 Illustrations by the Author.
Families Round Eton and Harrow. With 52 Illustrations by the Author.
About England with Dickens. With 52 Illustrations by C. A. VANDERHOOF and A. RIMMER.

Rives (Amelie, Author of 'The Quick or the Dead?'), Works by.

Barbara Daring. Crown 8vo, cloth, 3s. 6d.; post 8vo, picture boards, 2s.
Merial: A Love Story. Crown 8vo, cloth, 3s. 6d.

Robinson Crusoe. By DANIEL DEFOE. With 37 Illustrations by GEORGE CRUIKSHANK. Post 8vo, half-cloth, 2s.; cloth extra, gilt edges, 2s. 6d.

Robinson (F. W.), Novels by.

Women are Strange. Post 8vo, illustrated boards, 2s.
The Hands of Justice. Crown 8vo, cloth extra, 3s. 6d.; post 8vo, illustrated boards, 2s.
The Woman in the Dark. Crown 8vo, cloth, 3s. 6d.; post 8vo, illustrated boards, 2s.

20 CHATTO & WINDUS, Publishers, 111 St. Martin's Lane, London, W.C.

Robinson (Phil), Works by. Crown 8vo, cloth extra, 6s. each.

The Poets' Birds. | The Poets' Beasts.
The Poets and Nature: Reptiles, Fishes, and Insects.

Rochefoucauld's Maxims and Moral Reflections. With Notes and an Introductory Essay by SAINT-BEUVE. Post 8vo, cloth limp, 2s.

Roll of Battle Abbey, The: A List of the Principal Warriors who came from Normandy with William the Conqueror, 1066. Printed in Gold and Colours, 5s.

Rosengarten (A.).—A Handbook of Architectural Styles. Translated by W. COLLETT-SANDARS. With 630 Illustrations. Crown 8vo, cloth extra, 7s. 6d.

Rowley (Hon. Hugh), Works by. Post 8vo, cloth, 2s. 6d. each.

Puniana: Riddles and Jokes. With numerous Illustrations.
More Puniana. Profusely Illustrated.

Runciman (James), Stories by. Post 8vo, bds., 2s. ea.; cl., 2s. 6d. ea.
Skippers & Shellbacks. | Grace Balmalgn's Sweetheart. | Schools & Scholars.

Russell (Dora), Novels by.

A Country Sweetheart. Crown 8vo, cloth, 3s. 6d.; post 8vo, picture boards, 2s.
The Drift of Fate. Crown 8vo, cloth, 3s. 6d.

Russell (Herbert).—True Blue; or, 'The Lass that Loved a Sailor.' Crown 8vo, cloth, 3s. 6d.

Russell (W. Clark), Novels, &c., by.

Crown 8vo, cloth extra, 3s. 6d. each; post 8vo, illustrated boards, 2s. each; cloth limp, 2s. 6d. each.

Round the Galley-Fire.

In the Middle Watch.

On the Fo'k'sle Head.

A Voyage to the Cape.

A Book for the Hammock.

The Mystery of the 'Ocean Star.'

The Romance of Jenny Harlowe.

An Ocean Tragedy.

My Shipmate Louise.

Alone on a Wide Wide Sea.

The Good Ship 'Hohock.'

The Phantom Death.

Is He the Man?

The Convict Ship.

Heart of Oak.

The Tale of the Ten. With 12 Illusts. by G. MONTBARD. | The Last Entry. Frontispiece.

The Ship: Her Story. With numerous Illustrations. Large crown 8vo, cloth, 6s. [Preparing.]

Saint Aubyn (Alan), Novels by.

Crown 8vo, cloth extra, 3s. 6d. each; post 8vo, illustrated boards, 2s. each.

A Fellow of Trinity. With a Note by OLIVER WENDELL HOLMES and a Frontispiece.

The Junior Dean. | The Master of St. Benedict's. | To His Own Master.

Orchard Damaral. | In the Face of the World. | The Tremlett Diamonds.

Fcap. 8vo, cloth boards, 2s. 6d. each.

The Old Maid's Sweetheart.

| Modest Little Sara.

Fortune's Gate. Crown 8vo, cloth, gilt top, 6s.

Saint John (Bayle).—A Levantine Family. A New Edition.

Crown 8vo, cloth, 3s. 6d.

Sala (George A.).—Gaslight and Daylight. Post 8vo, boards, 2s.

Scotland Yard, Past and Present: Experiences of Thirty-seven Years.

By Ex-Chief-Inspector CAVANAGH. Post 8vo, illustrated boards, 2s.; cloth, 2s. 6d.

Secret Out, The: One Thousand Tricks with Cards; with Entertaining Experiments in Drawing-room or 'White' Magic. By W. H. CREMER. With 300 Illustrations. Crown 8vo, cloth extra, 4s. 6d.

Seguin (L. G.), Works by.

The Country of the Passion Play (Oberammergau) and the Highlands of Bavaria. With Map and 27 Illustrations. Crown 8vo, cloth extra, 3s. 6d.

Walks in Algiers. With Two Maps and 16 Illustrations. Crown 8vo, cloth extra, 6s.

Senior (Wm.).—By Stream and Sea. Post 8vo, cloth, 2s. 6d.

Sergeant (Adeline).—Dr. Endicott's Experiment. Cr. 8vo, 3s. 6d.

Shakespeare for Children: Lamb's Tales from Shakespeare.

With Illustrations, coloured and plain, by J. MOYR SMITH. Crown 4to, cloth gilt, 3s. 6d.

Shakespeare the Boy. With Sketches of the Home and School Life, the Games and Sports, the Manners, Customs, and Folk-lore of the Time. By WILLIAM J. ROLFE, Litt. D. With 42 Illustrations. Crown 8vo, cloth gilt, 3s. 6d.

Sharp (William).—Children of To-morrow. Crown 8vo, cloth, 6s.

CHATTO & WINDUS, Publishers, 111 St. Martin's Lane, London, W.C. 21

Shelley's (Percy Bysshe) Complete Works in Verse and Prose.

Edited, Prefaced, and Annotated by R. HERNE SHEPHERD. Five Vols., crown 8vo, cloth, 3s. 6d. each.

Poetical Works, in Three Vols.:

Vol. I. Introduction by the Editor; Posthumous Fragments of Margaret Nicholson; Shelley's Correspondence with Stockdale; The Wandering Jew; Queen Mab, with the Notes; Alastor, and other Poems; Rosalind and Helen; Prometheus Unbound; Adonais, &c.

.. II. Laon and Cythna; The Cenci; Julian and Maddalo; Swellfoot the Tyrant; The Witch of Atlas; Epipsychidion; Hellas.

.. III. Posthumous Poems; The Masque of Anarchy; and other Pieces.

Prose Works, in Two Vols.:

Vol. I. The Two Romances of Zastrozzi and St. Irvyne; the Dublin and Marlow Pamphlets; A Refutation of Deism; Letters to Leigh Hunt, and some Minor Writings and Fragments.

.. II. The Essays; Letters from Abroad; Translations and Fragments, edited by Mrs. SHELLEY. With a Biography of Shelley, and an Index of the Prose Works.

. Also a few copies of a LARGE-PAPER EDITION, 5 vols., cloth, 4s. 12s. 6d.

Sherard (R. H.).—Rogues: A Novel. Crown 8vo, cloth, 1s. 6d.

Sheridan (General P. H.), Personal Memoirs of. With Portraits, Maps, and Facsimiles. Two Vols., demy 8vo, cloth, 24s.

Sheridan's (Richard Brinsley) Complete Works, with Life and Anecdotes. Including his Dramatic Writings, his Works in Prose and Poetry, Translations, Speeches, and Jokes. With 10 Illustrations. Crown 8vo, cloth, 3s. 6d.

The Rivals, The School for Scandal, and other Plays. Post 8vo, half-bound, 2s.

Sheridan's Comedies: The Rivals and The School for Scandal. Edited, with an Introduction and Notes to each Play, and a Biographical Sketch, by BRANDER MATTHEWS. With Illustrations. Demy 8vo, half-parchment, 12s. 6d.

Sidney's (Sir Philip) Complete Poetical Works, including all those in 'Arcadia.' With Portrait, Memorial-Introduction, Notes, &c., by the Rev. A. B. GROSART, D.D. Three Vols., crown 8vo, cloth boards, 3s. 6d. each.

Signboards: Their History, including Anecdotes of Famous Taverns and Remarkable Characters. By JACOB LARWOOD and JOHN CAMDEN HOTTEN. With Coloured Frontispiece and 64 Illustrations. Crown 8vo, cloth extra, 3s. 6d.

Sims (George R.), Works by.

Post 8vo, illustrated boards, 2s. each; cloth limp, 2s. 6d. each.

The Ring o' Bells. Dramas of Life. With 60 Illustrations.

Mary Jane's Memoirs. Memoirs of a Landlady.

Mary Jane Married. My Two Wives.

Tinkletop's Crime. Scenes from the Show.

Zeph: A Circus Story, &c. The Ten Commandments: Stories.

Tales of To-day.

Crown 8vo, picture cover, 2s. each; cloth, 1s. 6d. each.

The Dagonet Reciter and Reader: Being Readings and Recitations in Prose and Verse selected from his own Works by GEORGE R. SIMS.

The Case of George Candlemas. Dagonet Ditties. (From The Referee.)

Rogues and Vagabonds. Crown 8vo, cloth, 3s. 6d.; post 8vo, picture boards, 2s.; cloth limp, 2s. 6d.

How the Poor Live; and Horrible London. With a Frontispiece by F. BARNARD.

Dagonet Abroad. Crown 8vo, cloth, 3s. 6d.; post 8vo, picture boards, 2s.; cloth limp, 2s. 6d.

Dagonet Dramas of the Day. Crown 8vo, 1s.

Once upon a Christmas Time. With 8 Illustrations by CHARLES GREEN, R.I. Crown 8vo, cloth gilt, 3s. 6d. [Shortly.]

Sister Dora: A Biography. By MARGARET LONSDALE. With Four Illustrations. Demy 8vo, picture cover, 4d.; cloth, 6d.

Sketchley (Arthur).—A Match in the Dark. Post 8vo, boards, 2s.

Slang Dictionary (The): Etymological, Historical, and Anecdotal. Crown 8vo, cloth extra, 6s. 6d.

Smart (Hawley), Novels by.

Crown 8vo, cloth 3s. 6d. each; post 8vo, picture boards, 2s. each.

Beatrice and Benedick. Long Odds.

Without Love or Licence. The Master of Rathkelly.

Crown 8vo, cloth, 3s. 6d. each.

The Outsider. A Racing Rubber.

The Plunger. Post 8vo, picture boards, 2s.

Smith (J. Moyr), Works by.

The Prince of Argolis. With 130 Illustrations. Post 8vo, cloth extra, 3s. 6d.

The Wooing of the Water Witch. With numerous Illustrations. Post 8vo, cloth, 6s.

Snazelleparilla. Decanted by G. S. EDWARDS. With Portrait of G. H. SNAZELLE, and 65 Illustrations by C. LYALL. Crown 8vo, cloth, 3s. 6d.

Society in London. Crown 8vo, 1s.; cloth, 1s. 6d.

Society in Paris: The Upper Ten Thousand. A Series of Letters from Count PAUL VASILU to a Young French Diplomat. Crown 8vo, cloth, 6s.

Somerset (Lord Henry).—Songs of Adieu. Small 4to, Jap. vel., 6s.

22 CHATTO & WINDUS, Publishers, 111 St. Martin's Lane, London, W.C.

Spalding (T. A., LL.B.).—Elizabethan Demonology: An Essay on the Belief in the Existence of Devils. Crown 8vo, cloth extra, 5s.

Speight (T. W.), Novels by.

Post 8vo, illustrated boards, 2s. each.

The Mysteries of Haron Dyke.
By Devious Ways, &c.
Hoodwinked; & Sandycroft Mystery.
The Golden Hoop.
Back to Life.

The Lowwater Tragedy.
Burgo's Romance.
Quittance in Full.
A Husband from the Sea.

Post 8vo, cloth limp, 1s. 6d. each.

A Barran Title.

Wife or No Wife?

Crown 8vo, cloth extra, 3s. 6d. each.

A Secret of the Sea. | The Grey Monk. | The Master of Traneece.
A Minion of the Moon: A Romance of the King's Highway.
The Secret of Wyvern Towers.

The Doom of Siva. (THE GENTLEMAN'S ANNUAL for 1898). Demy 8vo, 2s. (New)

Spenser for Children. By M. H. TOWRY. With Coloured Illustrations by WALTER J. MORGAN. Crown 4to, cloth extra, 3s. 6d.

Spettigue (H. H.).—The Heritage of Eve. Crown 8vo, cloth, 6s.

Stafford (John), Novels by.

Doris and I. Crown 8vo, cloth, 3s. 6d.
Carlton Priors. Crown 8vo, cloth, gilt top, 6s.

Starry Heavens (The): A POETICAL BIRTHDAY BOOK. Royal 16mo, cloth extra, 2s. 6d.

Stedman (E. C.), Works by. Crown 8vo, cloth extra, 9s. each. — Victorian Poets. | The Poets of America.

Stephens (Riccardo, M.B.).—The Cruciform Mark: The Strange Story of RICHARD TREGENNA, Bachelor of Medicine (Univ. Edinb.). Crown 8vo, cloth, 3s. 6d.

Sterndale (R. Armitage).—The Afghan Knife: A Novel. Crown 8vo, cloth extra, 3s. 6d.; post 8vo, illustrated boards, 2s.

Stevenson (R. Louis), Works by. Post 8vo, cloth limp, 2s. 6d. ea.

Travels with a Donkey. With a Frontispiece by WALTER CRANE.

An Inland Voyage. With a Frontispiece by WALTER CRANE.

Crown 8vo, buckram, gilt top, 6s. each.

Familiar Studies of Men and Books.

The Silverado Squatters. With Frontispiece by J. D. STRONG.

The Merry Men. | Underwoods: Poems.

Memories and Portraits.

Virginibus Puerisque, and other Papers. | Ballads. | Prince Otto.

Across the Plains, with other Memories and Essays.

Wear of Hermiston.

A Lowden Sabbath Morn. With 27 full-page Illustrations by A. S. BOYD. Fcap 4to, cloth, 6s.

Songs of Travel. Crown 8vo, buckram, 5s.

New Arabian Nights. Crown 8vo, buckram, gilt top, 6s.; post 8vo, illustrated boards, 2s.

The Suicide Club; and The Rajah's Diamond. (From NEW ARABIAN NIGHTS.) With Eight Illustrations by W. J. HENNESSY. Crown 8vo, cloth, 3s. 6d.

The Stevenson Reader: Selections from the Writings of ROBERT LOUIS STEVENSON. Edited by LLOYD OSBOURNE. Post 8vo, cloth, 2s. 6d.; buckram, gilt top, 3s. 6d.

Storey (G. A., A.R.A.).—Sketches from Memory. With nearly 100 Illustrations by the Author. Demy 8vo, cloth, gilt top, 12s. 6d. [Shortly]

Stories from Foreign Novelists. With Notices by HELEN and ALICE ZIMMERN. Crown 8vo, cloth extra, 3s. 6d.; post 8vo, illustrated boards, 2s.

Strange Manuscript (A) Found in a Copper Cylinder. Crown 8vo, cloth extra, with 19 Illustrations by GILBERT GAUL, 5s.; post 8vo, illustrated boards, 2s.

Strange Secrets. Told by PERCY FITZGERALD, CONAN DOYLE, FLOR-ENCE MARRYAT, &c. Post 8vo, illustrated boards, 2s.

Strutt (Joseph).—The Sports and Pastimes of the People of England; including the Rural and Domestic Recreations, May Games, Mummeries, Shows, &c., from the Earliest Period to the Present Time. Edited by WILLIAM HONE. With 140 Illustrations. Crown 8vo, cloth extra, 3s. 6d.

Swift's (Dean) Choice Works, in Prose and Verse. With Memoir, Portrait, and Facsimiles of the Maps in 'Gulliver's Travels.' Crown 8vo, cloth, 3s. 6d.

Gulliver's Travels, and A Tale of a Tub. Post 8vo, half-bound, 2s.

Jonathan Swift: A Study. By J. CHURTON COLLINS. Crown 8vo, cloth extra, 8s.

Swinburne (Algernon C.), Works by.

Selections from the Poetical Works of A. C. Swinburne. Fcap. 8vo 6s.

Atalanta in Calydon. Crown 8vo, 6s.

Chastelard: A Tragedy. Crown 8vo, 7s.

Poems and Ballads. FIRST SERIES. Crown 8vo, or fcap. 8vo, 9s.

Poems and Ballads. SECOND SERIES. Crown 8vo, 9s.

Poems & Ballads. THIRDSERIES. Cr. 8vo, 7s.

Songs before Sunrise. Crown 8vo, 12s. 6d.

Bothwell: A Tragedy. Crown 8vo, 12s. 6d.

Songs of Two Nations. Crown 8vo, 6s.

George Chapman. (See Vol. II. of G. CHAPMAN'S Works.) Crown 8vo, 3s. 6d.

Essays and Studies. Crown 8vo, 12s.

Erechtheus: A Tragedy. Crown 8vo, 6s.

A Note on Charlotte Brontë. Cr. 8vo, 6s.

A Study of Shakespeare. Crown 8vo, 8s.

Songs of the Springtides. Crown 8vo, 6s.

Studies in Song. Crown 8vo, 7s.

Mary Stuart: A Tragedy. Crown 8vo, 8s.

Tristram of Lyonesse. Crown 8vo, 9s.

A Century of Roundels. Small 4to, 8s.

A Midsummer Holiday. Crown 8vo, 7s.

Marino Faliero: A Tragedy. Crown 8vo, 6s.

A Study of Victor Hugo. Crown 8vo, 6s.

Miscellanies. Crown 8vo, 12s.

Loirene: A Tragedy. Crown 8vo, 6s.

A Study of Ben Jonson. Crown 8vo, 7s.

The Sisters: A Tragedy. Crown 8vo, 6s.

Astrophel, &c. Crown 8vo, 7s.

Studies in Prose and Poetry. Cr. 8vo, 9s.

The Tale of Balen. Crown 8vo, 7s.

Syntax's (Dr.) Three Tours: In Search of the Picturesque, in Search of Consolation, and in Search of a Wife. With ROWLANDSON'S Coloured Illustrations, and Life of the Author by J. C. HOTTEN. Crown 8vo, cloth extra, 7s. 6d.

Taine's History of English Literature. Translated by HENRY VAN LAUN. Four Vols., small demy 8vo, cloth boards, 30s.—POPULAR EDITION, Two Vols., large crown 8vo, cloth extra, 15s.

Taylor (Bayard). — Diversions of the Echo Club: Burlesques of Modern Writers. Post 8vo, cloth limp, 2s.

Taylor (Tom). — Historical Dramas. Containing 'Clancarty,' 'Jeanne Darc,' 'Twixt Axe and Crown,' 'The Fool's Revenge,' 'Arkwright's Wife,' 'Anne Boleyn,' 'Plot and Passion.' Crown 8vo, cloth extra, 7s. 6d.
* * * The Plays may also be had separately, at 1s. each.

Temple (Sir Richard, G.C.S.I.). — A Bird's-eye View of Picturesque India. With 32 Illustrations by the Author. Crown 8vo, cloth, gilt top, 6s.

Tennyson (Lord): A Biographical Sketch. By H. J. JENNINGS. Post 8vo, portrait cover, 1s.; cloth, 1s. 6d.

Thackerayana: Notes and Anecdotes. With Coloured Frontispiece and Hundreds of Sketches by WILLIAM MAKEPEACE THACKERAY. Crown 8vo, cloth extra, 3s. 6d.

Thames, A New Pictorial History of the. By A. S. KRAUSSE. With 340 Illustrations. Post 8vo, cloth, 1s. 6d.

Thiers (Adolphe). — History of the Consulate and Empire of France under Napoleon. Translated by D. FORBES CAMPBELL and JOHN STREBBING. With 36 Steel Plates. 12 Vols., demy 8vo, cloth extra, 12s. each.

Thomas (Bertha), Novels by. Cr. 8vo, cl., 3s. 6d. ea.; post 8vo, 2s. ea.
The Violin-Player. | Proud Maids.

Greenida. Post 8vo, illustrated boards, 2s.

Thomson's Seasons, and The Castle of Indolence. With Introduction by ALLAN CUNNINGHAM, and 48 Illustrations. Post 8vo, half-bound, 2s.

Thornbury (Walter), Books by.

The Life and Correspondence of J. M. W. Turner. With Eight Illustrations in Colours and Two Woodcuts. New and Revised Edition. Crown 8vo, cloth, 3s. 6d.

Post 8vo, illustrated boards, 2s. each.

Old Stories Re-told. | Tales for the Marines.

Timbs (John), Works by. Crown 8vo, cloth, 3s. 6d. each.

Clubs and Club Life in London: Anecdotes of its Famous Coffee-houses, Hostels, and Taverns. With 41 Illustrations.

English Eccentricities and Eccentricities: Stories of Delusions, Impostures, Sporting Scenes, Eccentric Artists, Theatrical Folk, &c. With 48 Illustrations.

Transvaal (The). By JOHN DE VILLIERS. With Map. Crown 8vo, 1s.

Trollope (Anthony), Novels by.

Crown 8vo, cloth extra, 3s. 6d. each; post 8vo, illustrated boards, 2s. each.

The Way We Live Now.

Frau Frohmann.

Mr. Scarborough's Family.

The Land-Leaguers.

Post 8vo, illustrated boards, 2s. each.

Kept in the Dark.

The Golden Lion of Granpere.

The American Senator.

John Caldigate.

Marion Fag.

Trollope (Frances E.), Novels by.

Crown 8vo, cloth extra, 3s. 6d. each; post 8vo, illustrated boards, 2s. each.

Like Ships Upon the Sea.

Mabel's Progress.

Anne Furness.

24 CHATTO & WINDUS, Publishers, 111 St. Martin's Lane, London, W.C.

Trollope (T. A.).—Diamond Cut Diamond. Post 8vo, illust. bds., 2s.

Trowbridge (J. T.).—Farnell's Folly. Post 8vo, illust. boards, 2s.

Twain's (Mark) Books.

Crown 8vo, cloth extra, 3s. 6d. each.

The Choice Works of Mark Twain. Revised and Corrected throughout by the Author. With Life, Portrait, and numerous Illustrations.
Roughing It; and The Innocents at Home. With 200 Illustrations by F. A. FRASER.
The American Claimant. With 8 Illustrations by HAL HURST and others.
Tom Sawyer Abroad. With 26 Illustrations by DAN BEARD.
Tom Sawyer, Detective, &c. With Photogravure Portrait.
Pudd'nhead Wilson. With Portrait and Six Illustrations by LOUIS LOEB.
Mark Twain's Library of Humour. With 197 Illustrations by E. W. KEMBLE.

Crown 8vo, cloth extra, 3s. 6d. each; post 8vo, picture boards, 2s. each.

A Tramp Abroad. With 314 Illustrations.
The Innocents Abroad; or, The New Pilgrim's Progress. With 234 Illustrations. (The Two Shilling Edition is entitled Mark Twain's Pleasure Trip.)
The Gilded Age. By MARK TWAIN and C. D. WARNER. With 212 Illustrations.
The Adventures of Tom Sawyer. With 111 Illustrations.
The Prince and the Pauper. With 190 Illustrations.
Life on the Mississippi. With 300 Illustrations.
The Adventures of Huckleberry Finn. With 174 Illustrations by E. W. KEMBLE.
A Yankee at the Court of King Arthur. With 220 Illustrations by DAN BEARD.
The Notion of the White Elephant.
The $1,000,000 Bank-Note.

Mark Twain's Sketches. Post 8vo, illustrated boards, 2s.

Personal Recollections of Joan of Arc. With Twelve Illustrations by F. V. DU MOND.
Crown 8vo, cloth, 6s.

More Tramps Abroad. Crown 8vo, cloth, gilt top, 6s.

Tytler (C. C. Fraser-).—Mistress Judith: A Novel. Crown 8vo, cloth extra, 3s. 6d.; post 8vo, illustrated boards, 2s.

Tytler (Sarah), Novels by.

Crown 8vo, cloth extra, 3s. 6d. each; post 8vo, illustrated boards, 2s. each.

Lady Bell. | Buried Diamonds. | The Blackball Ghosts.

Post 8vo, illustrated boards, 2s. each.

What She Came Through. | The Huguenot Family.
Citoyenne Jacqueline. | Noblesse Oblige.
The Bride's Pass. | Beauty and the Beast.
Saint Mungo's City. | Disappeared.

Crown 8vo, cloth, 3s. 6d. each.

The Macdonald Lass. With Frontispiece.
The Witch-Wife.

Mrs. Carmichael's Goddesses.

Upward (Allen), Novels by.

A Crown of Straw. Crown 8vo, cloth, 6s.

Crown 8vo, cloth, 3s. 6d. each; post 8vo, picture boards, 2s. each.

The Queen Against Owen. | The Prince of Balkistan.

'God Save the Queen!' a Tale of '39. Crown 8vo, decorated cover, 1s; cloth, 2s.

Vashti and Esther. By 'Belle' of The World. Cr. 8vo, cloth, 3s. 6d.

Vizetelly (Ernest A.).—The Scorpion: A Romance of Spain. With a Frontispiece. Crown 8vo, cloth extra, 3s. 6d.

Walford (Edward, M.A.), Works by.

Walford's County Families of the United Kingdom (1899). Containing the Descent, Birth, Marriage, Education, &c., of 12,000 Heads of Families, their Heirs, Offices, Addresses, Clubs, &c. Royal 8vo, cloth gilt, 50s.

Walford's Shilling Peerage (1899). Containing a List of the House of Lords, Scotch and Irish Peers, &c. 32mo, cloth, 1s.

Walford's Shilling Baronetage (1899). Containing a List of the Baronets of the United Kingdom, Biographical Notices, Addresses, &c. 32mo, cloth, 1s.

Walford's Shilling Knighthood (1899). Containing a List of the Knights of the United Kingdom, Biographical Notices, Addresses, &c. 32mo, cloth, 1s.

Walford's Shilling House of Commons (1899). Containing a Complete List of Members of Parliament, their Addresses, Clubs, &c. 32mo, cloth, 1s.

Walford's Complete Peerage, Baronetage, Knighthood, and House of Commons (1899). Royal 32mo, cloth, gilt edges, 5s. [7s.]

CHATTO & WINDUS, Publishers, 111 St. Martin's Lane, London, W.C. 28

Waller (S. E.).—Sebastiani's Secret. With Nine full-page Illustrations by the Author. Crown 8vo, cloth, 6s.

Walton and Cotton's Complete Angler; or, The Contemplative Man's Recreation, by IZAAK WALTON; and Instructions How to Angle, for a Trout or Grayling in a clear Stream, by CHARLES COTTON. With Memoirs and Notes by Sir HARRIS NICOLAS, and 61 Illustrations. Crown 8vo, cloth antique, 7s. 6d.

Walt Whitman, Poems by. Edited, with Introduction, by WILLIAM M. ROSSETTI. With Portrait. Crown 8vo, hand-made paper and buckram, 6s.

Ward (Herbert), Books by.

Five Years with the Congo Cannibals. With 92 Illustrations. Royal 8vo, cloth, 14s.

My Life with Stanley's Rear Guard. With Map. Post 8vo, 1s.; cloth, 1s. 6d.

Warden (Florence).—Joan, the Curate. Crown 8vo, cloth, 3s. 6d.

Warman (Cy).—The Express Messenger, and other Tales of the Rail. Crown 8vo, cloth, 3s. 6d.

Warner (Charles Dudley).—A Roundabout Journey. Crown 8vo, cloth extra, 6s.

Warrant to Execute Charles I. A Facsimile, with the 59 Signatures and Seals. Printed on paper 20 in. by 14 in. 2s.

Warrant to Execute Mary Queen of Scots. A Facsimile, including Queen Elizabeth's Signature and the Great Seal. 2s.

Washington's (George) Rules of Civility Traced to their Sources and Restored by MONCURE D. CONWAY. Fcap. 8vo, Japanese vellum, 2s. 6d.

Wassermann (Lillias) and Aaron Watson.—The Marquis of Carabas. Post 8vo, illustrated boards, 2s.

Weather, How to Foretell the, with the Pocket Spectroscope. By F. W. CORY. With Ten Illustrations. Crown 8vo, 1s.; cloth, 1s. 6d.

Westall (William), Novels by.

Trust-Money. Post 8vo, illustrated boards, 2s.; cloth, 2s. 6d.

Sons of Belial. Crown 8vo, cloth extra, 3s. 6d.

With the Red Eagle; A Romance of the Tyrol. Crown 8vo, cloth, 6s.

A Woman Tempted Him. Crown 8vo, cloth, gilt top, 6s.

Westbury (Atha).—The Shadow of Hilton Fernbrook: A Romance of Maoriland. Crown 8vo, cloth, 3s. 6d.

White (Gilbert).—The Natural History of Selborne. Post 8vo, printed on laid paper and half-bound, 2s.

Williams (W. Mattieu, F.R.A.S.), Works by.

Science in Short Chapters. Crown 8vo, cloth extra, 7s. 6d.

A Simple Treatise on Heat. With Illustrations. Crown 8vo, cloth, 2s. 6d.

The Chemistry of Cookery. Crown 8vo, cloth extra, 6s.

The Chemistry of Iron and Steel Making. Crown 8vo, cloth extra, 9s.

A Vindication of Phrenology. With Portrait and 43 Illusts. Demy 8vo, cloth extra, 12s. 6d.

Williamson (Mrs. F. H.).—A Child Widow. Post 8vo, bds., 2s.

Wills (C. J.), Novels by.

An Easy-going Fellow. Crown 8vo, cloth, 3s. 6d.

His Dead Past. Crown 8vo, cloth, 6s.

Wilson (Dr. Andrew, F.R.S.E.), Works by.

Chapters on Evolution. With 239 Illustrations. Crown 8vo, cloth extra, 7s. 6d.

Leaves from a Naturalist's Note-Book. Post 8vo, cloth limp, 2s. 6d.

Leisure-Time Studies. With Illustrations. Crown 8vo, cloth extra, 6s.

Studies in Life and Sense. With numerous Illustrations. Crown 8vo, cloth extra, 6s.

Common Accidents: How to Treat Them. With Illustrations. Crown 8vo, 1s.; cloth, 1s. 6d.

Glimpses of Nature. With 35 Illustrations. Crown 8vo, cloth extra, 3s. 6d.

Winter (John Strange), Stories by. Post 8vo, illustrated boards, 2s. each; cloth limp, 2s. 6d. each.

Cavalry Life.

| Regimental Legends.

Cavalry Life and Regimental Legends. LIBRARY EDITION, set in new type and handsomely bound. Crown 8vo, cloth, 3s. 6d.

A Soldier's Children. With 34 Illustrations by E. G. THOMSON and E. STUART HARDY. Crown 8vo, cloth extra, 3s. 6d.

Wissmann (Hermann von).—My Second Journey through Equatorial Africa. With 92 Illustrations. Demy 8vo, cloth, 16s.

Wood (H. F.), Detective Stories by. Post 8vo, boards, 2s. each.

The Passenger from Scotland Yard. | The Englishman of the Rue Cain.

26 CHATTO & WINDUS, Publishers, 111 St. Martin's Lane, London, W.C.

Woolley (Celia Parker).—Rachel Armstrong; or, Love and Theology. Post 8vo, illustrated boards, 2s.; cloth, 2s. 6d.

Wright (Thomas, F.S.A.), Works by.

Caricature History of the Georges; or, Annals of the House of Hanover. Compiled from Squibs, Broad-sides, Window Pictures, Lampoons, and Pictorial Caricatures of the Time. With over 300 Illustrations. Crown 8vo, cloth, 3s. 6d.

History of Caricature and of the Grotesque in Art, Literature, Sculpture, and Painting. Illustrated by F. W. FAIRHOLT, F.S.A. Crown 8vo, cloth, 7s. 6d.

Wynman (Margaret).—My Flirtations. With 13 Illustrations by J. BERNARD PARTRIDGE. Post 8vo, cloth limp, 2s.

Yates (Edmund), Novels by. Post 8vo, illustrated boards, 2s. each.
Land at Last. | The Forlorn Hope. | Castaway.

Zangwill (I.).—Ghetto Tragedies. With Three Illustrations by A. S. BOYD. Fcap. 8vo, cloth, 2s. net.

'ZZ' (Louis Zangwill).—A Nineteenth Century Miracle. Cr. 8vo, cloth, 3s. 6d.

Zola (Emile), Novels by. Crown 8vo, cloth extra, 3s. 6d., each.

The Fortune of the Rougons. Edited by ERNEST A. VIZETELLY.

The Abbe Mouret's Transgression. Edited by ERNEST A. VIZETELLY. [Shortly.]

His Excellency (Eugene Rougon). With an Introduction by ERNEST A. VIZETELLY.

The Dram-Shop (L'Assommoir). With Introduction by E. A. VIZETELLY.

The Fat and the Thin. Translated by ERNEST A. VIZETELLY.

Money. Translated by ERNEST A. VIZETELLY.

The Downfall. Translated by E. A. VIZETELLY.

The Dream. Translated by ELIZA CHASE. With Eight Illustrations by JBANNIOT.

Doctor Pascal. Translated by E. A. VIZETELLY. With Portrait of the Author.

Lourdes. Translated by ERNEST A. VIZETELLY.

Roma. Translated by ERNEST A. VIZETELLY.

Paris. Translated by ERNEST A. VIZETELLY.

SOME BOOKS CLASSIFIED IN SERIES.

. For fuller cataloguing, see alphabetical arrangement, pp. 1-26.

The Mayfair Library. Post 8vo, cloth limp, 2s. 6d. per Volume.

A Journey Round My Room. By N. DE MAISTRE.

Translated by HENRY ATTWELL.

Quips and Quiddities. By W. D. ADAMS.

The Agony Column of 'The Times.'

Melancholy Anatomised: Abridgement of BURTON.

Poetical Ingeniousness. By W. T. DOBSON.

The Cupboard Papers. By FIN-BEC.

W. S. Gilbert's Plays. Three Series.

Songs of Irish Wit and Humour.

Animals and their Masters. By Sir A. HELPS.

Social Pressure. By Sir A. HELPS.

Curiosities of Criticism. By H. J. JENNINGS.

The Autocrat of the Breakfast-Table. By OLIVER WENDELL HOLMES.

Pencil and Palette. By R. KEMPT.

Little Essays: from LAMPS LETTERS.

Forensic Anecdotes. By JACOB LARWOOD.

Theatrical Anecdotes. By JACOB LARWOOD.

Witch Stories. By E. LYNN LINTON.

Ourselves. By E. LYNN LINTON.

Pastimes and Players. By R. MACGREGOR.

New Paul and Virginia. By W. H. MALLOCK.

The New Republic. By W. H. MALLOCK.

Fuck on Pegasus. By H. C. PENNELL.

Pegasus Re-saddled. By H. C. PENNELL.

Muses of Mayfair. Edited by H. C. PENNELL.

Thoreau: His Life and Aims. By H. A. PAGE.

Funiana. By Hon. HUGH ROWLEY.

More Funiana. By Hon. HUGH ROWLEY.

The Philosophy of Handwriting.

By Stream and Sea. By WILLIAM SENIOR.

Leaves from a Naturalist's Note-Book. By Dr. ANDREW WILSON.

The Golden Library. Post 8vo, cloth limp, 2s. per Volume.

Diversions of the Echo Club. BYARD TAYLOR.

Songs for Sailors. By W. C. BENNETT.

Lives of the Necromancers. By W. GODWIN.

The Poetical Works of Alexander Pope.

Scenes of Country Life. By EDWARD JESSE.

Tale for a Chimney Corner. By LEIGH HUNT.

The Autocrat of the Breakfast Table. By OLIVER WENDELL HOLMES.

La Mort d'Arthur: Selections from MALLORY.

Provincial Letters of Blaise Pascal.

Maxims and Reflections of Rochefoucauld.

Handy Novels. Fcap. 8vo, cloth boards, 1s. 6d. each.

The Old Maid's Sweetheart. By A. ST. AUBYN.

Modest Little Sara. By ALAN ST. AUBYN.

Seven Sleepers of Ephesus. M. E. COLERIDGE.

Taken from the Enemy. By H. NEWBOLT.

A Lost Soul. By W. L. ALDEN.

Dr. Falliser's Patient. By GRANT ALLEN.

Monte Carlo Stories. By JOAN BARRETT.

Black Spirits and White. By R. A. CRAM.

My Library. Printed on laid paper,

Citation and Examination of William Shakespeare.

By W. S. LANDOR.

The Journal of Maurice de Guerin.

post 8vo, half-Roxburghe, 2s. 6d. each.

Christie Johnstone. By CHARLES READE.

Peg Woffington. By CHARLES READE.

The Dramatic Essays of Charles Lamb.

The Pocket Library. Post 8vo, printed on laid paper and hf.-bd., 2s. each.

The Essays of Elia. By CHARLES LAMB.

Robinson Crusoe. Illustrated by G. CRUIKSHANK.

Whims and Oddities. By THOMAS HOOD.

The Barber's Chair. By DOUGLAS JERROLD.

Gastronomy. By BRILLAT-SAVARIN.

The Epicurean, &c. By THOMAS MOORE.

Leigh Hunt's Essays. Edited by E. OLLIER.

White's Natural History of Selborne.

Gulliver's Travels, &c. By Dean SWIFT.

Plays by RICHARD BRINSLEY SHERIDAN.

Anecdotes of the Clergy. By JACOB LARWOOD.

Thomson's Seasons. Illustrated.

Autocrat of the Breakfast-Table and The Professor at the Breakfast-Table. By O. W. HOLMES.

THE PICCADILLY NOVELS.

LIBRARY EDITIONS OF NOVELS, many Illustrated, crown 8vo, cloth extra, 3s. 6d. each.

By Mrs. ALEXANDER.
A Life Interest | Mona's Choice | By Woman's Wit
By F. M. ALLEN.

By GRANT ALLEN.
Philitia. | Babylon. The Great Taboo.
Strange Stories. Dumaresq's Daughter.
For Mamie's Sake. Duchess of Powysland.
In all Shades. Blood Royal.
The Beckoning Hand. I. Grete's Masterpiece.
The Devil's Dis. The Scallywag.
This Mortal Coil. At Market Value.
The Tents of Shem. Under Sealed Orders.

By MARY ANDERSON.
Othello's Occupation.
By EDWIN L. ARNOLD.
Phra the Phœnician. | Constable of St. Nicholas.

By ROBERT BARR.
In a Steamer Chair. A Woman Intervenes.
From Whose Bourn. Revenge!

By FRANK BARRETT.
The Woman of the Iron Bracelets.
The Harding Scandal. A Missing Witness.

By 'BELLE.'
Vaahiti and Esther.
By Sir W. BESANT and J. RICE.
Ready-Money Mortiboy. By Cella's Arbour.
My Little Girl. Chaplain of the Fleet.
With Harp and Crown. The Seamy Side.
This Son of Vulcan. The Case of Mr. Lucraft.
The Golden Butterfly. In Trafalgar's Bay.
The Monks of Thelama. The Ten Years' Tenant.

By Sir WALTER BESANT.
All Sorts and Condi- The Holy Rose.
tions of Man. Armorial of Lyonsesse.
The Captains' Room. S. Katherine's by Tower
All in a Garden Fair. Verberna. Camellia Ste-Dorothy Forster. phanotis.
Uncle Jack. The Ivory Gate.
World Went Well Then. The Rebel Queen.
Children of Gibeon. Beyond the Dreams of Herr Paulus. Avarice.
For Faith and Freedom. The Master Craftsman.
To Call Her Mine. The City of Refuge.
The Revolt of Man. A Fountain Sealed.
The Bell of St. Paul's. The Charm.

By AMBROSE BIERCE.
In the Mist of Life.
By PAUL BOURGET.
A Living Lie.

By ROBERT BUCHANAN.
Shadow of the Sword. The New Abelard.
A Child of Nature. Matt. | Rachel Dene.
God and the Man. Master of the Mine.
Martyrdom of Madeline. The Heir of Linne.
Love Me for Ever. Woman and the Man.
Annau Water. Red and White Feather.
Foxcove Manor. Lady Kilpatrick.

ROB. BUCHANAN & HY. MURRAY.
The Christlan.
By J. MITCHELL CHAPPLE.
The Minor Chord.

By HALL CAINE.
The Shadow of a Crime. The Deemster.
A Son of Egar.

By ANNE COATES.
Rie's Diary.

By WILKIE COLLINS.
Armada. | After Dark. The Two Destinies.
No Name. | Antonina. The Law and the Lady.
Basil. | Hide and Seek. The Haunted Hotel.
The Dead Secret. The Fallen Leaves.
Queen of Hearts. Jezabel's Daughter.
My Miscellanies. The Black Robe.
The Woman in White. Heart and Science.
The Moonstone. 'I Say No.'
Man and Wife. Little Novels.
Poor Miss Finch. The Evil Genius.
Miss or Mrs. ? The Legacy of Cain.
The New Magdalen. A Rogue's Life.
The Frozen Deep. Blind Love.

By MORT. & FRANCES COLLINS.
Transmigration. From Midnight to Mid-Blacksmith & Scholar. night.
The Village Comedy. You Play me False.

By MACLAREN COBBAN.
The Red Sultan. The Burden of Isabel.
By M. J. COLQUHOUN.
Every Inch a Soldier.

By E. H. COOPER.
Geoffrey Hamilton.
By V. CECIL COTES.
Two Girls on a Barge.

By C. EGBERT CRADDOCK.
His Vanished Star.

By H. N. CRELLIN.
Romances of the Old Seraglio.

By MATT CRIM.
The Adventures of a Fair Rebel.
By S. R. CROCKETT and others.
Tales of Our Coast.

By B. M. CROKER.
Diana Barrington. The Real Lady Hilda.
Proper Pride. Married or Single ?
A Family Likeness. Two Masters.
Pretty Miss Neville. In the Kingdom of Kerry
A Bird of Passage. Interference.
'To Let.' Mr. Jervis. A Third Person.
Village Tales. Beyond the Pale.

By WILLIAM CYPLES.
Hearts of Gold.

By ALPHONSE DAUDET.
The Evangelist; or, Port Salvation.
By H. COLEMAN DAVIDSON.
Mr. Sadler's Daughters.

By ERASMUS DAWSON.
The Fountain of Youth.

By JAMES DE MILLE.
A Castle in Spain.

By J. LEITH DERWENT.
Our Lady of Tears. | Circe's Lovers.

By DICK DONOVAN.
Tracked to Doom. The Mystery of Jamaica Man from Manchester. Terrace.
The Chronicles of Michael Danavitch.

By RICHARD DOWLING.
Old Corcoran's Money.

By A. CONAN DOYLE.
The Firm of Girdlestone.

By S. JEANNETTE DUNCAN.
A Daughter of To-day. | Vernon's Aunt.

By ANNIE EDWARDES.
A Plaster Saint.

By G. S. EDWARDS.
Snazelleparilla.

By G. MANVILLE FENN.
The New Mistress. The Tiger Lily.
Witness to the Dead. The White Virgin.

By PERCY FITZGERALD.—Fatal Zero.
By R. E. FRANCILLON.
One by One.
A Dog and his Shadow. Ropes of Sand.
A Real Queen. Jack Doyle's Daughter.

By HAROLD FREDERIC.
Seth's Brother's Wife. The Lawton Girl.

By PAUL GAULOT.
The Red Shirt.

By CHARLES GIBBON.
Robin Gray. Of High Degree.
The Loving Dream. The Golden Shaft.

By E. GLANVILLE.
The Lost Helms. The Golden Rock.
A Fair Colonist. Tales from the Veld.

By E. J. GOODMAN.
The Fate of Herbert Wayne.

By Rev. S. BAKING GOULD.
Red Spider. | Eve.

THE PICCADILLY (3/6) NOVELS—continued.

By CECIL GRIFFITH.

Jorinthia Marazion.

By SYDNEY GRUNDY.

The Days of his Vanity.

By OWEN HALL.

The Track of a Storm.

By THOMAS HARDY.

Under the Greenwood Tree.

By BRET HARTE.

A Wolf of the Plains.

A Ward of the Golden Gate.

A Sappho of Green Col.

Starbottle's Client.

Busy.

Bell-Ringer of Angels.

Tales of Trail and Town.

By JULIAN HAWTHORNE.

Garth.

Ellice Quentin.

Sebastian Strome.

Fortune's Fool.

By Sir A. HELPS.

By G. A. HENTY.

Rajah the Juggler.

Dorothy's Double.

By JOHN HILL.

The Common Ancestor.

By TIGHE HOPKINS.

Twist Love and Duty.

By Mrs. HUNGERFORD.

Lady Verner's Flight.

The Red-House Mystery.

The Three Carcass.

Professor's Experiment.

A Point of Conscience.

By Mrs. ALFRED HUNT.

The Leadon Casket.

That Other Person.

By C. J. CUTCLIFFE HYNÉ.

Honour of Thieves.

By R. ASHE KING.

A Drawn Game.

By EDMOND LEPELLETIER.

Madame Sans-Gêne.

By ADAM LILBURN.

A Tragedy in Marble.

By HARRY LINDSAY.

Rhoda Roberts.

By HENRY W. LUCY.

Gideon Fleete.

By E. LYNN LINTON.

Patricia Kemball.

Under which Lord?

'My Love!' | Ione.

Sowing the Wind.

By JUSTIN MCCARTHY.

A Fair Saxon.

Linley Rochford.

Dear Lady Disdain.

Camilla.

Waterdale Neighbours.

My Enemy's Daughter.

Miss Misanthrope.

By JUSTIN H. MCCARTHY.

A London Legend.

By GEORGE MACDONALD.

Heather and Snow.

By PAUL & VICTOR MARGUERITTE

The Disaster

By L. T. MEADE.

A Soldier of Fortune.

In an Iron Grip.

Dr. Ramsey's Patient.

By LEONARD MERRICK.

This Stage of Fools.

By BERTRAM MITFORD

The Gun-Runner.

Lackof Gerard Ridgeley.

By J. E. MUDDOCK.

Maid Marian and Robin Hood.

Basile the Jester.

By D. CHRISTIE MURRAY.

A Life's Atonement.

Joseph's Coat.

Coals of Fire.

Old Elaser's Hero.

Val Strange.

A Model Father.

By the Gate of the Sea.

A Bit of Human Nature.

First Person Singular.

Cynic Fortune.

By MURRAY and HERMAN.

The Bishop's Bible.

One Traveller Returns.

By HUME NISBET.

'Ball Up!'

By W. E. NORRIS.

Saint Ann's.

By G. OHNET.

A Weird Gift.

By Mrs. OLIPHANT.

The Sorceress.

By OUIDA.

Held in Bondage.

Strathmore.

Under Two Flags.

Idalia.

Cecil Castelmagne's.

Tricotrin.

Folle Farine.

A Dog of Flanders.

Pascarel.

Princess Napraxine.

Two Wooden Shoes.

By MARGARET A. PAUL.

Gentle and Simple.

By JAMES PAYN.

Lost Sir Masingford.

Less Black than We're

Fainted.

A Confidential Agent.

A Grape from a Thorn.

In Peril and Privation.

The Mystery of Mr.

By Proxy.

The Canon's Ward.

Walter's Word.

High Spirits.

By WILL PAYNE.

Jerry the Dreamer.

By Mrs. CAMPBELL PRAED.

Outlaw and Lawmaker.

Christina Chard.

By E. C. PRICE.

Valentina.

By RICHARD PRYCE.

Miss Maxwell's Affections.

By CHARLES READE.

Peg Woffington; and Christie Johnstone.

Hard Cash.

Cloister & the Hearth.

Never Too Late to Mend

The Course of True

Love Never Did Run

Smooth; and Singleheart and Doubleface.

Autobiography of a Thief.

Jack of all

Trades; A Hero and a Martyr; and The Wandering Heir.

Griffith Giant.

By Mrs. J. H. RIDDELL.

Weird Stories.

By AMELIE RIVES.

Barbara Dering.

By F. W. ROBINSON.

The Hands of Justice.

By HERBERT RUSSELL.

True Elus.

THE PICCADILLY (3/6) NOVELS—continued.

By W. CLARK RUSSELL.
Round the Galley-Fire.
In the Middle Watch.
On the Fo' the Head.
A Voyage to the Cape.
Book for the Hammock.
Mystery of 'Ocean Star'.
The Romance of Jenny Harlowe.
An Ocean Tragedy.

By DORA RUSSELL.
A Country Sweetheart.
By BAYLE ST. JOHN.
A Levantine Family.

By ADELINE SERGEANT.
Dr. Endicott's Experiment.
By HAWLEY SMART.
Without Love or Licence.

The Master of Rathkelly.
Long Odds.
By T. W. SPEIGHT.
A Secret of the Sea.

The Grey Monk.
The Master of Trenchance Towers.
By ALAN ST. AUBYN.
A Fellow of Trinity.

The Junior Dean.
Master of St. Benedict's.
To his Own Master.
By JOHN STAFFORD.—Doris and I.

By RICCARDO STEPHENS.
The Cruciform Mark.
By R. A. STERNDALÉ.
The Afghan Knife.

By R. LOUIS STEVENSON.
The Suicide Club.
By BERTHA THOMAS.
Proud Maids.

By ANTHONY TROLLOPE.
The Way we Live Now.
Frau Frohmann.
By FRANCES E. TROLLOPE.

Like Ships upon the Sea.
By IVAN TURGENIEFF, &c.
Stories from Foreign Novelists.

The Land Leaguers.
Anne Furness.
Mabel's Progress.

By IVAN TURGENIEFF, &c.
Stories from Foreign Novelists.

By MARK TWAIN.
Mark Twain's Choice Works.
Mark Twain's Library of Humour.
The Innocents Abroad.
Roughing It; and The Innocents at Home.
A Tramp Abroad.
The American Claimant.
Adventures of Tom Sawyer.
Tom Sawyer Abroad.

By C. C. FRASER-TYTLER.
Miss Judith.

By SARAH TYTLER.
Buried Diamonds.
The Blackhall Ghosts.
The Macdonald Lass.

By ALLEN UPWARD.
The Queen against Owen.
By E. A. VIZETELLY.
The Scorpion: A Romance of Spain.

By FLORENCE WARDEN.
Joan, the Curate.
By CY WARMAN.
The Express Messenger.

By WILLIAM WESTALL.
Sons of Belial.
By ATHA WESTBURY.
The Shadow of Hilton Fernbrook.

By C. J. WILLS.
An Easy-going Fellow.
By JOHN STRANGE WINTER.
Cavalry Life and Regimental Legends.

A Soldier's Children.
By MARGARET WYNMAN.
My Flirtations.

By E. ZOLA.
The Fortune of the Rougons.
The Abbe Mouret's Transgression.

The Dowry.
The Dream.
Dr. Pascal.
Money.

By Z. Z.
A Nineteenth Century Miracle.

By Z. Z.
A Nineteenth Century Miracle.

CHEAP EDITIONS OF POPULAR NOVELS.

Post 8vo, illustrated boards, 2s. each.

By ARTEMUS WARD.
Artemus Ward Complete.

By EDMOND ABOUT.
The Fellah.

By HAMILTON AIDÉ.
Carr of Carryon.

By Mrs. ALEXANDER.
Maid, Wife, or Widow?

Blind Fate.
Valerie's Fate.

By GRANT ALLEN.
Philistia.

Strange Stories.
For Madame's Sake.

In all Shades of Master.
The Beckoning Hand.

The Devil's Dis.
The Tents of Shem.

The Great Taboo.
By E. LESTER ARNOLD.
Fara the Phœnician.

By FRANK BARRETT.
Fettered for Life.

Little Lady Linton.
Between Life & Death.

Sin of Olga Zassoulou.
Felly Morrison.

Liars, Barnabes.
Honour Davie.

By E. LESTER ARNOLD.
Fara the Phœnician.

By FRANK BARRETT.
Fettered for Life.

Little Lady Linton.
Between Life & Death.

Sin of Olga Zassoulou.
Felly Morrison.

Liars, Barnabes.
Honour Davie.

By E. LESTER ARNOLD.
Fara the Phœnician.

By FRANK BARRETT.
Fettered for Life.

Little Lady Linton.
Between Life & Death.

Sin of Olga Zassoulou.
Felly Morrison.

Liars, Barnabes.
Honour Davie.

By E. LESTER ARNOLD.
Fara the Phœnician.

By FRANK BARRETT.
Fettered for Life.

Little Lady Linton.
Between Life & Death.

Sin of Olga Zassoulou.
Felly Morrison.

Liars, Barnabes.
Honour Davie.

By E. LESTER ARNOLD.
Fara the Phœnician.

By FRANK BARRETT.
Fettered for Life.

Little Lady Linton.
Between Life & Death.

Sin of Olga Zassoulou.
Felly Morrison.

Liars, Barnabes.
Honour Davie.

By E. LESTER ARNOLD.
Fara the Phœnician.

By FRANK BARRETT.
Fettered for Life.

Little Lady Linton.
Between Life & Death.

Sin of Olga Zassoulou.
Felly Morrison.

Liars, Barnabes.
Honour Davie.

By SHELLEY BEAUCHAMP.
Grantley Grange.

By Sir W. BESANT and J. RICE.
Ready Money Mortiboy.

My Little Girl.
With Harp and Crown.

This Son of Vulcan.
The Golden Butterfly.

The Monks of Thelema.
By Sir WALTER BESANT.

All Sorts and Conditions of Men.

The Captains' Room.
All in a Garden Fair.

Dorothy Foster.
Uncle Jack.

The World Went Very Well Then.

Children of Gibson.
Herr Paulus.

For Faith and Freedom.
To Call Her Mine.

By AMBROSE BIERCE.
In the Midst of Life.

By FREDERICK BOYLE.
Camp Notes.

Chronicles of No-man's Savage Life.

By BRET HARTE.
California Stories.

Gabriel Conroy.
Luck of Roaring Camp.

An Heirless of Red Dog.
Ward of Golden Gate.

By BRET HARTE.
California Stories.

Gabriel Conroy.
Luck of Roaring Camp.

An Heirless of Red Dog.
Ward of Golden Gate.

By BRET HARTE.
California Stories.

Gabriel Conroy.
Luck of Roaring Camp.

An Heirless of Red Dog.
Ward of Golden Gate.

By BRET HARTE.
California Stories.

Gabriel Conroy.
Luck of Roaring Camp.

An Heirless of Red Dog.
Ward of Golden Gate.

By BRET HARTE.
California Stories.

Gabriel Conroy.
Luck of Roaring Camp.

An Heirless of Red Dog.
Ward of Golden Gate.

By BRET HARTE.
California Stories.

Gabriel Conroy.
Luck of Roaring Camp.

An Heirless of Red Dog.
Ward of Golden Gate.

By BRET HARTE.
California Stories.

Gabriel Conroy.
Luck of Roaring Camp.

An Heirless of Red Dog.
Ward of Golden Gate.

By BRET HARTE.
California Stories.

Gabriel Conroy.
Luck of Roaring Camp.

An Heirless of Red Dog.
Ward of Golden Gate.

By BRET HARTE.
California Stories.

30 CHATTO & WINDUS, Publishers, 111 St. Martin's Lane, London, W.C.

TWO-SHILLING NOVELS—continued.

By HAROLD BRYDGES.
Uncle Sam at Home.

By ROBERT BUCHANAN.
Shadow of the Sword.
A Child of Nature.
God and the Man.
Love Me for Ever.
Foxglove Manor.
The Master of the Mine.
Annan Water.

By BUCHANAN.
The Martyrdom of Madeline.
The New Abelard.
The Heir of Linne.
Woman and the Man.
Rachel Dene. | Matt.
Lady Kilpatrick.

By BUCHANAN and MURRAY.
The Charlatan.

By HALL CAINE.
The Shadow of a Crime. | The Deemster.
A Son of Bagar.

By Commander CAMERON.
The Cruise of the 'Black Prince'.

By HAYDEN CARRUTH.
The Adventures of Jones.

By AUSTIN CLARE.
For the Love of a Lass.

By Mrs. ARCHER CLIVE.
Paul Ferroll.
Why Paul Ferroll Killed his Wife.

By MACLAREN COBBAN.
The Cure of Souls. | The Red Sultan.

By C. ALLSTON COLLINS.
The Bar Sinister.

By MORT. & FRANCES COLLINS.
Sweet Anne Page.
Transmigration.
From Midnight to Midnight.
A Fight with Fortune.

By WILKIE COLLINS.
Armada. | After Dark.
No Name.
Antonina.
Basil.
Elide and Seek.
The Dead Secret.
Queen of Hearts.
Miss or Mrs.?
The New Magdalen.
The Frozen Deep.
The Law and the Lady.
The Two Destinies.
The Haunted Hotel.
A Rogue's Life.

By M. J. COLQUHOUN.
Every Inch a Soldier.

By DUTTON COOK.
Leo. | Paul Foster's Daughter.

By C. EGBERT CRADDOCK.
The Prophet of the Great Smoky Mountains.

By MATT CRIM.
The Adventures of a Fair Rebel.

By E. M. CROKER.
Pretty Miss Neville.
Diana Harrington.
'To Let.'
A Bird of Passage.
Proper Pride.
A Family Likeness.

By W. CYPLES.
Hearts of Gold.

By ALPHONSE DAUDET.
The Evangelist; or, Port Salvation.

By ERASMUS DAWSON.
The Fountain of Youth.

By JAMES DE MILLE.
A Castle in Spain.

By J. LEITH DERWENT.
Our Lady of Tears. | Circe's Lovers.

By DICK DONOVAN.
The Man-Hunter.
Tracked and Taken.
Caught at Last!
Wanted!
Who Poisoned Hetty Duncan?
Man from Manchester.
A Detective's Triumphs.
The Mystery of Jamaica Terrace.
The Chronicles of Michael Danevitch.

By Mrs. ANNIE EDWARDES.
A Point of Honour. | Archie Lovell.

By M. BETHAM-EDWARDS.
Felicia. | Kitty.

By EDWARD EGGLESTON.
Roxy.

By G. MANVILLE FENN.
The New Mistress. | The Tiger Lily.
Witness to the Deed. | The White Virgin.

By PERCY FITZGERALD.
Bella Donna.
Never Forgotten.
Folly.
Fatal Zero.

By P. FITZGERALD and others.
Strange Secrets.

By ALBANY DE FONBLANQUE.
Filthy Lucre.

By R. E. FRANCILLON.
Olympia.
One by One.
A Real Queen.
Queen Cophetua.

By HAROLD FREDERIC.
Seth's Brother's Wife. | The Lawton Girl.
Prefaced by Sir BARTLE FRERE.
Pandurang Hari.

By EDWARD GARRETT.
The Capel Girls.

By GILBERT GAUL.
A Strange Manuscript.

By CHARLES GIBBON.
Robin Gray.
Fancy Free.
For Lack of Gold.
What will World Say?
In Love and War.
For the King.
In Pastures Green.
Queen of the Meadow.
A Heart's Problem.
The Dead Heart.

By WILLIAM GILBERT.
Dr. Austin's Guests. | The Wizard of the Mountain.
James Duke.

By ERNEST GLANVILLE.
The Lost Heiress. | The Fossicker.
A Fair Colonist.

By Rev. S. BARING GOULD.
Red Spider. | Eve.

By HENRY GREVILLE.
A Noble Woman. | Nikanor.

By CECIL GRIFFITH.
Corinthia Marathon.

By SYDNEY GRUNDY.
The Days of his Vanity.

By JOHN HABBERTON.
Brunton's Bayon. | Country Luck.

By ANDREW HALLIDAY.
Every-day Papers.

By THOMAS HARDY.
Under the Greenwood Tree.

TWO-SHILLING NOVELS—continued.

By JULIAN HAWTHORNE.

Garth.	Beatriz Randolph.
Elise Quentin.	Love—or a Name.
Peruene's Fool.	David Foidexter's Dis-
Miss Godegna.	appearance.
Sebastian Strume.	The Spectre of the Dust.	Camera.

By Sir ARTHUR HELPS.
Ivan de Stron.

By G. A. HENTY.
Rajub the Juggler.

By HENRY HERMAN.
A Leading Lady.

By HEADON HILL.
Zambra the Detective.

By JOHN HILL.
Treason Felony.

By Mrs. CASHEL HOEY.
The Lover's Creed.

By Mrs. GEORGE HOOPER.
The House of Baby.

By Mrs. HUNGERFORD.	The Three Graces.
A Maiden all Florida.	Unsatisfactory Lover.
In Durango Vile.	Lady Patty.
Marvel.	Moss Grains.
A Mental Struggle.	The Professor's Experi-
A Modern Circus.	ment.
Lady Verner's Flight.
The Red House Mystery.

By Mrs. ALFRED HUNT.	Self-Condemed.
Thornicroft's Model.	The Leaden Casket.
That Other Person.

By WM. JAMESON.
My Dead Self.

By HARRIETT JAY.
The Dark Colleen. | Queen of Connaught.

By MARK KERSHAW.
Colonial Fads and Fictions.

By R. ASHE KING.	Passion's Slave.
A Drawn Game.	Bell Barry.
'The Wearing of the Groom.'

By EDMOND LEPELLETIER.
Madame Sans Gene.

By JOHN LEYS.
The Lindsay.

By E. LYNN LINTON.	The Atonement of Leam.
Patricia Kamball.	Dundas.
The World Well Lost.	Rebel of the Family.
Under which Lord?	Sowing the Wind.
Fashion Carav.	The One Too Many.
'My Love!'	Dulcie Everton.
Love.
With a Silken Thread.

By HENRY W. LUCY.
Gideon Fleyce.

By JUSTIN MCCARTHY.	Donna Quixote.
Dear Lady Disdain.	Maid of Athens.
Waterdale Neighbours.	The Comet of a Season.
My Remy's Daughter.	The Dictator.
A Fair Saxon.	Red Diamonds.
Linsley Rockford.	The Riddle King.
Miss Misanthrope.
Camiola.

By HUGH MACCOLL.
Mr. Stranger's Sealed Packet.

By GEORGE MACDONALD.
Heather and Baby.

By AGNES MACDONELL.
Quaker Cousins.

By KATHARINE S. MACQUOID.
The Evil Eye. | Lost Rose.

By W. H. MALLOCK.
A Romance of the Nineteenth Century. | The New Republic.

By J. MASTERMAN.

Half-a-dozen Daughters.

By BRANDER MATTHEWS.
A Secret of the Sea.

By L. T. MEADE.
A Soldier of Fortune.

By LEONARD MERRICK.
The Man who was Good.

By JEAN MIDDLEMASS.
Touch and Go. | Mr. Dorillion.

By Mrs. MOLESWORTH.
Hathercourt Rectory.

By J. E. MUDDOCK.
Stories Weir'd and Wonderful. | From the Bosom of the Deep.

The Dead Man's Secret.

By D. CHRISTIE MURRAY.	A Bit of Human Nature.
A Model Father.	First Person Singular.
Joseph's Coat.	Bob Martin's Little Girl.
Coals of Fire.	Time's Revenges.
Val Strange. Hearts.	A Wasted Crime.
Old Blazer's Hero.	In Direst Peril.
The Way of the World.	Mount Despair.
Cynic Fortune.	A Capful o' Nails.
A Life's Atonement.
By the Gate of the Sea.

By MURRAY and HERMAN.

One Traveller Returns.	The Bishops' Bible.
Paul Jones's Alias.

By HENRY MURRAY.
A Game of Bluff. | A Song of Sixpence.

By HUME NISBET.
'Ball Up!' | Dr. Bernard St. Vincent.

By W. E. NORRIS.
Saint Ann's.

By ALICE O'HANLON.
The Unforeseen. | Chance? or Fate?

By GEORGES OHNET.
Dr. Rameau. | A Weird Gift.

By Mrs. OLIPHANT.
Whiteladies. | The Greatest Heiress in England.

By Mrs. ROBERT O'REILLY.
Phoebe's Fortunes.

By OUIDA.

Held in Bondage.	Two Lit. Wooden Shoes
Strathmore.	Moths.
Chandos.	Simbi.
Idalia.	Pipistrello.
Under Two Flags.	A Village Commune.
Oecil Castlemaine's Gage	Wanda.
Tricotrin.	Othmar.
Fuck.	Frescoes.
Folle Farine.	In Maremma.
A Dog of Flanders.	Guilderooy.
Pascarel.	Syrin.
Signa.	Santa Barbara.
Princess Napraxine.	Two Offenders.
In a Winter City.	Ouida's Wisdom, Wit, and Pathos.
Ariadne.
Friendship.

By MARGARET AGNES PAUL.
Gentle and Simple.

By EDGAR A. POE.
The Mystery of Marie Rogot.

By Mrs. CAMPBELL PRAED.
The Romance of a Station.

The Soul of Countess Adrian.
Outlaw and Lawmaker.

Christina Chard. | Mrs. Tragaskiss.

By E. C. PRICE.
Valentina. | Mrs. Lancaster's Rival.
The Foreigners. | Gerald.

By RICHARD PRYCE.
Miss Maxwell's Affections.

TWO-SHILLING NOVELS—continued.

By JAMES PAYN.

Bentlinck's Tutor.
Murphy's Master.
A Country Family.
At Her Mercy.
Cecil's Trust.
The Clyffards of Clyffe.
The Foster Brothers.
Found Dead.
The Best of Husbands.
Walter's Word.
Halves.
Fallen Fortunes.
Rumorous Stories.
£200 Reward.
A Marine Residence.
Mirk Abbey.
By Proxy.
Under One Roof.
High Spirits.
Carlyon's Year.
From Exile.
For Cash Only.
Kit.
The Canon's Ward.

The Talk of the Town.
Holiday Tasks.
A Perfect Treasure.
What It Cost Her.
A Confidential Agent.
Glow-worm Tales.
The Burnt Million.
Sunny Stories.
Lost Sir Masingberd.
A Woman's Vengeance.
The Family Scapegrace.
Gwendoline's Harvest.
Like Father, Like Son.
Married Beneath Him.
Not Wooded, but Won.
Less Black than We're Painted.
Some Private Views.
A Grape from a Thorn.
The Mystery of Mirbridge.
The Word and the Will.
A Prince of the Blood.
A Trying Patient.

By CHARLES READE.

It is Never Too Late to Mend.
Christie Johnstone.
The Double Marriage.
Put Yourself in His Place.
Love Me Little, Love Me Long.
The Cloister and the Hearth.
The Course of True
Love.
The Jilt.
The Autobiography of a Thief.

A Terrible Temptation.
Foul Play.
The Wandering Heir.
Hard Cash.
Singleheart and Double-
face.
Good Stories of Man and other Animals.
Per Woffington.
Griffith Gaunt.
A Perilous Secret.
A Simpleton.
Rendiana.
A Woman-Hater.

By Mrs. J. H. RIDDELL.

Weird Stories.
Fairy Water.
Her Mother's Darling.
The Prince of Wales's Garden Party.

The Uninhabited House.
The Mystery in Palace Gardens.
The Nun's Curse.
Idle Tales.

By AMELIE RIVES.

Barbara Dering.

The Woman in the Dark

By F. W. ROBINSON.

Women are Strange.

The Hands of Justice.

By JAMES RUNCIMAN.

Skippers and Shellbacks.

Schools and Scholars.

Grace Balmgain's Sweetheart.

By W. CLARK RUSSELL.

Round the Galley Fire.

An Ocean Tragedy.

On the Fo'k'sle Head.

My Shipmate Louise.

In the Middle Watch.

Alone on Wide Wide Sea.

A Voyage to the Cape.

The Good Ship 'Mo-
hock'.

A Book for the Hammock.

The Phantom Death.

The Mystery of the 'Ocean Star'.

Is He the Man
Heart of Oak.

The Romance of Jenny Hariowe.

The Convict Ship.

By DORA RUSSELL.

A Country Sweetheart.

By GEORGE AUGUSTUS SALA.

Gaslight and Daylight.

By GEORGE R. SIMS.

The Ring o' Bella.

Zeph.

Mary Jane's Memoirs.

Memoirs of a Landlady.

Mary Jane Married.

Scenes from the Show.

Tales of To-day.

The 10 Commandments.

Dramas of Life.

Dagonet Abroad.

Finkelstein's Crimes.

Rogues and Vagabonds.

My Two Wives.

By ARTHUR SKETCHLEY.

A Match in the Dark.

By HAWLEY SMART.

Without Love or Licence.

The Pinner.

Beatrice and Benedick.

Long Odds.

The Master of Rathkelly.

By T. W. SPEIGHT.

The Mysteries of Heron

Dyke.

The Golden Hoop.

Hoodwinked.

By Devious Ways.

By ALAN ST. AUBYN.

A Fellow of Trinity.

The Junior Dean.

Master of St. Benedict's

To His Own Master.

By R. A. STERNDAL.

The Afghan Knife.

By R. LOUIS STEVENSON.

New Arabian Nights.

By BERTHA THOMAS.

Cressida.

Proud Malisla.

The Violin-Player.

By WALTER THORNBURY.

Tales for the Marines.

Old Stories Retold.

By T. ADOLPHUS TROLLOPE.

Diamond Cut Diamond.

By F. ELEANOR TROLLOPE.

Like Ships upon the Sea.

By ANTHONY TROLLOPE.

Frau Frohmann.

Marion Fay.

Kept in the Dark.

John Caldigate.

The Way We Live Now.

The Land-Leaguers.

The American Senator.

Mr. Scarborough's

Family.

Golden Lion of Granpere

By J. T. TROWBRIDGE.

Farnell's Folly.

By IVAN TURGENIEFF, &c.

Stories from Foreign Novelists.

By MARK TWAIN.

A Pleasure Trip on the Life on the Mississippi.

Continent.

The Prince and the

The Gilded Age.

Pauper.

Buckleberry Pinn.

A Yankee at the Court

Mark Twain's Sketches.

of King Arthur

Tom Sawyer.

The £1,000,000 Bank-

A Tramp Abroad.

Note.

Stolen White Elephant.

By C. C. FRASER-TYTLER.

Mistress Judith.

By SARAH TYTLER.

The Bride's Pass.

The Huguenot Family.

Buried Diamonds.

The Blackhall Ghosts.

St. Mungo's City.

What She Came Through

Lady Bell.

Beauty and the Beast.

Noblesse Oblige.

Citoyenne Jacqueline.

Disappeared.

By ALLEN UPWARD.

The Queen against Owen.

Prince of Balkistan.

God Save the Queen!

By AARON WATSON and LILLIAS

WASSERMANN.

The Marquis of Carabas.

By WILLIAM WESTALL.

Trust-Money.

By Mrs. F. H. WILLIAMSON.

A Child Widow.

By J. S. WINTER.

Cavalry Life.

Regimental Legends.

By H. F. WOOD.

The Passenger from Scotland Yard.

The Englishman of the Rue Cain.

By CELIA PARKER WOOLLEY.

Rachel Armstrong; or, Love and Theology.

By EDMUND YATES.

The Forlorn Hope.

Castaway.

Land at Last.

By I. ZANGWILL.

Ghetto Tragedies.

3 2044 044 499 90

THE BORROWER WILL BE CHARGED AN OVERDUE FEE IF THIS BOOK IS NOT RETURNED TO THE LIBRARY ON OR BEFORE THE LAST DATE STAMPED BELOW. NON-RECEIPT OF OVERDUE NOTICES DOES NOT EXEMPT THE BORROWER FROM OVERDUE FEES.

DN OF 5/21

WIDENER
CANCELLED
JUL - 8 1988
JUL 14 1988
2719458
DN OF 7-8-88
632
2719458

WIDENER
CANCELLED
JUN 20 1983
SEP 19 1991
7876446

WIDENER
CANCELLED
SEP 19 1997
1661803
155172

WIDENER
CANCELLED
DEC 10 1996
OCT 6 1997
BOOK DUE WIDENER

